Outwitting Wicked Wolf.

"Oh, won't somebody come and help
Two frightened little rabbits?
There's close at hand a wicked wolf
Of most fe-ro-cious habits.

Now, I hope you remember where we left off in the last story, but in case you don't, I'll just remind you. As the two little rabbits were listening to the graphophone, all of a sudden, Mr. Wicked Wolf crept through the window, so frightening the graphophone that it gave a loud squeak.

Then, what do you suppose brave little Jack Rabbit did? Why, he took down from the wall a dreadfully big mirror and stood it up right in front of that terrible beast.

Thinking there was another wolf in the room, Mr. Wicked Wolf asked: "How did you get in" but of course the wolf in the mirror didn't answer.

"Look here!" growled that old beast. "I got in first, but as long as you are here you can have the old gentleman rabbit—he's old and tough. I'm going to eat the little tender one."

Now you'll think it strange when I tell you that neither Little Jack Rabbit or Uncle Lucky heard the old wolf and I'm mighty glad the old gentleman rabbit didn't, for he would have been dreadfully angry at being called "old and tough," and now I suppose you are wondering why they didn't hear what this wicked wolf said. I'll explain in a whisper so he won't hear. They had both hopped softly out of the house while the wicked wolf was talking to himself—I mean to the wolf in the looking glass.

By and by, Mr. Wicked Wolf grew tired of talking to somebody who wouldn't talk back and, raising his paw, he slapped the wolf in the mirror. Crash! went the glass, cutting his foot, and with a dreadful growl he limped away of three legs, back to his den in the Shady Forest.

But the little rabbits didn't return for a long time. No, sirreebus. They feared he might be hiding in the china closet or behind the sofa or under the table, or maybe in the Old Grandfather clock.

I don't believe they would have come home that night if Little Miss Mouse hadn't come to the barn to tell them that Mr. Wicked Wolf had gone home.

Then, while she baked a lovely deep apple pie, Little Jack Rabbit hopped down to the village for three ice cream cones and they all had a scrumptious feast. You see, the two little rabbits didn't forget Little Miss Mouse, for it would have been mighty unpleasant to stay out in the barn all night, for an old owl lived in the loft and tooted at night. And now we must wait for the next story to hear what happened after that.

TONIGHT'S CITY MEETING.

According to the estimates which have been submitted to the citizens for action at the adjourned annual city meeting tonight there is a tax of 20 1-2 mills called for if the various amounts are voted for the several departments as recommended.

Certain of those estimates are bound to be approved. They involve expenditures which have got to be made. There are obligations which the city cannot postpone or escape.

There are some of the estimates which do not come under the head of necessary departmental expenditures. The last common council believed them desirable. It remains for the citizens to express their views themselves and to say what they think about them in view of the taxation that is involved.

The items which are appended to the estimates as extras are those which have not received the endorsement of the council. But they represent expenditures which citizens have asked for and the council has referred them to the citizens without recommendation for such action as they wish to take.

Taxation is one of the subjects that comes in for much discussion throughout the year, especially if it involves a boost in the grand list and on top of that a jump in the tax rate. It is well to bear in mind that it is at the city meeting that the expenditures for the coming year are determined and on the basis of such expenditures the tax rate is fixed.

It is therefore of the utmost importance that the taxpayers, directly or indirectly, should give heed to the matters involved at tonight's meeting, no matter at this time how remote that may be from the time to be expected to arrive to mention any public affairs—and let it be known at the meeting rather than later through unfounded criticism, what the real desire is of those who are of all interested.

The citizens have spoken at the polls and now they should let it be known what their views are regarding where and how their money should be spent, and at the same time let it be known what they consider wise expenditures and what unwarranted otherwise. It is too important a matter to leave to a few.

OUR WASTED WATERPOWER.

While on his way to Boston to attend the graduation of his son, Thomas A. Edison was impressed by the waterpower that was going to waste in the Berkshires. This appealed to him so strongly that he made mention of it when he got to Springfield, saying: "I noticed there are numerous streams flowing down the Berkshire hills which would be valuable for power. It is an outrage that all this good power is going to waste."

The same thought that came to the mind of the electrical wizard is that which has caused others to take the same attitude and to lift up their voices against the vast wastage of natural resources.

It is not solely in the Berkshires but throughout New England that there is to be noted a similar disregard for the great amount of white coal that is going to waste every day because of the failure of those who are in possession of it or those who are thoroughly familiar with it to undertake development.

New England is rich in water privileges. Its numerous streams are capable of extensive development. In the past quarter of a century there have been established numerous hydro-electric plants for the utilization of this cheap power but the surface has only been scratched.

No section of the country is any more in need of cheaper power, or cheaper fuel than New England, and yet there is open disregard for the opportunities right at our very doors. It is very much like the traveler who went all over the world and, then in getting back to New England decided that some of the greatest attractions were to be found right at home.

GUARDING NATIONAL PARKS.

Attention is being called at this time by a body of men under the name of National Parks committee to the fact that the commercialization of the national parks of this country can be permitted by one man and urging, for the proper safeguarding of these natural beauty spots, that necessary legislation to change this situation be adopted.

Care is taken to explain that no suspicion rests upon the good intentions and the high purposes of the present secretary of the interior in whose hands this authority is vested. It is, however, for the future that the committee would legislate and it is prompted to take this stand because of the attitude which other secretaries of the interior have displayed.

Plainly this is a case of guarding against a possibility. It is always possible to hold different views in regard to national parks. Nothing should be higher in the mind of a secretary of the interior than the preservation of such places for the benefit of coming generations, but the item of commercialization gets its consideration and once there is an fire. There might be times when certain steps could be sanctioned without doing any harm whatever. At the same time where an exercise more be made it would be impossible to overcome the damage.

Should there be approved any plan that would spoil the parks it could be expected that it would result in a howl from all sections of the country, provided it was known in time for such a protest to amount to anything. The purpose of the National Parks committee is to eliminate the possibility of something being put through on the quiet. It wants the care of the parks placed in the hands of congress that lumbering, mining and timber cutting schemes for private gain at public expense may be fully guarded against. It shows the right kind of interest in our great public parks.

CROSSING DANGERS.

Enough grade crossing accidents and fatalities have occurred so that most everyone is acquainted with the horror of such affairs. The various degrees of carelessness that are manifested at such points are sufficient to establish the fact that in a great majority of such cases those accidents are preventable, and yet they occur because of the unwillingness to take the simple precautions to insure safety.

In most instances automobiles are involved and the situation is the same as that which prevails when there are crashes on the highway because of cutting in, passing on a curve or at the brow of a hill. Every auto driver knows that the rules of the road are being violated when such chances are taken and yet they persist in disregarding the rules for no good reason, and in doing so invariably involve others as well as themselves in trouble.

When the general manager of the New Haven road directs the chief of the company's police service to detail men for service at crossings on the system an effort is being made to direct the attention of the highway users to their own failure to properly protect themselves.

Just how much good will result from this determination to "improve the highway traveler with the feet that the railroad company is not solely responsible for his safety and that it is his duty to exercise all due diligence for his own protection at such points" is problematical. It may be a waste of effort and it may accomplish the very thing that is intended.

Needless to say it is action that can be commended. Those who pay no attention to the dangerous crossings and those who even disregard the protective efforts of the crossing tenders are too numerous. If they can be brought to a realization of their peril before they become involved in a painful experience or worse the effort will be well worth the time and expense involved.

THE OVERTHROW IN SERRANIA

Because the overthrow means wholesale changes and because it was accomplished without serious trouble, thought in regard to it is directed, as to what it is going to mean and whether the new regime is going to satisfy those who, until without any doubt, than the one it has displaced.

Since it was demonstrated on the grounds of the elections three years ago that the grandees were in control and Stambulsky was placed in charge of the ministry various improvements have been gained relative to that government. There has been a disposition to rule rightly and to settle down to peaceful pursuits. There was the abolition of the army and a determination to punish those responsible for the country going into the war.

Dissatisfaction has resulted among those army leaders since the decision to dispense with the army and there have been considerable elements that have been causing no small amount of trouble. But in the new ministry it is interesting to note, in spite of the pessimistic view taken in some countries, that there is no communistic representation and that the indications are that it is for peace rather than militarism.

The overthrow is a serious blow to the agrarians, who are numerous and in some instances desirous of effecting a revolution. For the purpose of preventing another conflagration in the Balkans, outside influences may be brought to bear to quell revolutionary institutions. The new government has a hard test before it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The man on the corner says: Which do you prefer, short skirts or short sleeves?

It is on the crowdedest roads that some drivers insist on getting ahead of everyone else.

Many soon-to-be graduates are already listening for that much desired knock from opportunity.

Germany may think France is hard to please but France knows that Germany doesn't intend to please.

If it only cooled it off to talk about the hot weather how easy it would be to put a check on the torrid days.

Remember the adjourned annual city meeting tonight. Let it be known how you feel about city expenditures and taxes.

There were only 31 who reported incomes of a million or over for 1931 but that doesn't restrict others from trying for such a goal.

The man on the corner says: One of the day's aggravations is to read an interesting item and find that it happened "fifty years ago."

The Thames and Gales Ferry are not made famous by the annual boat races but they certainly get a lot of valuable publicity out of them.

As a stockholder of the city you cannot afford to stay away from the city meeting when there's the promise of pushing high taxes higher.

New England hotel men are expecting a good summer season. There's nothing like being optimistic in the face of an unpromising start.

The automobilist finds that he cannot have the much desired good roads without encountering occasionally the much disliked detour signs.

Those who have tried out the detour while the Laurel Hill avenue pavement is being laid have found that it was never planned for a speedway.

COMING OUT

"I got your card the other day," burst out the serious-eyed young man sitting on the old stone wall as he hurled a baseball at the fender of his smart little sports car standing by the roadside. "So you're making your debut next week, are you?"

"Aren't you coming?" demanded the cute little thing who sat on the wall beside him, kicking her heels against the rough stone. "You sound queer, Hendricks! The folks are giving me just the best blowout ever and you ought to see my dress—got it this summer in Paris!"

"I've seen Paris dresses," objected the serious young man gloomily. "And I've attended other coming-out parties. They're no treat, Amaryllis! I don't suppose you'll ever have time any more for this sort of thing, will you? Miss Binks, the charming daughter of the Helpus B. Binkses, motored fifty miles over the worst roads out of Chicago through the prettiest part of the country and had a grand time sitting on an old stone wall eating hasselputa. Miss Binks was accompanied by Hendricks Rutherford Betts, the rising young lawyer who should have known enough to be attending to his job in his office instead of cutting work for the pleasure of Miss Bink's society. She missed three teas."

"No, they've got you now, Amaryllis, and here's where we might as well say 'Blessed-to-have-met-chu-good-by!'"

"You really sound as though you meant it," the cute little thing declared after surveying him a moment. "Nothing is going to stop me from climbing into old clothes and going out on these country jaunts! Unless you don't ask me to go any more!"

"You know a lot, but you don't know much," the serious young man informed her still more gloomily. "When you have forty-eight hours' worth of engagements to be crowded into twelve hours you are going to have a load of time to do as you choose, Amaryllis! It's going to be perfectly easy to say to your parent, 'No, mother, I haven't time to go to the tea where I'll meet the Count De Fiddlesticks because I'm going driving with Hendricks!'"

"Oh, I see," she said, pulling long stalks of the tall grass and twisting them. "You don't want me to know other men and go around with them——"

"Nothing of the sort!" the serious young man told her violently and getting red. "The reason our friendship has been so perfect and has lasted all these years is that neither of us has made any demands on the other! You're free——"

"Of course I'm perfectly free! And so are you, Hendricks! Why, I didn't think a single thing of it when we passed you three weeks ago Sunday with that hatchet-faced Gribbs girl in your car——"

"I wanted to tell you about that. She was calling next door and they phoned that her mother was ill and I was taking my car out at that moment."

"Oh, so that was it!" said the cute little thing with a tiny sigh of relief. "Not that it mattered in the least! I—I didn't think so much of most of the men I met abroad, Hendricks, either!"

"Well, it's what's left after most are discarded that I worry about," said the young man before he caught himself. "I want you to get the right man and be terribly happy and—and everything like that! If you were like most girls—but you'll have your pick of 'em after your party, exactly that!"

"Do you actually think so, Hendricks?" demanded the cute little thing, grabbing his arm in her enthusiasm.

His hand automatically closed over hers as it clutched him and he said nothing. With a shake of her head she got rid of her little felt hat and the breeze fluffed out her bobbed hair, now growing discreetly longer but still rebellious against pins. "What's wrong, Hendricks?" she asked finally.

When he turned and looked at her there was something in her clear eyes he had never found before, but he set his jaw. Only it was no use.

"Oh, it will be so many years before I'll have money enough to give you what so many other fellows can give you now!" he burst out violently. "How can I ask you to give up all this fuss and start out in a two-room-kitchenette and three new dresses a year? To see you going away from me when I love you so——"

"I don't seem to be traveling very fast in that direction, though, do I, Hendricks?", the cute young thing pointed out to him as she edged along very close to him and shamelessly laid her fluffy head directly on his shoulder. "Oh, you darned idiot!"

"Well," said the happy young man some moments later when it had been made clear to him that he was engaged to be married, "go ahead and have your old debut party! It sounds well, but it doesn't mean a thing, now!"—Exchange.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Edward P. Bailey, who today succeeds Albert D. Lasker as chairman of the United States shipping board, first comes into public prominence as vice president of the Emergency Fleet corporation. The new chairman was born in Madison, Wis., and was educated in private and public schools and at the University of Wisconsin. In 1909 he located in Chicago as head of a firm of ship brokers and marine insurance agents. In 1917 he was called to Washington to become vice president of the Emergency Fleet corporation in charge of liquidation and served in that capacity until last August. Since then he has devoted his time to the affairs of several large manufacturing companies and other industrial enterprises in which he is heavily interested. Mr. Bailey is said to be in full accord with the policy of the administration for the maintenance of an American merchant marine.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Belize, or British Honduras.

Belize, which officially is British Honduras, has a revolution, according to press dispatches.

To those who know Belize this is like the report of a volcanic eruption in New York or a blizzard in Death Valley. A bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society tells why.

"Set down in the midst of a group of republics in which revolutions have been at least not infrequent for the century of their existence," says the Bulletin, "Belize's bid to fame has been that it was 100 per cent. revolutionless. Although it is one of the least known and most neglected patches of the British empire, still British law and order hovered over it, and it has been to a certain extent, like the Dutch West Indian colony of Curacao, an asylum for alien leaders who were more revolutionary than successful.

"The country's 45,000 inhabitants include probably less than 1,000 whites. The remainder of the population is made up of negroes and mulattoes and Spanish Indians, the latter living chiefly in the back country. But the capital, Belize, throughout the whole coast country, and wherever governmental machinery has been set up, the atmosphere, whether it be made up of business, government, or sport, is unmistakably British.

"Few concessions have been made to the climate. The two and three-story houses that line the main residence street of Belize are of accepted British architecture. Coal-black policemen are clothed much like the London 'Bobby,' and bewigged and begowned judges sit in the courts. In the open spaces cricket matches will often be found in progress, and base ball games are favored by the boisterous pronouncing negroes, to the cockfights of their Latinized neighbors.

"Geographic names tell of the sudden transition from the lands of Spanish culture to this little patch of the Spanish Main that has been Anglicized. One leaves Puerto Cortez, Honduras, or Puerto Barrios, Guatemala, to sail a few miles farther on past the Coxcomb mountains, All Pines, and Stann reek. Inland are Middlesex and Orange Walk. Belize is one of the few exceptions, and even that is said to be a corruption of the surname of an early Scotch settler, Wallis. Direct English nomenclature reaches its apex in Belize where the ferry is called 'the hand-cart.'

"British Honduras, a trifle larger than Massachusetts or New Jersey, is wedged in between the Mexican states of the Yucatan peninsula on the north and Guatemala on the west and south, while Honduras, Nicaragua, Salvador and Costa Rica are nearby. It is due west of Jamaica, some 600 miles across the Caribbean, and has always been to a certain extent under the wing of that British island.

"The mahogany industry is justly commemorated on the flag of British Honduras by the representation there of the tools of the trade. Mahogany lured early settlers to Belize; put money in their purses; furnished something for them and their backer, Great Britain, to fight the Spaniards about; and has always been chiefly responsible for the land's main industry, lumbering.

"The people of the colony even tell solemnly how the lowest portions of the city of Belize, once a seemingly bottomless swamp, have been filled in and made usable by the millions of mahogany chips hacked there from logs which must be roughly squared before they are ready for market. Assisting the chips in the work of stabilization—they tell with equal solemnity—were the thousands of empty rum bottles thrown aside by the "British Honduras came under the British flag largely through the well-known 'squatters' rights', grown to international stature. Spain claimed the entire 'Main', or mainland, from the time of the earliest explorers. But she was interested chiefly in gold and silver; mere trees seemed beneath notice. So British and other adventurers who cut timber on the eastern coast of Yucatan, the present British Honduras, and the mosquito country, farther south, were not molested at first.

"When the settlers were seen to be making a good thing of their mahogany trade, the Spanish changed their policy and began harassing them. A series of wars and treaties between Spain and Great Britain followed. In 1786 the Spanish made a supreme effort to drive what they considered the squatters' out of Belize. But the settlers, with a cannon mounted on rafts and flat-boats, had the best of the strategic situation and won a signal victory. From that time the British claim to the territory rested on conquest as well as settlement. In 1823 the 'settlement' was declared a 'colony' and was given a lieutenant governor acting under the governor of Jamaica. In 1834 it was made a separate crown colony.

"Belize, like the other countries along the east side of Central America, has a low-lying region along the coast with highlands farther inland. Its dense tropical forests have discouraged agriculture. Growth is so rapid that it is a task of the utmost difficulty to keep trails open. Most travel is along rivers, and little is known of the interior away from the streams. The one important exception is the southern region tapped by the only railroad, along which thousands of acres of bananas plantations have been established to supply a part of the market in the United States. Down the rivers millions of dollars worth of mahogany and log-wood have been floated during the life of the colony. In late years tens of thousands of bales of chicle, the raw material of chewing gum, have joined keep busy the restless jaws of America.

"For this outflow to America there is an inflow not wholly confined to money and goods. Some British leaders complain that the colony is becoming 'Americanized.' Newspapers and magazines from the United States far outnumber those from England. American agents gain much business in competition with the more leisurely methods of the British; and a number of representatives of the younger generation, going to America for their education, tend on their return to look to America for their intellectual leadership. The official money unit of the colony is the American gold dollar."

Stories That Recall Others

Bulgaria's Taxes

The peasants are now firmly established in power in Bulgaria and legislative bodies in both state and provincial, in which their representatives are in the majority, are engaged in transferring the burden of taxation to the shoulders of the despised city folk.

The district council of Roustchouk, has evolved the following taxes which it styles "American".

For carrying a parasol, 50 levas, (nominally worth 19 cents each), yearly; for wearing skirts more than 11 inches above the ground, or silk stockings, 500 levas, or wearing gloves between April 15 and Sept. 15 without a doctor's certificate, 200 levas; for wearing jewelry, 300 levas; for keeping pet dogs, 500 levas; for use of walking canes by persons less than 50 years old in good health, 160 levas, for wearing shoes with tops exceeding 11 inches in heights, 200 levas; for wearing fur tippets or muffs, 500 levas, and for using a baby carriage in cities, 200 levas—Kansas City Star.

I have had nine bottles and now I am well."—Mrs. JENNY EVANS, 1604 Lafayette Blvd., Detroit, Michigan.

If you are suffering from displacements, irregularities, backache, nervousness or other forms of female weakness, you should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Tiolac brought me perfect health when I was afraid I could never get well. Three years ago I had an operation and from that day I could hardly eat enough to keep alive. What I did take broke down around in the pit of my stomach. The pressure from gas caused my heart to palpitate until I was frightened, and lack of sleep almost ended making a wreck of me.

"Tiolac gave me the surprise of my life. My strength returned until I was better than ever, the stomach troubles and heart palpitation left at the same time and now I eat three hot meals a day and sleep all night long. Tiolac hasn't an equal."

HUMAN BONES FOUND IN FIRE MAY BE CLUE IN TIBBETTS MYSTERY

Pieces of bones, which Dr. N. E. Lewis of this city declares are from a human skeleton, were found Sunday by Elijah Abel, health officer of Bozrah, in the ashes of a bonfire on a farm about four or five miles from the home of William Tibbetts, who disappeared from his farm on April 10 and has never been seen since.

Not a button or a scrap of clothing to aid in any identification were found among the ashes of the fire, but officers went to work on the case on the theory that the bones were part of the body of the missing Plainville farmer. If they are human bones and are not the bones of Tibbetts, they present a new mystery for the Bozrah and state officers to say whose bones they are.

The find was made on what is called the Sherman Lewis farm which is now owned by John Starr Sullivan and is on a grass-road which leads to Goshen from the main Norwich to Colchester highway.

Small parts of the orbit of the skull, a piece of the jaw without teeth, and the rounded end of the femur that fits into the socket in the pelvis bone were what Mr. Abel scraped out of ashes of the fire and turned over to Coroner J. J. Desmond, who had Dr. Lewis take charge of them to determine if they were human bones. Dr. Lewis, who was acting as medical examiner for Dr. C. C. Glidemeleeve because the latter is out of town until Wednesday, said Monday night that he was convinced these were human bones and that the rounded ends of the femur and the pelvis bone were the most significant in establishing the fact that the bones had come from a human skeleton.

Dr. Lewis said they had evidently been through a very hot fire and it was his opinion that it was not so long ago that they had been burned.

The spot where the fire was kindled seems like an unlikely one to be chosen by any one seeking concealment while disposing of a human body by burning it. It is in a lot now used as a pasture and in plain sight of the road through a bar way with not a tree or bush or anything else to hide the smoke. The blaze could not be seen from the road, however, as the fire was kindled behind a sort of breastwork of rocks piled about 3 1-2 feet high which had been piled in some remote time when the corner of the farm cleared this field.

Another peculiar thing is the comparatively small quantity of ashes if a whole human body were burned here. But Mr. Abel accounts for this by the theory that the body of Tibbetts had probably been dismembered so that it could be disposed of in several places by fire or in other ways so as to make it as difficult as possible to pick up any trail.

Buckwheat Straw Trail.

A trail of buckwheat straw led from the barway back to and around the pile of rocks and was one of the things that seemed significant to Mr. Abel that this was no ordinary bonfire when he first came to look at it. It is his theory that the body or parts of it were carried there wrapped up in buckwheat straw, which was then used to light the blaze.

The authorities had not been able up to Monday night to follow up any lead that the trail of buckwheat straw might give them.

John Starr Sullivan, owner of the farm, which is in the town of Lebanon, but over the Colchester road, was first to notice the pile of ashes near the rock over two weeks ago. He pastures his cattle in this lot, which contains two old, deserted stoned-up cellars close by this pile of rocks. Sullivan got to thinking about the bonfire ashes which he had seen and mentioned them to Health Officer Abel, who he knew had devoted many hours to running down every possible clue that had been offered in the Tibbetts mystery. They went together to the place Sunday afternoon and Abel raked over the ashes, being rewarded by finding the small fragments of bone. He also collected the buckwheat straw in a bag and reported his find to Coroner J. J. Desmond, taking the bones to him.

Later Sunday Mr. Abel again visited the place with County Detective W. H. Jackson and Constable Jeremiah Sweeney. They went all over the ground again and discovered in one of the cellars the carcass of a collie dog which had been covered with brush and fence rails so as to conceal it. The dog was a good sized collie of a rather light color, with a white tip to its tail, and had evidently been dead some time. The officers are making efforts to find anyone who has lost a collie dog recently.

Dragged Two Wells.

Two old wells, covered with cellar stones, were found near the cellar walls, and it was decided it might be worth while to drag these in hopes that they might yield something.

Monday afternoon Officers Jackson and Abel, with Constable Sweeney, made another visit to the place where the ashes of the fire were found. This time they were provided with some grappling hooks belonging to Mr. Abel, the same kind which the Fitchville blacksmith has been busy making ever since the Tibbetts mystery started. Both the wells were dragged by the officers, but nothing was found.

One of the points that Mr. Abel has picked up since finding the bones is that a Lebanon woman who was passing along this road on May 29 in the daytime saw a man hiding behind one of the trees a short distance from the pile of rocks where the ashes were found. She can give no description of the man.

Clairvoyants in Case.

While the Tibbetts mystery has rather dropped out of sight for the last few weeks, there has been persistent search going on in some quarters and this has turned toward an effort to locate his body in water.

A number of men have been dragging the streams at different places, but all without result.

On Sunday a clairvoyant was at the Fitchville pond with Richard Tibbetts, brother of the missing man. He dragged the pond at points suggested by the clairvoyant, but the results of his efforts were like all the others.

It is stated that another clairvoyant has added a new clue in the mystery by saying that the body of Tibbetts is in the Yantic river but that when it is found it will be after it has been through fire.

"THE GREATEST HUMAN GIFT" Y. M. C. A. SHOP MEETING TOPIC

At noon Monday under Y. M. C. A. auspices Rev. C. H. Ricketts delivered another impressive address to the employees of the Richmond Radiator plant. The topic was "The Greatest Human Gift" and the speaker among other things said:

"The greatest gift that comes to the world through human channels is the little child. He is never to be measured by any ordinary standard. To estimate his value in terms of gold, silver, or precious jewels is a sheer act of injustice. As most of our churches observed yesterday as Children's Sunday, it is perfectly natural for us to take up the challenge they make to us.

Isn't it time to re-value a child as an asset in the social life of a nation? Whether a nation is strong or weak depends upon its men. Money of course, is important, but you must first have real men before you can get real money. A nation always has its strong men before it becomes a creditor nation. And therefore it goes without saying that if it is to maintain its strength it must never be wanting in the high quality of its men. To keep the quota of strong men full there must be the right kind of childhood.

If one will glance at colonial America he will find that money was secondary to real men. The people had few dollars but they had large families, but those families were of such quality that, though poor, they were able to establish the strongest republic that has yet existed. The man was more important than his money. Are we today reversing the process and putting the main emphasis on the dollar? Today we are having the dollars and not the children. As a cold matter of fact the best families are not multiplying anywhere nearly so fast as the undesirables. Just what do I mean by these terms? I do not apply the term necessarily to those who have a great family name, learning, wealth and social position, but to those who are physically, mentally bright and morally straight. The undesirables are those who are bodily diseased, mentally twisted and morally depraved. Dire poverty is not the best condition for child nurture. The child of an abused, over-worked and underfed woman is handicapped from birth in his struggle for existence.

We all know that good blood tells—it tells in the lower animals and fully as much so in men. If a good pedigree adds to the value of a horse, why not to a man? "How much more is a man worth than a sheep, or a dove?" There are doubtless thousands upon thousands of good women of all nationalities who "like some Rachel in her woe" agonize in their hearts, and hence these words apply only to those who consciously practice birth-control because they are too cowardly to face life's duties, or because the bearing and rearing of children interfere with selfish pleasures and social activities.

I am not here advocating the extremely large family. There ought to be no mere children than can be well-educated. At the present high cost of living it is better to have four or five children who by birth and training can be made fit to survive, than a brood of ten or twelve most of whom must be doomed to a life of non-entity. Ninety per cent. of all our leaders are those whose parents were [illegible]

EXHIBITION OF MINIATURES AT ART STUDENTS' ANNUAL

The annual meeting of the Norwich Art Students' Association was held in the Converse Art Gallery on Monday evening, the president, Mrs. Channing M. Huntington, presiding. Reports of the secretary, the treasurer, and the standing committee were given, all of which showed that the association has made great progress not only in membership but also in promoting greater interest in art and things beautiful.

The report of the nominating committee, Mrs. Frank Hempstead, chairman, resulted in the election of the following officers:

President, Mrs. W. Tyler Browne; vice president, Mrs. Robert W. Perkins; secretary, Miss Ina Ufford; assistant secretary, Miss Amanda Fisher; treasurer, Mrs. Fred K. Sudlow; chairman of committee on admission, Miss Alice M. Crandall; program committee, Mrs. Leonard P. Church, chairman; docent committee, Mrs. Frederick T. Sayles, chairman; social committee, Miss Nelle Loring, chairman; press committee, Miss Helen Lathrop Perkins, chairman; auditor, Frank Hempstead.

Norwich owes much to the Art Students' Association for the various exhibitions it has shown in the Converse Art Gallery. Not the least important is that seen Monday evening, a collection of miniatures from American Society of Miniature Painters, one's first thought of a miniature is that of a portrait, but here are found in this beautiful medium of expression also landscape, still life, genre and the nude. Nor is the art of the miniature limited to that used in the early nineteenth century. The revival of miniature painting in America is a hopeful sign of an extended interest in art. In this collection notable examples are the following: "William J. Whiddemore's "Mrs. Maynard" and "Little Eleanor" express in a charming manner what might be called rythm in art. Alice Beckington has a charming "Little Girl in Yellow," whose pensive look and demure clasped hands are very appealing. In William J. Buer's "Aurelle" and "Phoebe" is found an interpretation of lovely maidenhood. "Gray and Gold" by Mabel R. Welch, reveals the personality of the artist in depicting the things she sees. Maria J. Steern's "Virginia Wallace" brings out a perfect harmony between the little face and the crisp dress. There is nothing merely accessory in this charming miniature. Splendor of color and texture, and general pictorial effect are shown in "Fire and Ashes" by Laura Coombs Hills. A remarkable example of harmony of color is shown in "The Red Cloak" by Isaac A. Josephi, the first president of the society. Another successful composition in design and color is Elsie Dodge Patten's "Black Fan." The sharp and sweeping lines of the "Fan" are in contrast with the decorative beauty of line and sparing in her "Builder." In "Sirene" and "Isabel" by Sherman Potts are seen telling composition joined to a capable and attractive realism. Bessie Dix Becker's "Miss Hoyt," shows great beauty of texture while the "Old Bonnett" has a quaint pignant charm.

There are only a few of the 71 miniatures in the collection all of which are well worth careful study. Among the other artists represented may be mentioned Lucia Fairchild Fuller, Lucy M. Stanton, Katherine S. Myrick, Lydia E. Longacre, Harry L. Johnson, Margaret Foote Hawley, Helen W. Durkee, Jean Arnot Reed, Clara Howard, Carlotta St. Gaudens, Mary Coleman Allen, Sally Cross, and Annie Hurlbut Jackson.

This exhibition is open to the public this afternoon and Wednesday afternoon and it would be very gratifying to the Art Association if a large number availed themselves of this unusual opportunity to see this rare collection.

Refreshments were served during the evening by the social committee with Miss Mary Huntington Paddock in charge.

The room was very attractive with decorations of garden flowers.

The trophy committee of the Danielson Rod and Gun club will meet this week to perfect plans for the shoot scheduled for the Fourth. The Memorial day shoot was so very successful and aroused so much interest and enthusiasm that it likely will be duplicated on the Fourth. The shoot likely will be an all-day affair and there will be prizes for those making the best scores. The shooting grounds of the club are very popular with a number of members who go their regular for practice work at the targets.

Joint graduation exercises of all the eighth grades in the town of Killingly will be held Thursday afternoon of this week in the town hall. Last year the exercises were more on the order of a musical festival than graduation exercises, but this year the program for the events of the afternoon show that there will be exercises as well as music and a class will presentation of diplomas. Eighth grade pupils from the Danielson school, from Attawaugan, Ballouville, East Killingly, Dayville, Goodyear, the Center, and other school of the town will receive diplomas, which are to be presented Chairman F. E. Cunneen of the town school committee.

The exercises are to be open to the public and are deserving of a large attendance, especially by those who are interested in educational work as well as in the pupils.

Twenty prisoners are being held at the county jail in Brooklyn these fair June days, at least that was the number there Monday, though it varies from week to week. And there is plent for them to do. This season about 15 acres of the jail farm has planted with corn and four additional acres with potatoes. In addition there are fields of small vegetables of various kinds of it so happens that there is a lot of hoeing to be done just now, so the prisoners do not find time hanging heavily on their hands, but have plenty to do.

Monday morning at 7 o'clock at St. church, Miss Yvonne Lacas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Lacas of Broad street, and Rudolph Mioure of Putnam were united in marriage by Rev. A. E. Auger, cousin of the groom, of Winchendon, Mass., Father Auger also being celebrant of the nuptial mass at which there was a large attendance of relatives and friends. A the church service a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. John Roux, M. S., and Rev. Father Auger being among the guests.

The bride wore a blue traveling suit with gray for neckpiece and a gray hat. The witnesses of the marriage were Mr. Lacas, father of the bride, and August Martin of Putnam.

Mr. and Mrs. Mioure left during the day for their wedding trip, which will take them into the Berkshires. Upon their return they will make their home in Putnam. The bride received many beautiful gifts.

Jeremiah Hopkins, hale and hearty and full of vitality, came to town Monday on furlough from the Soldiers' home at Bristol and many were the handclasps and happy greetings with which he was received during the day. Mr. Hopkins is 83 years of age, a veteran of the Civil war, but his activities and alertness belie his year. He formerly was a resident of Danielson and has a great many friends in Danielson who are always pleased to welcome him.

The local committee for the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam expect to pack 'em in Friday night at the series of boxing bouts to be staged here in the interest of the fund. There is not only widespread interest in boxing to warrant this forecast but also the special incentive to help a worthy cause. This boxing event seem certain to net several hundred dollars for the home fund and will help Danielson's other activities along the same line, assuring that the final returns from this territory will be large and something of which the community may be proud.

There was a session of the town court Monday morning, Judge W. Fenner Woodward presiding, at which two men from the Daniel's Village section of the town, above Ballouville, were charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. The arrest of the men followed complaints received by officers that disturbances were going on regularly in

PUTNAM

The housing problem for such of the strikers' families as care to remain in Putnam after being evicted from tenements of the Manhattan Manufacturing company has been solved. Oliver Christian, strike director, said Monday morning. Mr. Christian said that vacant tenements in the village of the Adams Manufacturing company in the northerly section of the city will be used through an arrangements that has just been completed. There is a sufficient number of vacant tenements there to meet all needs of families to be evicted, Mr. Christian said.

It so happens that the tenements are vacant at this time because of the fact that the Adams Manufacturing company is engaged in extensive overhauling of one of the old mills of the Nightingale-Morse company, from which corporation the mill and village were taken over late last year, and that an addition is being built and will have to be equipped before the Adams company, now located at North Scituate, R. I., can begin operations here, probably in the fall.

Other families that are involved in the Manhasset strike are leaving this city, workers in them having obtained employment in mills in Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Mr. Christian said Monday that fully half the strikers have found work elsewhere.

Outwardly there was no change in the situation during Monday—no concessions offered by either side and full confidence that none will be. The mill is going along rebuilding its working organization as rapidly as possible and the strikers holding out as steadfastly as at any time. The strikers' main hope now is that the mill company will eventually be forced to capitulate, but there is no sign of this, as the number of workers at the plant is increasing from week to week.

A sidelight on this important industrial difficulty, which rounds out full five weeks of existence today, is the attitude of the stockholders toward the situation. The stockholders are a unit in their opposition to the strike. They are obtaining no dividends and the prospect of them for some time to come is diminished by the strike. There are many stockholders hereabouts. Their money is invested toward the making of what is one of the most important industries of the city and they are not at all partial to the existence of a situation that is hampering the company to regain a strong financial position after the trying period through which the concern has passed during the past two years. One hears no word of sympathy for the strikers from the stockholders. Their hope is that the mill company may be able to rebuild its organization as rapidly as possible and let the strike die a natural death.

Monday was Field day at the Howe Manor school for young ladies in Thompson, this event bringing the introductory part of the two-day program arranged for the closing exercises of the school.

Selectman James Bacon, who is in New Jersey much of the time engaged with business interests, was at his home in town over the week end.

Shortage of rents in Danielson is being seized upon by some avaricious landlords as an excuse for increase charges all out of proportion to service rendered and, incidentally, fully as much out of proportion with the assessed valuations of the properties, a matter that may interest the assessors. From time to time someone steps forward to mention some particular thing the world needs. At the present time something that Danielson needs is about a hundred new rents—to stop the raiding of tenants beyond their ability to pay. But there isn't going to be that many new rents this year because building costs are too high.

POETRY

THE BALLAD BY PROSE AND RHYME

Which one reads and which one likes and how.

It was a number fine (a December snow,
When the April flowers sweet, and the roses are pale,—
There is place and enough for the pains of prose;
But whenever a scent from the white thorn blows,
And the jessamine-stars at the casement climb,
And a dimpled face at the lattice shows,
Then hey! for the ripple of laughing rhyme!

When the brain gets dry as an empty nut,
When the reason stands on its topmost toes,
When the mind (like a beard) has a "formal cut"—
There is place and enough for the pains of prose;
But whenever the May-blood stirs and glows,
And the young year draws to the "golden prime,"
And Sir Romeo sticks in his ear a rose,
Then hey! for the ripple of laughing rhyme!

In a theme where the thoughts have pendant-strum,
In a changing quarrel of "Ayes" and "Noes,"
In a searched procession of "If" and "But,"
There is place and enough for the pains of prose;
But whenever a soft glance softer grows,
And the light heart dance to the trysting time,
And the secret is told "that no one knows"—
Then hey! for the ripple of laughing rhyme!

ENVOY.

In the work-a-day world—for its needs and woes,
There is place and enough for the pains of prose;
But whenever the May-bells clash and chime,
Then hey! for the ripple of laughing rhyme!

THE WHIP-POOR-WILL.

We traveled through the soundless night
And breathed the fragrant June.
Tumultuous fragrance flooded bright
With an unwaning moon;
Till from the whitened field the wood
Rose dark along the hill—
And there with sudden joy we stood
To hear thee, whip-poor-will!

O Bird, O Wonder! Long and high
The measured question came!
I marvel, till thy perfect cry
Almost too perfect fails.

What art thou singing voice divine,
Heart of the poignant night?
What utter loneliness is thine,
Of suffering or delight?
Delight too lovely all but pain,
Would thy frail spirit pour?
Would sorrow, in thy perfect strain,
Be joy forevermore?

Then hadst no answer but the song—
Clear as the soft June light,
Sweet as the fragrant earth, and long
As that immortal night.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 11.—The body of Mrs. Louis Caminiski, aged about 30 years, wife of Louis Caminiski, of No. 96 Potter street, who disappeared nearly three weeks ago, with her four year old daughter, was found floating in Winthrop's Cove this evening, where the woman undoubtedly destroyed herself and also her child. The body of the child was not recovered, but it will probably be found near where the body of the mother came to the water's surface or within the harbor in a day or two, for there is little doubt but that the mother leaped into the cove and bearing her baby with her.

The body of Mrs. Caminiski was found near the trestle of the Central Vermont railroad, when Perry Moriarty, observed it from his power boat. Moriarty caused his boat to go alongside the body of the woman, which was made fast to the craft and then towed to the shore, where, after it was examined by Acting Medical Examiner Ross E. Black, it was removed to an undertaking establishment. The features and fingers of the woman had been eaten away by fish, but otherwise the body was in a good state of preservation.

Acquaintances of Mrs. Caminiski from the time that she disappeared, May 20th, have advanced the reason for her sudden departure and the taking of the baby with her, that she intended to end her existence and that when her body was found it would be revealed that she had ended her life and that of her child, although they could advance no other reason for their theory other than the fact that she endeavored to induce her two older children, boys, to accompany her, but the youths refused.

When the woman disappeared she resided at No. 171 North Bank street, but recently the husband and two remaining children removed to the Potter street residence.

Medical Examiner Harold H. Hover is confined to his home on Colt street by illness, not however, of a serious nature.

The strike of approximately fifty journeymen plumbers, which started last Monday because of the masters refusing to sign one of the clauses in the new working agreement after having granted all the other requests, including an increase in wages, from 50 cents to $1 an hour, was settled last night when the committee representing the strikers agreed to eliminate the clause, which had been the bone of contention and with this agreed upon, both the masters and the journeymen representatives affixed their signatures to the document. The clause, which had brought about the strike because of the insistence of the journeymen that it be embodied in the agreement, although it never had been before, was that the masters be compelled to notify the journeymen the night before a day when the services of the journeymen would not be required and that if the services of the employes was not to be needed in an afternoon that the workers must be notified by 11 a. m. of the same day or else the journeymen should receive compensation for a half day.

Mrs. Alice Hupt, the recently appointed police woman, made her initial report to City Manager James H. Barlow today, following the return to New London of the city manager from Washington where he had spent a week in attendance at the Shriners' convention. The report of the investigations conducted by Mrs. Hunt, are known only to City Manager Barlow, who this afternoon, when inquiry was made of him as to what had comprised her activities, stated that he had not had the time to peruse the report thoroughly and therefore was not familiar with the nature of the work that she had performed, but probably would by within a day or two.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford station at Groton was entered by thieves Saturday night, but no booty was obtained, the ticket rack being undisturbed and there not being any money in the place for the thieves to take away for Ticket Agent Lester C. Phillips took the receipts to his home when the station was closed Saturday evening. Entrance to the station was made by forcing a window and was discovered by Western Union Telegraph Company lineman Sunday morning.

Sherman S. Gay and Miss Anale L. Kingman, both of Groton, were married Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. S. F. Ashcraft of Quaker Hill. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Joseph R. Elder in the presence of relatives and intimate acquaintances of the contracting couple.

The funeral of Mrs. Jeanne Buddington, widow of Stephen Buddington occurred at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at her late home, No. 118 Monument street, Groton. The services were conducted by Rev. Latham, George O. Miner and Charles W. Allyn. Interment was in Starr cemetery, Groton.

Edward V. Reilly of Albany, N. Y., and Miss Agnes E. Carr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Carr of Garfield avenue, were married at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church this morning at 9 o'clock, the nuptials mass being solemnized by Rev. Edward T. Reilly of Worcester, Mass., where he is rector of St. Joseph's church, and an uncle of the bridegroom. The mass was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends of the couple. John Walter Carr, brother of the bride, was best man and Miss Katherine T. Lally of Meriden, cousin of the bride was maid of honor. The bride wore a gown of hand embroidered panion crepe over pussy willow taffeta, with hat of white trimmed with birds of paradise, and carried a shower bouquet of Aaron Ward roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Lally was attired in a gown of yellow canton crepe with georgette and bead trimming and wore a hat of yellow georgette. She carried a bouquet of orchid colored sweetpeas. The ushers were Donald Corcoran, a student at Baltimore Dental college and William Buckley, pursuing studies at Maine university.

Since John Bernaki, aged four years, of No. 322 Main street, was admitted to Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital last night, following being struck by an automobile, operated by Hiram Tarbox of Pawcatuck, on Main street earlier in the day, it has been revealed that the child is suffering from concussion of the brain and his condition is considered serious.

Assessor Frederic C. Burrows and Mrs. Burrows have returned to their home on Darrow street after having made a brief visit with relatives in New Rochelle, N. Y.

Joseph Soltz, president of the Soltz Company, who has been confined to his home on Huntington street several days by illness, was able to attend to business today.

Coach Ed Leader of the Yale crews, now training on the Thames river for their annual races with Harvard on the 22nd inst., was arrested this forenoon by Traffic Officer Braxton Hill, charged with violation of the automobile law and will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow forenoon. The specific charge against the Yale coach is operating his automobile with defective brakes. Leader's machine collided with a truck of the Thomas Transfer Company at the corner of State and Bank streets this morning when Leader could not avoid the collision because the brakes of his car would not hold.

A. C. Burr of No. 785 Bank street, complained to the police today that while his automobile was parked at the corner of Montauk avenue and Bank street Saturday evening, a thief entered the car and stole a kit of tools and an auto clock.

New London is putting on its gala attire for the mammoth street parade that New London lodge of Elks will stage next Thursday in connection with the organization's Flag day exercises. Many of the merchants on State and Bank streets have caused the fronts of their stores to be decorated with American flags and bunting as have some of the hotels.

It developed tonight the the thieves who burglarized the residence of Thornton N. M. Lathrop of No. 495 Montauk avenue Saturday when they removed a screen from one of the windows and passed through the opening, made considerable of a haul, but they will probably not be able to convert the plunder into cash because the nature of the valuables obtained would not permit this being easily done. In a search of the house tonight Mr. Lathrop discovered that a metal strong box that had been kept in one of the sleeping chambers was missing.

The box contained five bank books, one showing deposits in the Brevoort Savings Bank of New York, two in the Mariners Savings Bank of New London and two in the Savings Bank of New London; a life insurance policy on the life of Mr. Lathrop and with Mrs. Lathrop made the beneficiary and issued by the New York Mutual Life Insurance company; black leather jewel case, velvet lined, and containing old trinklets and old coins; gentlemen's gold ring with plain black onyx setting; solid gold gentleman's locket bearing the initials "T. N. M. L." plain silver mesh bag chain handle and with powder puk top; lady's gold watch, originally of the hunting case type, but with the front case removed and bearing the initials "C. L."

The funeral of Daniel F. Sullivan, son of John Sullivan of No. 40 Warren street, whose death occurred in New York of spinal meningitis several days ago, was held this morning at 8:45 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by a large number of friends and relatives. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Alexander Wellschlaeger. The bearers were Charles Cahey, Michael Kelley, James Murray, Jacob Cohen, George Moriarty and Wallace Bailey. Included among the mourners was a delegation of members of Nameaug Engine company and a representative of the New York World staff, Mr. Sullivan having been a member of New York Typographical union. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Funeral services for Mrs. Susan H. Godfrey, wife of George H. Godfrey, were held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at her former home No. 8 Williams street and was attended by a large number of relatives. Rev. Chester H. Rowe, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated. Relatives of Mrs. Godfrey acted as bearers. Burial was in Elm Grove cemetery, Mystic.

Mrs. Rosa Curtiss, colored, widow of William H. Curtiss, a former well known janitor of public buildings and churches here, died this morning at her home, No. 397 Vauxhall street, death ending a lingering illness. Mrs. Curtiss was about 70 years and is survived by two sons, William H. Curtiss and Eugene L. Curtiss.

Ida Stanlina, aged nine years, of Shaw street, who sustained a fractured skull by falling from a porch while playing at the home of a companion on Bank street several weeks ago, was discharged at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital today. Other patients discharged were Angelo Giugerella of Westerly, Mrs. Alex McCullough of Post Hill place, Mrs. William Spicer of Waller street, Mrs. Irving Bauer and son of Crocker street, Mrs. Harry June and daughter of Colman street and Mrs. Etta Powers of Bank street.

James O'Neill, son of the former actor, James O'Neill, who has been seriously ill at a private hospital three weeks, was able to return to his apartment at the Hotel Mohican this afternoon.

The estate of James H. Hill has sold a house and lot on Franklin street to Cyril A. and Maude A. Hamilton.

Percy G. Eggleston, executor and trustee of the will of Arthur H. Eggleston, has sold a house and lot on Willetta avenue to Archibald S. MacFarlane.

City Manager James E. Barlow resumed his duties at the municipal building today after having been absent from the city a week, being in attendance at the Shriners' convention at Washington.

An automobile, owned by Capt. Edward Y. Haskill of No. 21 Bellevue place, was damaged Sunday afternoon when it was rammed on Ocean avenue by an automobile, owned and operated by Clyde L. Latham, of R. F. D. No. 7, Norwich. Capt. Haskill's automobile was parked on Ocean avenue near the corner of Sherman street, when the Norwich car struck it from the rear and caused considerable damage to the Haskill machine.

There were not as many automobile accidents in this city last Sunday as usual, whether because the newspapers have warned operators of their danger or whether the autoists are more than ordinarily careful. Herman Tarbox of Westerly was arrested when he ran down a child on Main street, putting the youngster in the hospital with concussion of the brain. Tarbox had no operating license but pretended that he supposed his companion in the car possessed one. The car was borrowed, so the offense was more aggravated than if otherwise would have been. Tarbox was fined $10.

John H. Brennan of Chicopee was arrested for reckless driving on Federal street. He has an attorney and the latter asked that the case should be continued. It was put over a week.

Clayton Greenleaf, employed by the G. M. Long Company as a truck driver, was fined $10 for operating a one-ton Ford with defective brakes. He admitted that he was aware of the defect and that he had notified his employers, who told him to do the best he could with the machine.

Tony Grimaldi and Andre Pedra each paid a fine of $10 in the police court this forenoon for an encounter they had on the 27th of May. Tony accused Andre of owing him $47 while the latter said he did not owe Toney anything. The men quarrelled and Tony sustained a smashed head—not one that was badly smashed, but one that made him yell as an abused person. The men both acknowledged that they struck each other and as both were fined neither of them could claim that he got the best of the battle. The facts were puzzling to the court after all the testimony had been elicited and it required two hours to tell the story.

Roswell F. Wilkinson of Stonington was fined $100 today in North Stonington by Justice Thames F. Morton of Waterford for operating an auto while intoxicated. It is understood that the courts are disposed to treat the operation of autos by persons under the influence of liquor as the serious offense it is.

Some means must be found for the regulation of automobiles at Ocean beach or there will be a crash that will be heard throughout the state. At present the parking space is not nearly sufficient for the number of machines that go to the beach and as a result there are many close calls to collisions. Police Sergeant Hick is understood to have some plans to present to the city authorities that will minimize the danger. He will present them to the management of police affairs to take them and act on them or reject them.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

Day's total sales, 687,300 shares.
Twenty industrials averaged $1.32 net gain .13. High 1933; low 92.77.
Twenty railroads averaged 94.51, net decline .41. High 1933; low 94.13.

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR.

New York, June 11.—Uninterrupted bear selling and profit taking important considerable irregularity to today's stock market which was again featured by the active buying of railroad shares, particularly the low-priced carriers.

Two of the most important developments of the day were the heavy oversubscription of the $35,000,000 portion of the Austrian loan offered in this country, and Lord Curzon's suggestion to the French that they accept the latest German reparations offer as a basis of negotiations. Wall Street bankers are confidently expecting an early solution of the reparations problem.

Further reports that oil production was still exceeding consumption had a depressing effect o nthe oil shares. General Asphalt dropped nearly three points to 70 1-2, a new low record, and then rallied to 81. California Petroleum was depressed to 106 3-8 but a squeezing of the shorts sent it back to 109 1-4 where it was up nearly a point on the day. Sinclair, Houston and Condon also were forced down a point or more but they made partial recovery later, the net losses being reduced to fractions.

Just before the close heavy profit taking set in in New York Central, Atchison and Reading, all of which closed at net losses of a point or more.

Baldwin and American Locomotives also were offered freely, each losing about a point. Shippings were heavy all day. American Ship & Commerce and American International Corporation established new low records.

There were several strong spots in the industrial group, notably General Electric which advanced 6 3-8 points, and Woolworth which soared 8 1-4.

Southern Railway was one of the most active of the carrier issues, touching a new top at 27 1-4 on transactions of well over 50,000 shares. Norfolk & Western was bought on expectation of another one per cent. extra dividend. Philadelphia company is expected to go on a $4 dividend basis tomorrow.

Call money opened at 4 3-4 per cent., advanced to 5 and then to 5 1-2 where it closed. The time money market was dull with bankers asking 5 and brokers offering 4 3-4 for all maturities.

The success of the Austrian loans here and in London and the more favorable outlook for a settlement of the German reparations problem had a favorable effect on foreign exchange rates. Demand sterling advanced nearly 1-4 of a cent to $4.61 3-16 and French francs advanced four points to 6.46 cents. German marks rallied slightly to .0023 3-8 cents.

BOND MARKET.

New York, June 11.—Price movements in today's trading in bonds on the New York stock exchange were within narrow limits, with the underlying holding firm. Chief interest, perhaps, centered in transactions in the new Austrian government 7 per cent. bonds which were listed on a when issued basis. These bonds offered at 90 and accrued interest, sold 1 1-4 higher at one time and closed at 90 3-4.

Most of the foreign government bonds sold slightly lower, Serbian 8s dropping six points at one time but rallying some later. French issues also were heavy. United States government bonds moved within narrow limits, most of the Libertys showing slight improvement.

After registering small gains in the early trading railroad mortgages eased slightly, a majority of these bonds closing fractionally lower. New York Central 6s dropped a point.

Industrial Bens were dull and inclined to yield. A drop of one point by Wilson & Co. 8s, however, was the only outstanding change in that group.

Total sales (par value) were $3,652,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 11. — Prospective hedging sales of wheat led to price set-backs today that more than wiped out early gains. The market closed steady but 1-8 to 5-8c net lower, with July 1.11 1-8 to 1.11 1-4 and September 1.09 1-4; corn finished at a range varying from 3-8c decline to 1-8c advance, and oats lost 1-8 to 5-8c. In provisions, the outcome varied from unchanged figures to 70 higher.

At first, the wheat market showed a decided upward tendency, influenced in the main by reports of further rains doing extensive damage to crops in the southwest. European political developments counted also as a bullish factor, and notice was taken, too, of the proposed removal of Italian import duties on foodstuffs. Export demand, however, was slow, and general buying soon dwindled. The market then began to recede, and efforts to bring about rallies had but little effect.

With receiving houses reporting that country shippers were asking for prices on new wheat to arrive, it was generally assumed that hedging pressure would be much in evidence by the week-end. This circumstance more than counter-balanced a decrease of 1,864,000 bushels in the United States visible supply total, and the market seemed to sink under its own weight as the day drew to an end.

Corn and oats were governed for the most part by the action of the wheat market. Commission house purchasing of the December delivery of corn, though, was on a large scale and that delivery closed at an advance. Wet weather and cool temperatures also were helpful to values.

COLUMBIA

The regular meeting of Columbia grange on Wednesday evening before the anniversary of the birth of Nathan Hale and the nearest to Flag day, was observed in a patriotic manner. Mrs. Ethel Blakeley, a former lecturer, is the lecturer for June. She presented the following program, which was thoroughly patriotic and greatly appreciated: Recitation, The Flag, Esther Granstrom; reading, Nathan Hale, Ethel Blakeley; Patriotic Things Old and New, being a series of tableaux; Miss Marion Holmes, dressed as Columbia, introduced the following characters: Uncle Sam, William sa. Wolff; Betsey Ross and Friends Making the Flag, Mrs. Howard Rice, Miss Lillian Lyman, Mrs. Charles K. Hitchcock and Mrs. Raymond E. Clarke; In God We Trust, Statue of Liberty, Miss Esther Granstrom; Barbara Fritchie, Mrs. Howard Rice; Spirit of 1917, Philip Isham; The Thirteen Original States, thirteen ladies; The Star Spangled Banner, audience; address, Patriotism, Representative Edward P. Lyman; reading, A Pathetic Story of the War, Esther Granstrom; reading, Nathan Hale, Mrs. Henry Hutchins. Refreshments closed a most enjoyable evening, and much credit is due the lecturer, Mrs. Ethel Blakeley.

An exhibition was held on Columbia Green in front of H. W. Porter's store and the residence of Charles K. Hitchcock on Wednesday evening by a fire extinguisher company. Several tests were made of extinguishing fires started with materials saturated with kerosene, gasoline and acetyline gas, which were extinguished almost immediately by throwing upon the fires the powder. A tar barrel saturated with acetylene gas was allowed to become thoroughly ignited and was extinguished in 15 seconds. No damage was done to the surrounding property.

Wednesday being the anniversary of the birth of Nathan Hale of Coventry, Mrs. Mary B. Yeamans, who is also a native of Coventry, made an address in the schoolhouse at the Center on the life of the patriot and martyr.

Mrs. George H. Champlin fell from a chair to the floor on Thursday last and broke her wrist.

The closing exercises of the district schools in town were held on Thursday evening at the Congregational church at the Center. The pupils had been well instructed by E. S. Russell, the supervisor, and the teachers. The evening was very stormy, but there was a good attendance of the pupils, their parents and their friends.

There were 15 graduates as follows; Sidney Bernstein, Edna Florence Edwards, Harle Lillian Field, Helen Irene Field, Amelia Christine German, Juliette Mary Hennequin, Charles Gorman, Victoria Golob, Helen Greene, Lester Ransom Yerrington, Philip Landfish, William Gustave Macht, Gladys Maryette Rice, John Philip Tolokan and Mary Wasylyshyn.

Diplomas were presented to the graduates by Dwight A. Lyman, secretary of the school board.

The following program was given by the pupils: March, school, Mrs. Clayton Hunt, organist; prayer, Rev. T. Newton Owen, the pastor; A Columbian Song, chorus; Nathan Hale, Lester Yerrington; Columbia Library, Wasylyshyn; Lily Bells, chorus; Projects and Problems, William Macht; Harriet Beecher Stowe, Gladys Rice; The March of the Volunteers, John and Peter Tolokan; A Trip to Washington, Amelia German; The Path of Duty is the Way to Glory, Sidney Bernstein; Love's Old Sweet Song, Harle and Helen Field; Thrift, Victoria Golob; Whispering Hope, Victoria Golob; Helen Greene; A History of My Town, Edna Edwards; Lullaby and Good Night, chorus; The Star Spangled Banner, all.

The general opinion was that the essay on Projects and Problems, the ease and ability with which it was delivered by William Macht, merited the distinction of being considered the best essay in composition and the best in delivery on the program.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

During the past week good progress has been made along building lines in the city of Norwich and vicinity and several new projects were started during the week. The work on the larger projects now in hand was brought along at rapid strides and the work on these is fast nearing the completion stage. At the new Palace theatre site work has been brought along at good speed and the work on the exterior of the structure is nearly complete. The front of the building with its granite trim is almost completed and will make a very attractive building.

The work on the Pasnik block is well along, the plastering having been practically completed on the lower floor and the workmen are engaged in finishing up the upper apartments.

The remodeling of several stores on Main street has been practically completed and they will soon be ready for occupation within a few weeks. The store of Matthew Tanne is practically completed and the work on the Ableman building is well along.

During the past week nine applications for building permits were granted at the office of Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton. These permits this week include only those for smaller work, including several new frame garages and additions and alterations to present buildings. These permits put the average for the first week in June far ahead of the normal average and as several more applications have been received the indications are that the month of June will exceed all previous building records for the month. The permits granted are as follows.

To James J. Casey to erect a frame garage at 119 Cedar street. The garage will be 10x15 feet roof to be covered with composition roofing.

To Kent Mills to erect a frame garage on Platt avenue. The garage will be 12x20 feet with cement foundation and floor.

To Jeremiah J. Bordeau to build a veranda to the house at 92 Mechanic street for William Feldman. The veranda will be frame, 6x18 feet.

To Tongren and Hourigan, builders, to build two verandas on the house of Girard Hewitt on Palmer street. The addition will be 7x12 feet and 6x6 feet.

To Tongren and Hourigan to add to and alter the present house of Mrs. McCormick at the corner of Prospect and Fourteenth streets. The addition will be 8x8 feet with cement foundation and shingled exterior.

To R. G. Hinckley to build a veranda on the house at 17 Peck street for Mrs. Rilla Walker. The veranda will be 6x12 feet and frame construction.

To Tongren and Hourigan to build a frame veranda on the house on Central avenue for Joseph R. Fortelance. The veranda will be 6x12 feet.

To David and Charles Gordon to change over the front of the building at 116 West Main street. A new plate glass front is to be installed.

To A. Letendre to build a frame garage for Abner Schwartz on Perkins avenue. The garage will be 24x30 feet with a concrete foundation and floor. The exterior will be finished in wood shingles.

The state comptroller is advertising for architects to submit competitive plans for the new buildings at the state hospital here. All plans must be submitted at his office in Hartford, not later than July 5, at 11 a. m., standard time. There will be a public hearing on the plans July 10, at 11 a. m., standard time. It is planned to build a ward building, for about 125 patients. It will be of brick, fire-resistive, two stories, with unfinished attic, with slate roof, and will cost $212,540 complete with furniture. A home for nurses will also be erected. This is to be two stories, of brick, with slate roof, and the cost, including furnishing, is not to exceed $145,000.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

During the past week there were 17 sales of real estate in Norwich as compared to 25 sales for the corresponding week in 1922. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $44,200 and $59,180.

In New London there were 6 sales of real estate during the past week, one more than for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $53,250 and $30,357.

THE STATE SITUATION.

Statistics of building permits granted in the leading centers of the state show a total of 329 for buildings costing $1,314,076, comparing with 250 permits in the same week of last year, when the cost of buildings was $3,598,294, and 295 in 1921, with the cost of buildings $806,396.

ONECO.

Bids were received until June 9th for the erection of a frame addition, 24x24 feet, to the graded school in this place. A. J. Dixon is the chairman of the building committee.

NEW LONDON.

The permit has been issued to M. M. McGrail for a frame bungalow to be erected at 35 Bellevue place. The proposed house will be 24x47 feet, and will cost about $6,000. The contract to build the house has been awarded to George N. Dayton.

Thomas Kearney & Son are to build a frame cottage on West High street from private plans; the house will be frame, 20x28 feet, and will cost $3,500. Furnace heat will be provided.

Architects are receiving bids for the plumbing and hot water heating system for the residence of E. E. Dickenson, Jr., Esmer. The architects have prepared plans which were outlined in a previous issue of The Record, from which extensive alterations are being made.

A local builder is finishing four cottages on Bentley avenue for Joseph Sigal. The new houses are of frame construction, having five and six rooms each, designed for summer homes. The usual improvements are included in the plans.

AUTO JUMPS BACKWARDS OFF WEST MAIN ST. BRIDGE INTO YANTIC RIVER

An empty Oakland sedan traveling backwards down hill from Main street into West Main street about 5.45 o'clock Monday night swerved to the south side of the street when it hit the first West Main street bridge, plunging through the bridge railing and over the side into the Yantic river 15 feet below. It disappeared in about 10 to 15 feet of water, where it remained overnight, but attempts to get it out will be made this (Tuesday) morning.

The car is the property of Joseph Nejime of 58 Spring street, one of owners of the Breed theatre.

Mr. Nejime had left his car parked on the southerly side of Main street near the top of the hill leading up from Washington square. He stated after the accident that he was sure he had left it in gear and he could not see how it could have got started down hill.

According to one or two witnesses, the automobile took to the car track almost at once. As it started and rolled along speedily in the track and at no great speed down Main street, past Washington square and to the first West Side bridge. Here the wheels apparently hit something that threw them out of the track and the machine turned sharply toward the south side of the bridge. It bumped over the stringers that separates the highway from the sidewalk way and continued across the sidewalk into the iron railing. This offered little resistance to the weight of the car which crashed its way through and dropped into the water with a resounding splash. Keeping an even keel, the car settled slowly and in a minute was out of sight. The water where it went down is about 10 to 12 feet deep. It is probable that on daylight the top of the car can be seen under water.

Word of the accident was at once sent to police headquarters and Capt. D. J. Twomey notified the street department which put ropes on the bridge to protect the public from going through the sides of the bridge where 15 feet of the railing were torn out.

Mr. Nejime was at the Breed theatre when his car took its runaway dash and plunge into the river. The car had recently been repainted.

BRIEF CASE PRESENTED TO COACH EDWARD McKAY

At the last full session of the Academy in Slater hall Friday last, Principal H. A. Tirrell presented Edward McKay, the athletic coach, a leather brief case purchased with funds contributed by the boys of the school. This is Mr. McKay's last year at the local institution as teacher of mathematics and head coach in baseball and football. Coach McKay intends to enter the profession of law so that the gift will be very useful in his new occupation.

After getting off to a very bad start the Academy baseball team is doing all that could be expected and the only regret of those who are following its fortunes is that the season came to an abrupt close on account of the cancellation on account of wet grounds of the game that was to take place last Saturday. Coach McKay has been most faithful to his task and although the teams of the last two years have not been quite up to scratch the outlook for the next year or two is decidedly brightened on account of the large number of candidates who have tried for the baseball team this year.

All the students and faculty are sorry to see Mr. McKay go and wish him success in his new field of endeavor.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR GOING TO NEW HAVEN FIELD DAY

Columbian Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templar, will leave here this (Tuesday) morning by special train for the field day of New Haven Commandery. Palestine Commandery will join the Norwich Sir Knights at New London and the two will march together as one of the units in the parade.

The parade will form on South Orange street and start at 10.30 a. m. The commanderies will be reviewed by the grand commander, Rt. Em. Sir James C. Macpherson of Norwich on Central Green. Upon dismissal of the review the commanderies will march to the Yale dining hall for dinner after which trolleys will be provided to take the visitors to Lighthouse Point where a program of sports and other amusements will be carried out, starting at 3 o'clock.

Rockville.—Harry Oates of Ellington, whose appeal was to come up in the superior court at the criminal session on the charge of reckless driving and evading responsibility, vacated his appeal just before the opening of the court.

SWISS CATTLE HERD ON FARM IN GOSHEN

For years the dairy farmers of Switzerland, noted for production of butter and cheese, have been breeding a race of cattle peculiarly adapted to the needs of that rugged country and to the especial purposes of their dairy industry. This breed, known as the Brown Swiss, is quite unusual in America and it is probable that the herd of Ed. W. Jones of Goshen is the only group of pure bred Swiss cattle to be found in New London county.

In appearance, the Swiss cattle somewhat resemble the Jerseys but are larger, more heavily fleshed, and are uniformly of a deep brown color, much darker than the usual fawn color of the Jersey but quite similar to the darker haired representatives of that breed. Although bred as dairy cattle, the Brown Swiss come very near to ranking as a dual-purpose bred, having unusual beef qualities for dairy-bred animals.

It is a natural question to ask why a practical dairy farmer in Connecticut should select a breed so rarely seen in this section. Mr. Jones is ready with the answer. The Brown Swiss cattle were bred to make the most of scanty pastures, and no one can deny that there are many thousands of acres of "brush pasture" in New England that fall into that classification. It is Mr. Jones' opinion that the Brown Swiss will return better results on stony, brush-covered pastures than any other breed. They thrive on a comparatively light grain ration and are hardy, healthy animals, requiring little attention.

About nine milking cows are regularly kept on the farm in addition to the heifer calves raised for replacement. Mr. Jones is growing his own calves and owns an imported bull with pedigree lines backed by high milk production.

In looking over the herd, the visitor is impressed with the remarkable uniformity of the animals. In conformation and color they maintain an unusual trueness to type. Whether this is representative of the breed or rather a testimonial to the careful breeding which Mr. Jones has done, is a question that arises in the visitor's mind. It is probable that both factors enter into the matter.

Although the Brown Swiss cattle do not rank with the heaviest milk producers in the dairy world, Mr. Jones has raised cows that produced up to 11,000 and even 12,000 pounds of milk in a year. When it is remembered that milk from these cows runs relatively high in butterfat, averaging about 4.5 per cent on fat tests, it is easy to understand Mr. Jones' enthusiasm for the breed.

Another merit which Mr. Jones claims for the Brown Swiss cows is a longer milking period than some other breeds. Being especially hardy, it is probable that the cows are not so easily upset by a change in feed or management. By no means a small item in their favor is the quick growth made by calves of the breed. Surplus bull calves grow more quickly into marketable veal and sell more readily as such than do the calves of some other breeds.

There is no shyness or "wild" tendencies about the cattle in this herd, such as one might expect from animals bred under range or sparse grass conditions. The calves and heifers follow their owner about the pasture, poking inquisitive muzzles into coat pockets or seeking to lick a hand or exposed forearm with their black tongues. Gentle treatment, the sure mark of a practical dairyman, accounts largely for such absence of fear. Loud speech and blows are never permitted in the barns or pastures. The dairy cow being a temperamental creature, gentle treatment is almost as important in insuring milk production as is good feed and comfortable quarters.

Mr. Jones is a director of the New London County Farm Bureau and is much interested in the campaign to weed out the scrub bulls and low producing cows. Given good animals, good feed and proper treatment, nearly any dairy breed will return satisfactory results to the owner. The Brown Swiss cattle may have all of the excellent qualities which Mr. Jones ascribes to them, but success in the dairy business in New London county seems to be more a matter of management than of breeds.

ROTARIANS TO HEAR COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

This week's meeting of the Norwich Rotary club will be in charge of the educational committee, Hugh Campbell, chairman, who will introduce as the speaker, Dr. A. B. Meredith of Hartford, commissioner of education for the state of Connecticut. This is proof conclusive that the program will be of such nature that to miss it would be a decided regret for a considerable time.

Another feature of this week's meeting will be the presence of the managerial and coaching staffs of the Harvard University crews. Most of these men are familiar with Rotary club activities and all are at least making their temporary home in the same town with District Governor Don. The reception which they receive here will undoubtedly reach his ears. The club members expect to make sure that they will not be ashamed of their report.

Bloomfield.—The laying of the cornerstone of the new Masonic temple will be held on the afternoon of Saturday, June 16, at 2.30 o'clock, standard time. Suitable exercises and ceremonies will be held on that day and the arrangements are in charge of Carleton B. Barnard, Edward P. Vincent, Fred M. Mansur and Otto Tyrol.

GEER BROTHERS ARE RAISING GUERNSEYS AT LEBANON

It took several years for E. N. and C. G. Geer of Lebanon to discover that a pedigree is not sufficient recommendation for a dairy bull. After disappointing results with bulls that had little merit other than "papers," they made a study of individual quality in dairy animals and picked a strong individual from one of the biggest Guernsey herds of the state. When the first heifers sired by this bull came into production the results were so gratifying that the owners are now convinced that a good bull is more than "half the herd."

For ten years, Geer Bros. have used only pure bred Guernsey bulls on their herd, with the result that they have graded up one of the best herds of that breeding in New London county. Starting with grade cows, they are working on the principle of a home-raised herd that will eventually be practically of pure breeding. Only one of the eighteen milking cows now in the herd represents an outside purchase.

Butterfat tests show 4.5 per cent and better. The milk is separated on the farm and the cream sold at Lebanon. Eight to ten hogs are fattened annually and with the calves and about 300 Rhode Island Red hens use all of the skimmilk produced.

"We have no desire to go into the whole milk business" said E. N. Geer. "There is a steady market for the cream and the skimmilk is all used on the farm. In fact, we could easily use an additional barrel of skimmilk every day if we could get it."

Just at present there is a tremendous demand for Guernsey cattle and surplus heifer calves from Geer Bros. farm sell readily. In buying their more recent bulls, the brothers have sought especially for big-framed, rugged animals. The present bull would weigh about 1,700 pounds in good flesh, although possessing strong dairy conformation and temperament. It is probably within the bounds of safety to say that very few farm herds in the state, or even in all New England, can boast of a more outstanding herd leader.

That E. N. Geer and C. G. Geer are progressive farmers is evident from even a casual inspection of the farm. The premises are well kept and the equipment selected with a view to both convenience and economy. Most of the colony houses for the poultry flock are made from used piano boxes. They are purchased in town for about $2.50 each and, with a small amount of labor, are converted into satisfactory houses at a fraction of the usual cost. The discrimination in favor of pure bred stock extends even to the poultry flock.

Although the farm operations keep both brothers busy, E. N. Geer has found time this winter to represent his district in the general assembly.

CHESTER WILL EXPLAIN CONCESSIONS IN TURKEY

Of special interest to the manufacturers and shippers of Connecticut is the illustrated address and lecture to be delivered in the Bulkeley school auditorium, New London, Thursday evening, June 14th, by Admiral Colby M. Chester, of U. S. N., retired.

Admiral Chester is today one of Connecticut's most illustrious native sons and is a world figure. The so-called "Chester grant" secured from the new Turkish government controlling the development of the great oil, mineral and agricultural areas of the Mosult in Asia Minor, almost equal New England in area. The possibilities of the development of this large territory burdened with undeveloped natural resources of unlimited value promise development of trade with America and particularly Connecticut, the admiral's native state, that are boundless.

Associated with Admiral Chester are his son, Commander Arthur Chester, who held a responsible position representing the U. S. shipping board in Europe during the war, General Goethals, builder of the Panama canal, Kermit Roosevelt and a group of distinguished engineers, American bankers and business men.

Admiral Chester proposes to speak upon the Chester concessions in a few cities only and he has favored Connecticut and his native city of New London with the first selection. The subject matter which he will discuss will be beautifully illustrated by splendid colored pictures but recently secured in the territory which the Americans propose to develop.

A reception to Admiral Chester will be given in the afternoon when there will be a military and naval parade and civic pageant.

ALL FOREIGN PRISONERS FREED BY CHINESE BANDITS

The Eight Men Released Came Down the Mountainside in Sedan Chairs, on Donkeys and Some Afoot, Escorted by Outlaws—There Were Four Americans Among the Group of Bearded, Shabby Men—Release Was Officially Reported to the State Department in a Cablegram From the American Consul at Shanghai.

Tsao Chwang, June 13 (By the A. P.).—Eight bearded, shabby men, four of them Americans, the last of the 17 foreign prisoners captured by Chinese bandits from the Shanghai-Peking express near Suchow, May 6, arrived at the Tung Hsing mines, near Tsao Chwang, this afternoon.

They came down the mountainside from their prison in the Temple of the Clouds on Paotzuku mountain in sedan chairs, on donkeys, nd some walking, with an escort of outlaws.

At the mine compound they saw the last of their brigand hosts and were joyfully greeted by relatives and friends who had gathered there to welcome them.

Baths, clothing and food were awaiting them and on a railroad siding stood a train ready to take them to Tsao Chwang.

It is expected that all, or the majority of the eight, will proceed to Shanghai tomorrow. The eight members of the ragged remnant of the original 17 are:

Americans—Major Roland H. Pinger, U. S. A., Manila; Leon Friedman, Chicago and Shanghai; John B. Powell, Hannibal, Mo., and Shanghai; Leo Solomon, San Francisco and Shanghai.

British—R. H. Howlett, Birmingham, England, and Tientsin; Fred Ellas, Shanghai.

French—Emile Gensburger, Shanghai.

Italian—G. D. Musso, Rome, Italy, and Shanghai.

The closing scene of the six and one-half weeks of negotiation for the prisoners' release was staged with all the Chinese love of formality.

The stage was the village of Tsiliho, fifteen miles from Tsao Chwang, and two miles down the mountainside from the Temple of the Clouds.

In the center of the group of bandit chieftains and Chinese officials stood Roy Anderson, American, long familiar with Chinese customs, and the chosen intermediary of the outlaws and the Peking government.

Armed with a commission as personal representative of Tsao Kun, powerful Chinese military leader and inspector-general of Shantung province, and possessing full authority from Tsao to put up the guarantees demanded by the brigands, Anderson opened the final session. Accompanying him were Wen Shih-Tsen, commissioner of foreign affairs at Nanking, and several other Chinese officials.

In accordance with ancient Chinese custom, Anderson asked the bandits to nominate their "elder brother" or spokesman, with power to act.

The American explained that he was there in the role of "peacemaker," an office held sacred throughout China. He reviewed the situation, told the bandits of America's traditional friend-ship for China. He said that the United States had been deeply grieved by the kidnapping.

In reply to the outlaws' demand for foreign guarantees of immunity from punishment and other terms if the captives were released, Anderson explained that this would be possible only if the foreign powers took over the government of China, a course which he emphasized the brigand chieftains themselves desired above all to avoid.

When Anderson had finished, General Chen Tiao-Yuan, representing the military governor of Shantung, read a document which recited the enrollment of 2,000 outlaws in the Chinese army, the payment to each of $20 and the distribution of uniforms.

Then the crisis was reached. Anderson, supported by General Chen, asked for the immediate release of the eight foreign captives.

The outlaw chieftains parleyed amongst themselves. Then a messenger left the circle and started up the steep Paotzuku slope.

The formal agreement for the release of the prisoners was produced and signed by the two chief spokesmen, one, Roy Scott Anderson of Atlanta, Georgia, U. S. A., and the other the chosen "elder brother" of the brigands, Sun Kwei-Tsu.

In a few moments the messenger reappeared and, following him, accompanied by an armed detachment of their guards, came the eight prisoners of Paotzuku.

They passed through Tsiliho and headed for the railroad, free men once more.

RELEASE OFFICIALLY REPORTED IN WASHINGTON

Washington, June 12.—Release by Chinese bandits of Americans and other foreigners held as hostages since May 6 ended the emergency so far as the safety of these individuals was concerned but forecast the beginning of prolonged and difficult negotiations with the Peking government to secure the safety of foreigners in future.

The state department was informed today of the release by the American consulate at Shanghai.

So far as is known here, the Peking diplomatic corps has not as yet worked out any definite proposals as to future guarantees to be required of the Peking government.

There is no doubt in the opinion of informed officials here that specific guarantees will be required of the Peking authorities. Many propositions have been advanced from various quarters in that connection, including proposals that more rigid police protection along the Chinese railways be provided for by the government. In whatever is done, it is expected that the diplomatic corps at Peking will continue to act in concert and that the attitude taken by the western powers.

ONE-MAN "JUMBO" TROLLEY CAR JUMPED THE TRACK

Stratford, Conn., June 12.—Speeding down grade along Stratford avenue about 10 o'clock tonight, a one-man "jumbo" trolley car, in charge of Motorman John F. Koch, jumped the track when it struck a cross-over switch a short distance east of Gaynor Manufacturing company's plant not far from Hard's corner.

Forward and rear trucks left the rails and the big car careened madly along the pavement on the north side of the thoroughfare, swaying from one side to the other, swinging around like an automobile skidding on a wet pavement, and finally burying its nose in the bank. It traveled nearly 200 feet after leaving the rails before coming to a stop.

As the car plunged into the bank at the side of the road, passengers were hurled from their seats. One man, W. H. Brooks, was flung like a stone from a catapult headfirst through a window. He was picked up unconscious and rushed to Bridgeport hospital suffering from concussion of the brain, multiple lacerations of the scalp, and a possible fractured hip.

Miss Naomi Vaughn, Stratford, was thrown against a window. Mrs. Catherine McGee was severely shaken up and suffered from shock and hysteria.

Recently he jumped his bail, and when he was rearrested the judge ordered that he be held in jail awaiting trial. Having used out a writ of habeas corpus, he appeared at the Capitol today in the custody of the sheriff of Kanawha county, and Chief Justice Taft made a special trip to the conference room of the Supreme Court to hear his complaint.

An order was issued releasing the prisoner on $25,000 bail.

Recruiting Volunteer Army in Bulgaria

Now Numbers 100,000 Men —Preparing to Punish the Usurpers.

Paris, June 12.—(By the A. P.)—A Bulgarian "volunteer army" now numbering 100,000 men and steadily increasing in size, is "preparing to punish the usurpers," says a statement given out by the Bulgarian legation here today summarizing an official despatch from M. Daskaloff, Bulgarian minister at Prague. The statement adds that these troops are guarding the frontiers and the suburbs of Sofia.

M. Daskaloff, who is in direct touch with Varna, Bulgarian Black Sea port, urged the staff of the Paris legation not to execute orders received from the "new illegal government, which is established only at Sofia and supported by a handful of adventurers."

IMPORTANT EVIDENCE GIVEN IN MORSE TRIAL

Washington, June 12.—What attorneys for the government regarded as some of the most important evidence in their case was placed today before the jury in the Morse trial sessions which were enlivened by frequent and sharp clashes between Charles Pies, former vice president and general manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and Attorney Rockwood, of defense counsel. The "high spots" of the day's testimony were:

That R. M. Much, assistant treasurer of the Virginia Shipbuilding Corporation, and one of the defendants sought to have James F. Cannon, auditor of that corporation, certify to a statement of expenditures at Alexandria, Va., which Cannon said was in excess of the actual amount spent.

That Charles W. Morse and one of his sons promised to give the government mortgages on three steamers as part security for a loan of $750,000 to the Virginia Shipbuilding Corporation and later denied that such a promise had been made.

That Charles W. Morse obtained from Stuart G. Gibboney, a New York lawyer, a receipted bill for $7,764 for legal services to the Virginia Shipbuilding Corporation so that the bill "might be put through" as part of the expenditures of the Virginia company although the amount of the bill had not then been paid by the Virginia company.

Cannon said that Much in presenting him the statement of expenditures explained that it was to support a statement made to the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

"I told Mr. Much and B. W. Morse that the total, $644,000, was wrong," said the witness. "That they had not spent that much money. I refused to sign it and told them I would prepare a statement that was correct. Mr. Much did not object."

Cannon said he and a bookkeeper worked until 2 o'clock the next morning preparing a statement; that he presented it to Much and that the same day he was discharged.

Before obtaining employment with the Virginia Company, Cannon said he was government auditor at the Morse shipyards at Noank and Groton, Conn., and that he had frequent controversies with officials of the plants about vouchers presented by them as a basis for government payments to the yards.

Testimony as to the loan by the government to the Virginia Corporation was given by Mr. Pies, who asserted that the failure of the Morses to give mortgages on three steamers owned by the United States Steamship company as they had promised to the negotiations for the loan "showed their unreliability."

Mr. Pies said he had no feeling against Charles W. Morse. Mr. Rockwood then read from Mr. Pies's testimony before the house shipping board investigating committee in which Mr. Pies stated that after this he "held Morse to short rations."

The witness explained that "short rations" was merely a "figure of speech" that what he did was to keep Morse to the letter of his contracts.

"Didn't Charles M. Schwab tell you at Alexandria when he went there with you in April, 1918, at the time the loan was discussed, that he would give $3,000,000 for the Alexandria plant?" asked Mr. Rockwood.

"He did not," was the reply. The witness added that he had told Mr. Schwab that only $350,000 had been put into the Alexandria yard at that time.

$6,000,000 MOVING PICTURE SUIT HAS BEEN SETTLED

Dry Ship Ruling is Literally Enforced

Public Health Service Refuses Permits for Wine Rations for French Sailors.

New York, June 12.—Members of crews of foreign steamships now in New York harbor, which left their home ports before June 10, when the treasury department's new ruling on ship liquor went into effect, learned tonight that they could get their customary spirit rations only by going ashore and obtaining rations by the methods used by some American citizens.

Hopes that "dietary" liquors would be classed as "medicinal" and as such permitted to crews of vessels which sailed before June 10 were destroyed by the announcement of Dr. E. K. Sprague, local head of the United States public health service, on instructions from Washington, that the dry ship ruling would be literally enforced.

The ruling, he declared, could in no sense be construed as permitting the inclusion of wine rations under the heading of medicine. "It is a far stretch of the imagination," he observed.

Dr. Sprague confirmed his announcement by denying application of the French line for release from seal of enough wine to serve sailors on the steamship France the two-litre-a-day ration. The section was taken after Dr. Sprague had discussed the situation with Customs Collector Elting and State Prohibition Director Canfield.

The conference of representatives of the three arms of the federal service charged with enforcing prohibition afloat and ashore resulted in the following division of duties:

The United States public health service to decide what quantity of liquor is to be released for "medical" use in American waters.

The customs authorities to see that no more than the allotted amount is released.

The state prohibition enforcement office to issue permits for the purchase by ships—if any—which arrive without enough liquor to meet medical requirements—and, of course, to see that the sailors don't find any grog shops along the water front.

Meantime, foreign shipping line officials continued conferences today to decide whether an injunction, or some other court action, should be taken in an effort to check the effect of the treasury department's ruling. Observers were wondering whether, after all, the appearance of eleven British rum ships and one French vessel with liquid cargo off the coast did not mean that some of the shipping lines had decided on a marine "parking station" at which they could check up their drinkables before entering port.

WINE AS RATIONS NOT "MEDICINAL LIQUOR"

Washington, June 12.—Any possibility that foreign ships in American waters can circumvent the new ship liquor regulations by using "medicinal" stores for rations to their crews was cut off late today when the treasury officials adopted a policy of permitting no withdrawals of "dietary" liquors as medicine. The ruling draws a sharp distinction, holding that the wines usually served as a part of the ration cannot be regarded under any circumstances as "medicinal liquor."

THREE FRENCH SOLDIERS KILLED IN OCCUPIED ZONE

Duesseldorf, June 12.—(By the A. P.)—The killing of three French soldiers—one in Geisenkirchen and two in Dortmund—within the last few days has convinced the French military authorities that an organized effort has been launched by the Germans to carry on night attacks against the forces of occupation. Hence drastic measures have been taken against the two municipalities concerned.

It was one of these measures—the restriction of street traffic after nine o'clock in the evening—that led to the shooting of nine Germans Sunday night when a French patrol was compelled to fire upon them because its warning to clear the streets were disregarded. Six of the Germans died from wounds received.

In addition to arresting three German officials who are to be held as hostages, it was announced today by the French that no more permits would be granted Germans of Dortmund and Geisenkirchen to leave the occupied area.

According to German sources another of the Germans wounded in Sunday night's affray is expected to die. Two others are seriously wounded. The Germans assert that among those killed was a physician, Dr. Schoene, who was answering a call to the hospital when the patrol ordered the streets cleared. They allege that doctors have permits to be out in the streets after the curfew hour.

SMOKE FROM FOREST FIRES HANGS OVER CONNECTICUT

New Haven, Conn., June 12.—A heavy pall of smoke settling over this city this evening caused hundreds of persons to bombard newspaper offices and fire headquarters with questions concerning its origin. Reports from Norwich and New London indicated that the smoke was first seen in the eastern section of the state, coming from the northeast and drifting southwest. A heavy forest fire near Providence, R. I., is believed to be the chief source of the smoke.

The weather bureau here tonight said that recent heavy forest fires in Maine were also responsible for the smoke. A heavy fog setting in from Long Island sound added to the general haziness of the atmosphere.

MAINE FOREST FIRE SITUATION LESS CRITICAL

Augusta, Maine, June 12.—Altogether still very serious the forest fire situation in Aroostook county was less critical tonight, according to reports received here by State Forest Commissioner Samuel T. Dana. The wind which reached gale force Monday, spreading the fires with great rapidity, died down through the night, and today large forces of men made headway against the flames. In Aroostook county more than 600 men are fighting fires in the woods, the commissioner said.

One fire that threatened the settlement of Blackstone was reported under control.

MASONIC CLUBS CONDEMN KU KLUX KLAN PUBLICATION

Officials and Delegates to Convention in Boston Were Angered by the Appearance at Headquarters of "The Fellowship Forum"—Declaration Made That the Cardinal Principal of Masonry Bars Politics and Creeds—Grotto Patrols in Competitive Drills in Cleveland.

Boston, June 12.—Officials and delegates to the convention of the National League of Masonic clubs were disturbed and angered yesterday afternoon by the appearance at convention headquarters of "The Fellowship Forum," a paper devoted to the propaganda of the Ku Klux Klan, and which, it was said was brought to Boston for distribution by Angus A. Acree, an editor. Following a conference with other national officers, President H. Melvin Allen last evening issued a statement declaring that the League knew nothing whatever beforehand of the attempt to issue propaganda at the convention. The officers, he said, "condemn and repudiate 'The Fellowship Forum.'" It has no part in the meetings of the Masonic club, chairman Terhune of the convention committee, added to the statement a declaration that one of the cardinal principles of Masonry bars politics and creeds, and pointed out the fact that the Ku Klux Klan has been severely criticised and denounced by leaders of Masonry throughout the country.

Nearly one thousand men and women were present at the ball at the Copley-Plaza last evening which was the first important social event of the programme of the week. Although the ballroom was handsomely decorated with American flags and Masonic emblems, the affair was strictly informal and many of the diners arrived only after private dinner or theatre parties.

Strangely enough Mayor Curley, who is not a member of the fraternity set the keynote for the declaration of principles. The session was called to order in the ballroom by President H. Melvin Allen and Ernest M. Johnson led in the singing of "America," while Rev. George P. Bentley, diocesan chaplain of the Episcopal church, led in the recitation of the Lord's Prayer. W. L. Terhune, chairman of the convention committee, welcomed the members to Boston—the home of Masonry in the United States—and then introduced the mayor, who was received with cheers.

DRILLS BY GROTTO PATROLS IN CLEVELAND

Cleveland, O., June 12.—[illegible] night revelry, street carnivals and dancing, and a monster burlesque parade thrown the downtown section of the city brought to a close the second day's programme of the three day conclave of the Mystic Order of Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm. Competitive drills by the proposts and caldron teams, the latter the women's auxiliary, featured the events during the day.

Fifteen uniformed Grotto patrols met in competition which started early this afternoon and continued until late this evening, announcement of the winner will be made tomorrow morning. Predictions were freely made that the cup would go to the Nazim Grotto, of Canton, Ohio, Aryan of Chicago, Ashmar of Columbus, [illegible] or Kedah of Newport, R. I.

The commotion that gripped the city tonight was comparable only to the furor that a college town finds itself in the night before and the night after the big games of the year. The Grottoes—the playground of the Blue Lodge Masonry—60,000 strong, thronged the hotels into bedlams and the streets into roaring canyons of noise, laughter, blaring music and excitement.

The monster crown began to get itself worked up late in the afternoon parading through and in front of hotels in bathing suits, pajamas and all sorts of [illegible] right in harmonized with dancing on East Ninth street from Superior [illegible] to Lakeside avenue—four city blocks—where thousands shuffled on the asphalt pavement which was especially scrubbed and waxed for the occasion. A massed band concert in public hall, where two score Grotto bands—110 pieces—joined under one leader, blared forth, also was an attraction.

Prior to the concert, Maxwell Harold Harter of Toledo, elected today, past monarch, Past Monarch E. Craige Peloubet of Richmond, Va., and other grand officers held a reception at the hall.

WILL CONTEST REVEALS HOW "PONIES ARE PLAYED"

New York, June 12.—How the ponies are played, now that bookmaking is prohibited at the race tracks about New York, was described by "Circular Joe" Vendig, widely known bookmaker, at today's session of a suit to break the will of George A. Wheelock, former bookmaker and one time president of the Metropolitan Turf Association.

Vendig said that technically he no longer was a bookmaker, but was a "turfman," who "gives and takes bets." There is no bookmaking at the tracks hereabouts, he said but "a credit system is in vogue." Under this system, "turfmen" of known financial standing, as well as other customers who are able to back their bets with cash, are permitted to make bets, the financial transactions, however, occurring away from the tracks.

Vendig testified that he had taken away such bets from Wheelock, saying he had regarded Wheelock as "reliable and financially responsible for any amount." A short time before Wheelock died, however, he said, Wheelock lost his natty appearance, his drooped and he acted in an erratic manner, evincing his [illegible] principally by criticising track officials and charging races had been "framed"—something the Wheelock of old had never been known to do.

Mrs. Wheelock, who is seeking to have probated her husband's will, in which practically all his estate of $300,000 was left to her, admits Wheelock was mentally incompetent at the time of his death, but contends his mind was sound when he made the will, and that the sudden change in him was due to poisoning from drinking bootleg whiskey. Wheelock's brother, William A. Wheelock is seeking to break the will.

The light, which was made at a Brooklyn factory, has a lens 36 inches in diameter.

The heat thus produced brought the bananas to the height of their flavor in twenty-four hours, they said. The men will be deported.

MAY ABOLISH INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS COURT OF KANSAS

Topeka, Kans., June 12.—(By the A. P.)—Governor Jonathan M. Davis, today authorized the statement that he is seriously considering the calling of a special session of the legislature to abolish the Kansas court of industrial relations. The governor said in his recommendation, if the special session is called, would not be for the absolute abandonment of the court idea, but that he feels more than $240,000 can be saved to the state during the present biennium by abolishing the tribunal as it now exists and which he declares is "doing nothing."

GOMPERS PLEASED BY KANSAS COURT DECISION

Washington, June 12.—"Kansas goes again is headed toward freedom," Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, said today in a formal statement commenting upon the Supreme Court decision holding a part of the state's industrial relations law unconstitutional.

"While the decision applies only to a limited extent," Mr. Gompers said, "it will nevertheless serve to restrict the activities and work of the Kansas court as to make that court practically inoperative.

"Labor is glad to see the Kansas court fall by the wayside. Labor knew long before the court was established that such an institution could neither function satisfactorily nor long survive.

"If it is permissible to regard the reasoning of the court as an indication of a tendency to lift the hand of politics and political influence from the industrial world we may express some measure of satisfaction. The difficulty, however, is that it is difficult to divorce this most recent opinion from the opinion in the child labor case after which there is no other conclusion to be reached except that anything is within the realm of possibilities where Supreme Court decisions are concerned.

at Church Street Telephone 1405

Frank H. Fenton, recently elected at the head of representatives addressed the Willimantic Rotary club Tuesday noon at the weekly luncheon. During the course of the dinner Secretary Charles W. Hill read communications from Governor Brewster, Governor-elect Baxter and the Rutland, Vt., Rotary club concerning the fall conference to be held there. Several of the club members subscribed for a St. Louis newspaper and they will be furnished copies of the publication during the week of the national observation in that city. Short remarks were made by "Lon" Kingsbury and Philip Larkin, the two Rotarians who were members of the last legislature.

It was voted that invitations be extended to the women to attend the field day of the Eastern Rotary clubs of this state, to be held at the Connecticut Agricultural College next month.

Henry M. Congdon was present in charge of the meeting and he presented Frank P. Fenton of this city, who gave a most interesting talk on the General Assembly of 1923. Mr. Fenton said that he was deeply impressed with the personnel of the last legislature and he contradicted the statement that it was a "farmer's legislature." There were eighty members of the call out of the 262 representatives, the remainder being of practically every occupation conceivable. He talked to some extent on the remarkable ability of the committees of the last legislature who worked hard in the interest of the state and not for any selfish ends.

Mr. Fenton believes that about forty-five of the fifty committees appointed each term could be easily dispensed of and he said that in his opinion this would eventually be done. The speaker dwelt to some extent on the important functions of the appropriations and finance committees and although both have done considerable work in lessening here the expenses of the state.

Mr. Fenton then dwelt at some length on a number of bills which were enacted and others which were turned down.

The speaker received hearty applause at the conclusion of his talk and the members then arose and extended him a rising vote of thanks.

"Ray" Prosser and "George" Hickey led the club in a number of new song hits, including "Barney Google," "Tell Me Why You Blow Bubbles" and "Bubbles Kelley."

A farewell and godspeed was tendered to Secretary Charles W. Hill who is to leave Saturday morning to attend the convention of K. of C. at St. Louis.

A humorous feature of the meeting was the reading of the cubic inch of Rotary Branch in a vocal selection. Harry will be heard in a rendition next week.

The side walls of the interior are finished in light tan and the ceiling is given an artistic finish by three ornamental panels, the central panel is painted in a beautiful blue and the end panels are in tan. The beauty of the interior is enhanced with stencil work with ornamental French designs on the panels. A fine oak altar, set before a blue background, adorns the rear of the edifice and in the center is a shoulder cabin pulpit decorated with ornamental hydra where marriages may be solemnized and lectures delivered next.

ARMISTICE DECLARED IN STRIKE IN WILLIMANTIC

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, June 13—An armistice of one week has been declared between the members of Local No. 671, Textile Workers of America and the American Thread Co. This decision was reached Tuesday afternoon at a joint meeting of the employes and the officials of the company. The company asked for deferred action to allow time for the board of directors of the company to investigate the grievances brought up by the local workers. A conference was held in the local office of the American Thread Co., earlier in the afternoon and among those present were Thomas McMahon of Providence, R. I., president of the Textile Workers of America, John H. Powers of Pawtucket, R. I., a member of the executive board of the National council of the Textile Workers, R. C. Kerr of New York, president of the American Thread Co., John H. Curtis, agent of the local mills and a committee of five from the local union.

A report of the conference was given at the special meeting of the workers to the effect that the heads of both parties had compromised and would lay aside further action until next Tuesday and the local union endorsed the motion. The matter of striking is one which has excited keen interest in this city and has effected approximately 900 workers many of whom are women. The dispute arises over the removal of sweeps which have been granted the workers on work done and which now places them on piece work. They are allowed a certain amount in case of delays in furnishing them with work. It is claimed by those dissatisfied that they will lose much of their salaries when they receive what is known as "bad rung" causing them to have to work slowly.

HELP FOR EXPECTANT MOTHERS

Many Cases Reported of Women Being Kept in a Normal, Healthy Condition by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mothers transmit to their children the blessings of a healthy constitution. How important, therefore, for the child, as well as for the mother, that she should carefully guard her health during the trying pre-natal period. Preparation for a healthy maternity is accomplished by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as evidenced by the following letters:

Trenton, N. J.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before childbirth on the advice of my mother for nervousness and weakness. I was irritable, cranky and easily worried. Housework seemed so hard, and at times I was really unfit to do it. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound overcame this condition, my nervousness disappeared and I felt like a different person entirely, and I hope this letter will lead other women who are in this condition to try it."—Mrs. L. BOCKOVER, 128 Kirkbride Ave., Trenton, N. J.

"No Praise Too Great"

Litchfield, Ill.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my son was born as I was not strong after the birth of my first child. No praise is too great for what it has done for me. MARTIN, 717 Clay Street, Litchfield, Ill.

Famous Diva To Run For Parliament

If Mme. Melba runs for the English Parliament, should Dame Nellie Melba, famous opera singer, get a seat at the next general election. Her constituents might hear her sing while she is electioneering and even her speeching in the short hours might be given in true operatic style. Attendance at the House would certainly improve. Dame Melba is now at the seaside recuperating from her recent illness and will return to her London duties next week.

Coming to the Breed

Another Marshall Neilan production, his first made since his recent affiliation with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, is coming to the Breed theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday. It is a screen version of Donn Byrne's novel, "The Strangers' Banquet," and is said by Neilan himself and by many famous directors, stars and writers who have seen it at private screenings to be the finest production he has yet made. Neilan produced "The River's End," "Go and Get It," "Dinty," "Penrod," "Fools First" and many other pictures which have been striking successes from both a financial and artistic point of view. Every one who has ever seen a Marshall Neilan production will want to see "The Strangers' Banquet." It is made on a big-ger scale, and with greater resources to call upon, than any other picture he has made.

The story is a dramatic one telling of the strangers who sought to feast upon the fortune left to his two children, John and Derith, by Shane Butler Keogh—a fortune made out of a shipyard which he founded. The son marries a beautiful woman whose only interest is spending his money. The daughter estranges the superintendent of the yards, who is love with her, by yielding to a lax and sentimental policy in managing the workers. She goes to New York, seeking diversion, and is about to fall under the spell of titled strangers desirous of feasting on old Shane Keogh's millions, when the superintendent calls her back to duty—and eventually love—by telling her of rioting at the shipyards caused by her lax management.

FORMERLY bar soap for all washing
NOW LUX for fine things, and—
RINSO for the family wash

Today you wouldn't think of rubbing cake soap on sheer fabrics, or silks or woolens.

Lux has made that unthinkable forever.

Now there's a new kind of soap for the family wash—a soap that's as wonderful for the regular wash as Lux is for fine fabrics.

With this new kind of soap, soaking takes the place of rubbing. Only the very dirtiest places need the lightest rubbing, and for these you use a sprinkling of dry Rinso, and the ground-in dirt quickly comes right out!

And Rinso does the whole job! You don't need any other soap with it, nor any soap powder.

Rinso is made by the makers of Lux. Get it today at any grocer's. It comes in two sizes, the regular size and the big new package. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

"The Nth Commandment" Has Vital Meaning for Housewives of Every Degree

What is meant by "The Nth Commandment?"

In the case of the Paramount-Cosmopolitan production of that title which opens at the Broadway theatre Thursday to remain for three days, it seems to mean "Thou shalt not foil thy husband."

This picture should be interesting to all housewives. It is to be compared to "Humoresque," since the author, director and scenarist combined to create that successful production, and it is similar in its appeal. Colleen Moore, James Morrison and Eddie Phillips play the leading roles.

The story tells of a young wife, whose husband is ill and who leaves home one evening presumably to work overtime at the Mammoth department store where she is employed, to obtain the money necessary to send her husband to the country for his health. Instead she attends a speedy Christmas Eve party given by a member of her friends.

At a cafe a sum of money is thrust into the hand of the bewildered girl by a drunken admirer. In her hurry to escape she neglects to return the money and carries it home to her husband, telling that she received it from an aid society. He knows that she has not been to the store working, for he has been there to take her home, so he accepts this as a plausible excuse. The question arises, was this girl justified in deliberately telling a falsehood in order to preserve the peace of her home and perhaps save her husband's life? Was she justified in fooling her husband? You will be better able to answer this question for yourself after viewing with it the showings of this splendid picture.

Charlotte Merriam and George Cooper are included in the cast. Frank Borzage directed; Fannie Hurst wrote the original story and Frances Marion made the adaptation.

"The Ninth Commandment" has scored heavily wherever presented this season. It is well worth seeing, and the management expects large crowds during its run here.

A Christie comedy and news weekly are the short subjects.

Breed Theatre

Seldom does the performance of an actor of the screen blot out consciousness of the theatre from the minds of his audience, but Charles Ray does that by his sustained and powerful artistry in "The Girl I Loved" his second big United Artists production, which will be shown for the last times at the Breed theatre today.

Tremendous dramatic illusion is not too strong a term to apply to the work of Mr. Ray in this story, which takes on added conviction because it is a true story of real people. It is the actual love story of James Whitcomb Riley, the poet, in his youth, and the girl of his heart. Interest in a photoplay is vastly increased by the knowledge that the characters are not the puppets of a writer's imagination but that one is gazing intimately and at length into the records of a famous man's heart.

Riley as a youth loved a maiden passionately and later in life wrote one of his most beautiful poems about his experience. From these throbbing verses Charles Ray evolved a drama insensibly aspiring in theme and made doubly so by the magnificent work of the star. Never has he betore more than skirted the edge of the acting power he shows in this picture.

Here is a "tragedy" picture without a suggestion of base passions, yet passionate in a high degree and tragic in its climaxes. Like all of Ray's pictures it is clean, wholesome and stimulating to the best emotions. It is moreover an example of great "team-work," for Ray has given rarely generous opportunities to all of his able cast, which includes Patsy Ruth Miller, as talented as she is beautiful; Hamsey Wallace, best known as a leading man for many stars of the stage; Blythe Chapman, a famous actress of mother roles, and many others.

Back of the love story runs a gay panorama of the humorous life of a rural Indiana community of that day, where people had time to give many of their hours to entertaining themselves. The years are recalled with true fidelity to the period and much is done to the credit of Charles Ray by the photography of Gaetano Rinaldi. Mr. Ray's expert technical cameragraphy, coupled with his direction, gives the several of the book's finest pictures to his credit. Richard Rosson directed "The Girl I Loved."

Movie Chats and an Educational comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

NUGGETS BEAT EAST ENDS IN GAME MARKED BY ERRORS AND LOOSE PLAYING

In a very loose game at the Fairgrounds last evening the Nuggets defeated the East Ends in a game filled with errors on the part of the boys from Preston.

The first two innings, except for the second, passed very peacefully and the fans who had gathered, expecting to see a ball game, thought that their expectations were to be gratified.

After holding their opponents scoreless for two innings, the Nuggets proceeded to secure some runs. In this attempt they succeeded to the extent of two which were accumulated on hits by Harris, Madden and Connelly.

The next two innings passed uneventfully for both sides. It was in the fourth frame that Madden, after doing himself proud in his first trip to the plate, retired in favor of a promising candidate for his team. In the fifth inning the Nuggets became restless again and scored three times on three singles and an error.

Both teams were thrown out without a hit in the sixth inning. But in the seventh the East Ends scored their first tally on three singles. The Nuggets scored three more in the last of the seventh on a single and three errors. In this frame, Disco, the veteran right fielder of the East Ends distinguished himself by allowing a long fly to his position to bounce off his head and roll away for a home run by Fox.

The boys from Preston pushed one more tally across in the first of the eighth on two singles and a base on balls.

The two features were the pitching of Kelly who fanned 14 of the East Siders and the batting of Spaulding, who secured three hits in four trips to the plate. The score:

CUBS TAKE CLOSE GAME FROM BRAVES

Chicago, June 12.—Chicago made a clean sweep of the series with Boston today by taking the final game 12 to 11, and running its string of consecutive victories to seven. Hack Miller's great batting was largely responsible for the Cubs' victory as he drove in seven runs. In the fifth his first home run tied the score as three runners scored in front of him. On his next trip up, he drove in another run ahead of his second homer. The visitors rallied in the 9th when Kean blew up, and Russel was sent in to stop the scoring. He walked the first man he faced, filling the bases, but a fast play by Grantham and Hollocher retired the side. Score:

YALE CREWS HAVE LIGHT WORKOUT

Gales Ferry, Conn., June 12.—On Friday of this week F. V. Chappell, chairman of the Yale-Harvard regatta committee, accompanied by Coaches Leader and Muller, will make a final inspection of the four mile course which the crews will row over June 23. The course will be winding following the channel of the river, although a four mile straightaway is available. The course was made crooked in order that the outside crew might have no undue advantage because of eddies in the river.

This afternoon Coach Leader took the junior varsity over the four mile course and on the way back picked up the varsity taking it three miles down the river. The freshmen and the combination crew both had light workouts.

The "non-combatant" crew composed of various members of the camp not actively connected with the crews took to the water this afternoon and went a mile and a half down the river under the guidance of Baker Russell, boss in the varsity boat.

NEW LONDON BEATS TAFTVILLE IN TWELVE INNING GAME

New London revenged itself upon the Taftville A. A. with a scrappy game at Woodland Grove in New London Sunday, that went twelve innings, with both sides playing fast ball, and straining every nerve to gain the victory, the score being 4 to 3. Posick and Coyle were the battery for New London and Morin and Belair did the honors for the locals. The game was unusual in that neither pitcher walked a man, both of them performing in brilliant fashion, and putting up a game that it would be hard to equal for good, clean, and snappy ball playing. TENNIS STARS TO ENTER ILLINOIS TOURNEY

Chicago, June 12.—World figures in tennis will compete in the Illinois tennis championship tournament at the Skokie Country club here beginning July 2. Entries already announced are William T. Tilden, 2nd, national and state champion; Manuel Alonzo, the Spanish Davis club team star, and Miss Helen Wills, Youthful California star. R. Norris Williams, captain of the 1921 Davis cup team from the United States, plans to enter if his schedule can be so arranged, he has told officials.

Saints Beat Taftville

In the second played game with Taftville, the St. Patrick's school baseball team defeated the Taftville team by the score of 10 to 1. In the first game, St. Patrick's was defeated because of the lack of hitting ability. The battery for the winning team was Couture and Marks. Greeneville is now the only team St. Patrick's has to beat to get the pennant. The St. Patrick's team defeated Norwich Town by the score of 22 to 5 Monday afternoon.

SARAZEN FAILS TO QUALIFY FOR BRITISH OPEN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Troon, Scotland, June 12.—By The A. P.)—When the roll is called on the first tee of the old Troon course on Thursday for the starting of the British open championships, four American golfers who came to Scotland to compete in that tournament will be missing. The unhappy four, Aregene Sarazen, American open champion, Jim Barnes, who formerly held that title, T. D. Armour, of New York, and Charles Hoffner, of Philadelphia.

These players forfeited the opportunity to enter the contest for the title when they failed in the first and second rounds of the qualifying competition to play the type of game necessary to get into the list of the elect. As it turned out 159 strokes for the thirty-six holes were good enough, and not a stroke more. Sarazen and Barnes each took 160; Hoffner was two over the limit and Armour had three too many on his card.

Altogether six Americans have qualified. Three of them escaped the fate of failures by just one stroke. One of this trio was Walter Hagen, the present title holder, who squeezed into the tie for last place with 159 strokes only by courageous and successful efforts when all seemed lost. Yesterday he played miserably, and he began even worse today, but he played the last nine holes like the master shot he is, and qualified.

The other two Americans who scored 159 were Leo Diegel, of Washington, and Frank W. Clarke, of Asheville, N. C.

MacDonald Smith, of California, led all the overseas competitors with a score of 152, making 77 in the windriven rains today to add to the 75 he made yesterday, when stronger, but sun-warmed gusts, blew across the links.

John Farrell, of New York, put himself among the insiders with 154, and George Aulbach, of Boston, with 155.

Joe Kirkwood, the Australian champion, who now resides in the United States, repeated his Monday score of 76, and tied MacDonald Smith's score of 153.

The Veteran Harry Vardon also found conditions too terrible for him, and Roger Wethered, the British amateur champion, though worse yesterday than today, was never good enough to qualify. Aubrey Boomer, the former French title holder, also passed out.

Abe Mitchell, George Duncan, Edward Ray, Alexander Her, J. H. Taylor, Cyril Tolley and other topnotchers in British golf all came through successfully.

AMERICAN GOLFERS HAVE HARD LUCK AGAINST ENGLAND

New York, June 12.—(By The A. P.)—The jinx that has beset American golf champions, amateur and professional alike in their attempts to storm the British Royal and Ancient Heights, followed the footsteps of Gene Sarazen today when the youthful United States open title holder failed by one stroke to qualify for the open championship at Troon, Scotland.

In the scope of years since Walter J. Travis in 1904, scored America's only triumph in the British amateur title event, ten Yankee title holders have gone down to disastrous defeat. The professional spell has been broken during the past two years by Jock Hutchinson and Walter Hagen but the Eagle can boast of few successes over the Lion outside of these.

This year the hoodoo struck twice in succession, but for a few weeks ago Jess Sweetzer, young amateur champion, was put out in the first round of the British classic at Deal.

Most of the Yankees, records show, have fallen by the wayside before the opening barrage has ceased. Jerome Travers, former amateur king, twice was put out in the first round of the British amateur classic, first in 1909 and again in 1914. The latter year also witnessed the signal failure of Francis Ouimet, fresh from his great triumph over Vardon and Ray in the United States open of 1913, in both the British amateur and open championships.

Chick Evans went as far as the fifth round in 1911 but reached no better than the third ten years later. Jess Guilford, the Boston siege gun, wet his Waterloo in the first round in 1921 at the hands of Cyril Tolley; Ouimet lasted only until the second round the same year and Robert Gardner, of Chicago, who came the nearest to duplicating Travis' feat by forcing Tolley to the 37th hole of the final match in 1920 to win, was eliminated in the first round this year.

Until the last few years, the pro stars fared no better than the amateurs. Jack McDermott, first American homebred to win the United States open title, failed to qualify in the British open event of 1912, Hagen, taking his first shot at the Anglo crown in 1920, qualified but finished 55th in the championship play.

On top of Sarazen's performance this year, Jim Barnes, who held the American throne in 1921 and has finished well toward the top in the British tournament for the past three years, also failed to qualify.

JOHNSTON AND MALLORY WIN THEIR MATCHES YESTERDAY

Beckenham, England, June 12.—(By the A. P.)—William M. Johnston and Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, the two most prominent Americans entered, won their matches today in the Kent lawn tennis championships.

In the first round of the men's singles, Johnston's opponent defaulted and in the second round he defeated Sir G. A. Thomas, 6-0, 6-1. Mrs. Mallory won from Miss S. J. Johnston, 6-0, 6-1 in the fourth round in the women's singles.

Miss Eleanor Goss, American, was defeated by Miss Elizabeth Ryan, formerly of California, 7-5, 6-1 in the third round after she had survived the second by winning from Mrs. Steadman 6-1, 6-0. Miss Ryan defeated Miss Donaldson 6-1, 6-4 in the second round.

In the men's doubles Johnston paired with Wallis Myers of England defeated Findlay Smith and L. Beadle 6-1, 6-2.

WILLIE RITCHIE ENTERS PUGILISTIC LISTS AGAIN

New York, June 12.—Willie Ritchie, christened Geary A. Steffen, former world lightweight boxing champion, is back in the pugilistic lists, seeking to gather a bit of the fame he knew before Freddie Welsh took the title from him in a 20-round engagement in London in 1914.

The former champion obtained from the state athletic commission a license to box.

Ritchie became titleholder in 1912 when Referee Jim Griffin awarded him the decision over Ad Wolgast on a foul in the sixteenth round of their engagement. He lost the crown to Welsh on a decision by Referee Eugene Corri after 20 rounds of milling at the Olympia, in London.

Welsh dropped the title to Benny Leonard, the present lightweight champion by a decision after 20 rounds of milling at the Polo grounds in New York.

Ritchie in 1918 at Newark, N. J., knocking out the San Franciscan in the eighth round.

N. Y. COMMISSION TO ENFORCE ITS RULES

New York, June 12.—Clarification of its regulations designed to force boxing champions to defend their titles at least once every six months was made by the New York state boxing commission at a meeting today.

The commission announced that it would not accept challenges until within 20 days of the expiration of the six months period after a champion either has won his title or defended it in a decision bout. The champion is given ten days to accept and is prohibited from meeting any other boxer until he gets into the ring with the challenger recognized by the commission.

The champion's license will be rescinded if he declines the challenge. Any boxer meeting him anywhere after he has been placed in the "black list" will be treated similarly. Should the deposed champion ultimately agree to meet his challenger he must do so as challenger, and not as the title holder.

NO ONE ALLOWED IN DEMPSEY CAMP

Great Falls, Mont., June 12.—(By the A. P.)—The camp of world's champion Jack Dempsey today was strongly reminiful of the training establishment maintained two years ago at Manhasset, Long Island, by Georges Carpentier.

The "Not at Home" was hung up on the dilapidated gate in front of Dempsey's cottage. Two guards frowned upon all comers, even newspaper men being denied entry. Jack Dempsey was resting, all were told, and was not to be disturbed.

Groups of men and women hung over the barb wire entanglements and waited for the champion to put in an appearance but the only person they saw was the giant negro sparring partner, George Godfrye, who deserted camp and came to town for a visit. Dempsey remained in his house all the afternoon.

SUB BASE TEAM TO PLAY HERE SUNDAY

The Submarine Base ball team, conquerors of the Georgetown University team in a close game, will be the attraction at the Fairgrounds on Sunday. There has been much talk regarding a game between the Norwich team and the Sailors and it was after much difficulty that Manager O'Leary was able to arrange the game. The Sub Base team is one of the best service teams on the Atlantic coast and has beaten practically everything that has come its way.

MOVING THE COAL.

The fact finding commission that is wrestling with the coal situation is getting much advice and it is interesting to note that an appeal has been made to it by a special committee of the American Railway association in which there is urged better cooperation with the railroads by the mine operators, coal dealers and consumers that there may be avoided the quantity movement of coal during a small part of the year, when it is possible to distribute it over a much longer period to the advantage of all concerned.

What the association is seeking is well illustrated by the statement to the effect that the operators of mines in 1920 asked for cars sufficient to move $18,000,000 tons of coal while there was a production of but 569,000,000 tons.

It is of course an old story as to what happens when there is a small movement of coal during the spring and summer months and the requirements of the coal burners have to be met. Shortages that are real are bad enough, but those which are created by the failure to move the coal supply while there is time and when conditions are most favorable are deplorable.

If the railway association can bring this matter to attention with sufficient emphasis to bring about a correction of this situation it will have accomplished a much needed service. There are but few seasons when the early movement in coal could not be accomplished. For the railroads to hold sufficient cars available for handling the entire production within a short time would mean a tremendous expenditure for equipment that would be out of use much of the year, whereas with a proper distribution of the tonnage over the best part of the year it would overcome difficulties in hauling coal and yet leave available certain potions of the equipment for the handling of the grain crops in the fall.

The idea is not a new one, but it is one that is well grounded and would be beneficial if adopted.

THE AUSTRIAN LOAN.

There was an important significance in the fact that the United States had decided to enlist with other countries in furnishing Austria with the money necessary to permit it to carry on in its peaceful reconstruction. There is even greater significance in the fact that that portion of the loan which had been assigned to this country was subscribed in a quarter of an hour and there was a wild clamor on the part of many others for participation therein, to the extent that it might have been subscribed several times over.

This it is to be remembered is a loan to a country in which the first fires of the war started, which put its whole strength into the conflict, which has been dismembered since the war and which has suffered therefrom possibly as no other both as to conditions prevailing therein and its credit.

It isn't because of the part that Austria played in the war or the sacrifices that it made to win against the allies that develops such an eagerness to aid it financially. In the first place it is a loan at a good rate of interest which has been guaranteed by other European countries, but back of it there is the attitude which has been manifested by Austria itself. It has not only recognized the fact that it is a defeated nation but it has shown a willingness to make whatever sacrifices are necessary to get back onto its feet. It has developed confidence among the other nations as is manifested by the guarantees. It has gone through a test that has shown that to be justified.

Austria has done that very important thing that shows it to be worthy of further aid and encouragement. It is not out of the deep water and it will not be for some time, but it has demonstrated that it is entitled to assistance such as is being given and from its conduct during what might be regarded as a probationary period it will make the best use of the chance it is being given to avoid bankruptcy and continue as a nation.

OPIUM PRODUCTION.

One of the great obstacles to the reduction in the amount of Habit-forming drugs used is the great quantity that is smuggled into the country. Restrictions on their manufacture and sale would bring satisfactory results, or at least much more satisfactory results, were it possible to cut off the large amount that is brought into the country in violation of the law.

Some countries take a much different view than this country relative to the production of opium. They are diectly or indirectly concerned in such production, so that when it is advocated that there be a decided curtailment in the amount produced, and that it be restricted to the amount that would be required for legitimate purposes different views are bound to be taken.

It is nevertheless significant, however, that the use of opium for smoking purposes, which is referred to as the American plan, gets the approval in principle of the league of nations' committee on habit-forming drugs. American delegates to that conference, under direction of the department of state, insisted that the way to bring about the suppression of the illicit traffic was through the limitation of production to what is required for medical and scientific uses.

Some countries may look upon the smoking of opium in a different manner than we do. They may take the position that used in moderation there is no cause for suppressing it, and under such circumstances it can be appreciated that it is bound to develop a greater opposition to interference with production, whether it is intended for consumption at home or abroad.

Approving the American plan in principle does not mean the carrying out of the idea. It does indicate a recognition of the merits of the proposition, and with the direction of more thought to it for the purpose of serving humanity at home and elsewhere it is possible that in time there may be an adoption of the idea in keeping with the needs. Curtailed production would have its effect both upon the quantity available and the price at which the dope could be obtained.

CHINA'S DUTY.

Throughout the world there will be received with a high degree of satisfaction the news that the prisoners who have been held by Chinese bandits have been released. It is action for which there has been persistent demand and no small amount of anxiety. The threats of the bandits to kill their captives was not carried out, although the treatment they have experienced none will have any desire to repeat.

The situation that prevails in China is one which calls for the application of the necessary remedy. It is a situation which can easily grow worse if allowed to pass without further action.

The need has been to bring about the freedom of the captives. That having been accomplished the time is ripe for bringing the proper degree of pressure upon China that will make a repetition less probable. China has been greatly injured by this affair. It will be given a wide berth by many who would otherwise have spent much time and money there. It plainly calls for a demonstration of the fact as to whether banditry or a responsible government is going to control the affairs of that country in the future. The result of the present government situation has been clearly set forth. A divided nation should require no better example of what unity can and should prevent. Not only the peaceful and protective needs of China have been set forth but the importance of keeping China in the good graces of the rest of the world has been set forth.

United representations on the part of other nations can now be expected to be made to China in their insistence upon safeguards against more or worse situations of the same character. China needs a united and responsible government. It has a plain duty.

RAILROAD STRUCTURES.

It is by experiments and experience that we progress. Time and again it has been demonstrated as the result of a serious fire, if not before, that a certain type of construction is inadvisable, that greater precautions should have been taken against a conflagration or that fireproof or some different type of construction should have been resorted to in the first place.

The destruction of the Pennsylvania train shed in Philadelphia makes certain that it will not be rebuilt in the manner and of the same material as it was. It no doubt created surprise that a fire in such a place could get such a headway as to destroy it and cause so much damage and yet it is surprising that the roof of such a structure should not have been of fire proof material, to say nothing of the flooring.

Train sheds of that type represent construction of other days. Had it been wise to tear it down and reconstruct another at that point previous to the fire it is doubtful if another of the same character would have been built. There has been received the benefit of the experiment of such construction and now the experience of a fire of big proportions therein. They are bound to be taken into consideration in connection with reconstruction work, and other communities will bear them in mind when occasion arises for the construction of new stations or terminals. Railroad stations infrequently burn but there is wisdom in protecting them against fire quite the same as observing that same precaution regarding other buildings.

Preparations this week will be devoted to getting ready for Fathers' day the 17th.

Perhaps the most surprising thing in connection with the overthrow of the Bulgarian government is that it was accomplished without a liberal shedding of blood.

With the Elks offering to improve about 1000 acres of idle state-owned land in New York city, the big municipality may be able to indulge in another boost in salaries.

It is said to cost $1.80 to go from New York to Washington by flivver airplane. But most people prefer to take a little more time and be sure of getting there even if it costs more.

There are those who might go to Russia and bring home reports that would be received with more credence than will be the case with some members of congress now there.

The idea of providing farms for the negroes who have left the south is not bad. It is in agriculture that they are valuable and needed but it is the south that they can do their best work on the farms.

LATENESS OF KENNETH

Because of a fugitive dimple in Elsa's cheek, an elusive sparkle in her eye, Kenneth suspected that she had a secret. He was puzzled, too, that he found her in such good spirits. Twenty minutes late—and not one word of reproach! On the contrary, as he ran up the steps of the Art institute to meet her she smiled adorably—not at him, precisely, but over his head—out into the procession of motor cars that streamed past.

"You should have waited inside." He squeezed the arm he had taken to pilot her through a crossing, and added, contritely, "Sorry I'm late, little girl."

"It didn't matter a bit. I've had a lovely time. I wasn't cold. And I've been inside. I got here at 11 and spent an hour in the Chinese rooms. A gorgeous hour, Ken."

"Tell me."

"At lunch. It's a long story."

After the menu was disposed of and the rolls and butter brought, he reminded her. Again that dimple. There was something! "Make a clean breast of it, Kitten," he advised. "You've been up to some mischief or other. Whom did you meet in the Chinese rooms?"

"Buddha," said Elsa quietly, the dimple disappearing. "I always go in to see him when I have time. There's a wonderful family shrine, in the room at the left of the stairs, on the second floor. Gold lacquer and delicate metal work—and the most exquisite wood carving—dragons and birds and flowers—in the door panels. No two alike. Think of the years of loving skill that were given to make it so beautiful, and the prayers of countless generations that have blessed it. It all seemed to focus in the central figure; Buddha, standing, rising from a lotus blossom, with one hand raised palm outward and closed eyes. Peace slides into your heart while you look. There's a bench right in front of it. I like to go and sit there."

"And you sat there till your cheeks got peony-pink and your eyes snapped with fun? Try again, Kitten."

"I sat there till a voice behind me, a quiet, kind sort of man's voice, said, as if half to me and half to himself: 'Who wouldn't worship his gods in an atmosphere of such beauty?'"

"And you said?"

"I spoke softly, too—the way you do things are very lovely. I suppose if you dropped on your knees in front of it and touched your forehead to the floor you might be arrested. But I always want to.'

"'I have always wanted to, myself!' he answered. And he came around the end of the bench and sat down by me."

"What kind was he?"

"Our kind. About 35. Maybe 40. Brown hair, just touched with gray. Blue eyes. Quite tall."

"Then what?"

"We talked about Chinese religions His has been everywhere — knows everything. He says beauty is the only thing in life that never disappoints us. He often comes to that bench—just as I do."

"You'll take me with you next time?"

"I'd love it—if you'd care to. But you're always so bored by art."

"I've underestimated its possibilities. What next?"

"Next he said there was some rather unusual jade in a case in the next room, and we went and looked at it. Then he spoke of a picture he liked and it happened to be a favorite of mine. We decided it must be the north coast of France, because of the rocks and the cloudy sky. The women look like the Breton women, too, he said."

"He seems to know."

"Oh, yes. Ever so many things. I told you it was a gorgeous hour. He knows China, India, Egypt—the most fascinating person! I could hardly believe it was 12 o'clock. I said I had a luncheon appointment, and went out to wait for you. And you didn't come."

"Go on, Elsa."

"After fifteen minutes he came through the revolving doors. He saw me standing there. He raised his hat and his eyebrows—not too much. Just enough.

"I said: 'He's late, you see.' He said: 'He should be punished. He fails to appreciate his blessings.'

"I said: 'He will be punished if he is not here in five minutes. I shall go away.' He said: 'I'll wait on the other side of Michigan boulevard for five minutes—or infinitely longer, if you will let me. And if he doesn't come in five minutes may I cross the street again? Or will you?'

"And I said: 'If he doesn't come in five minutes I will meet you on the isle of safety.'"

"Else!"

"You've been late so often, Ken."

"Well— And then?"

"And then you came. You passed him, crossing the street. He saw you run up the steps to me and he tipped his hat and walked north up the boulevard."

Kenneth looked steadily at his wife and spoke softly, the way you do when things are very lovely.

"I won't be late again, Kitten. Or bored by art."

"If I felt sure of that," said Elsa—and here was the dimple again—"I'd tell you something more."

"Tell me."

"I knew you wouldn't be five minutes later. I saw you coming, a block away."—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Queen's Lesson for Children's Day

Mr. Editor: It may be, in this country where "all men are created equal" that a queen's word may go no farther than an ordinary citizen's, but even if it goes that far, it is worthy of attention. Perhaps, after all, in this our region of "equality" we lose a little of the ambition that inheres in "quality", and prompts the humble to aspire to nobility and to its attainment as an ideal.

The queen to be spoken of here reigns over an empire on which the sun never sets, and therefore her words are fashioned to enter into the hearts of children under a vast circle of conditions, and this, in part, is what makes her message the more important to us.

Recently, Great Britain has celebrated what is called Empire day, on which occasion both king and queen offered a special message to the children of the empire. As the lamented Lincoln would say "this is eminently befitting," and especially that of the queen, at this our Children's day season. The text of which we give verbatim here. Reading a trifle of variation between the lines we can surely find it fits into our conditions and into our hearts, if it is Queen Mary, but it is suggestive of other Marys noble in history, our own as well.

The Queen's Message

The queen said:—

"On this day of memory and hope, which is also the birthday of good Queen Victoria, this is my message to you the daughters of our world-wide family of nations and peoples.

"Think always of what you can do to make your homes happy, and how you can best prepare yourselves to make happy homes for the generations of children which will follow you. In our vast empire there are many kinds of homes and many different customs. The home which fosters clean minds and kind hearts is God's temple, and the spirit of the good home, whether it be rich or poor, is one of the best things in the world.

"You can learn many lessons at school which will help you to become wise and useful citizens of the British commonwealth, but you can learn and practice nothing better for yourselves and all members of the great British family than the simple lessons of love kindness, and unselfishness, which in cloud or sunshine are the strength and beauty of life."

"MARY"

Mr. Editor, at the risk of prolonging this letter beyond the limit intended or the limit of your courtesy, a reminiscence comes of an address delivered in Sunday school days by a colored clergyman from the south, from the state of Virginia. He was enforcing the virtue and beauty of obedience to parents and he said, there was a woman in the town he came from who was known as "Johnnie's Mother." That, he thought, implied a compliment to both Johnnie and his mother, and suggested to him two others, Mary, the mother of Washington, and Mary, the Mother of Jesus.

Trusting some words in this letter may find lodgment in some heart, we append,

Yours respectfully,

JOHN FROLAND.

The Shriners in Washington

Mr. Editor:—Seneca moralizing on man and his morals said, "Few words with gentleness and efficacy are best; the misery is, that the wise do not need counsel and fools will not take it."

So be it, here are a few words on the Shriners who have come and gone and will come and go as long as time rolls on. Other cities in the future will throw open their gates and bid the noble conclave a hearty welcome, probably there never will be a gathering of this ancient organization that can or will surpass this one under the shadow of the greatest capital city in the world. For brilliantcy of coloring; for spectacular parades and artistic pageants; for unique masquerading of ancient nations; for burlesque frolicing; for innocent mirth it will stand as an object lesson to the world that the noble order of Shriners of 1923 did not need alcoholic drinks to inspire goodfellowship and "a mile of songs" as they tripped the "fantastic toe" down the brilliantly lighted avenue which led to their national capitol.

It is doubtful if this ancient Arabic order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine ever passed a week more replete with innocent merriment and all-round pleasure, crowned with all that pomp, color and music could lend to its perfection and not a drunken man had been seen on the streets of Washington during this week of jollification, so report saith.

It is generally acknowledged that this gathering of the Shriners is a monument to prohibition. One Washington paper said: "Not a drunk to be seen, which could not be said of former inaugurations and parades." Let us give generously where it is due to prohibition and to the officials who did so effectually their duty.

These 40,000 Shriners from the north and the south, from the east and the west can if they will bear witness to the truth that prohibition does prohibit when and where the law is enforced.

Wives of Famous Men

Fanny Burt, Wife of Count Von Moltke

A beautiful picture of the love that existed between Count von Moltke, the great German military strategist, and his wife, who was the daughter of an English father and a German mother, is given in the record of events after her death. When she breathed her last on Christmas eve, 1868, after 20 years of perfect domestic happiness, he built a mausoleum, situated upon an eminence, embowered in foliage. In front of the altar in this simple little chapel was a finely carved figure of the Lord in an attitude of blessing. Above were inscribed the words:

"Love is the fulfillment of Thy law."

At the time of the general's bereavement, George Bancroft, then American ambassador at Berlin, met von Moltke on horseback.

"To my surprise," said the historian, "he at once began a lively conversation, describing the happiness with which he had been blessed by his wife and expatiating upon her manifold virtues. Then of a sudden he became silent, as if a new current of thought had carried him away. 'Do you know,' he said, when his lips were again opened, 'it has just been brought home to me that after all it was better that this happened now than at another time. I am convinced that a French invasion is impending; it will burst upon us sooner or later. Now, think, if the fortune of war was to be adverse to our arms! Why, her grief over her country's adversities would have cut her life short. No, no; that would have been worse.'"

CHILD TRAINING.

The Practical Value of Story Telling.

By Mary Collins Terry.

"No, I don't want to take my nap." A fretful and tired little boy screwed his body around on one foot and beat the air with his fists. It was the result of the usual announcement that nap-time had come, and was being met by more than the usual amount of resistance.

"Why, Teddy, you always take a nap after lunch, dear. Come, mother is tired and wants you to come quickly." The voice was patient but persistent.

"N-o-o-s-o." The word went off in a wail, and a blue-rompered figure plumped itself on the floor, prepared to battle it, out.

A timely inspiration seized the mother, who had been a kindergartner and knew the value of a story. She stopped and gathered the little fellow in her arms.

The hot little hands and face were washed. "As soon as we get ready for bed, mother is going to tell you about the little pigs."

"Don't want to go to sleep," wailed the rebellious little boy as he was lowered into his crib, paying no attention to the promise of a story.

The mother sat down by the bed and plunged into the most interesting part of the age honored "Three Pigs." Imprisoning one little hand, she emphasized "And he huffed and he puffed and he blew the house in."

The rigid body began to relax and the swimming blue eyes were fastened on her face in rest.

The next little pig made a house of bricks and so on to the story's end.

There was a sigh of satisfaction when she finished, and the pleased little voice said "Mo—re story, mamma."

"Not now, son," she answered as she tucked him in, "but perhaps tonight when you go to bed mother will tell you another."

"Aw-wight," he said, and made no objection as she tiptoed from the room.

This little incident only illustrates the very practical value of the use of the story in child life. I know of another mother who is using stories of the knights and ancient heroes to present to her little son some higher ideal than that being presented by his father whom he adores, but whose faults the mother does not wish him to copy.

The story is flexible. It may be woven from the incidents of the daily life of the child. Wisely used, the mother can bring about in a natural way results that otherwise might be difficult to obtain.

As a clever writer has put it, "Children are like rivers. It is impossible to stop them, but comparatively easy to change their course.

Children Questions.

Grandmamma set Matthew more examples for her knee. The child is taken large for his three and a half years and the mother warned his grandmamma that she ought not to hold him, but grandmamma clutched him tightly in her arms. Then he reckon after cracker. Then stroked his grandmamma's wrinkled face. "Grannie," came his piping voice suddenly, "how did you get all those car tracks on your face?"

Nothing is easier to bear than the troubles of your neighbors.

WHITE WAY AND ALL APPROPRIATIONS ARE VOTED BY ANNUAL CITY MEETING

After voting all appropriations regular and extra, with the exception of an item of $2,400 for an office building at the Yantic cemetery which was disapproved, the city meeting at the town hall Tuesday night voted a city tax of 25 mills, an increase of four and a quarter mills over the city tax laid last year which was 20 3-4 mills. The macadam repair item was increased $2,000 for the purpose of providing for repairs on Oneco street.

The white way appropriation met with stubborn opposition from G. Warren Davis who said he did not see the need for it, but nevertheless it passed along with the rest of the appropriations. Most of the discussion of the evening centered about the white way. Opposition to the white way project developed early in the meeting when Martin E. Jensen made an attempt to increase the street lighting appropriation by $3,000, the additional appropriation being intended for the purpose of maintaining the white way after it is installed.

Mr. Davis opposed the additional $2,000 appropriation for street lighting and as a result of the opposition Mr. Jensen withdrew his motion. An item of $5,000 listed under the G. and E. expenses for the installation of the new lighting system came in for strong opposition from Mr. Davis but the item was finally adopted.

It developed during the discussion that the installation of the white way would have no effect on the tax rate whatever as the gas and electric department already has the money and were only asking permission from the citizens to use it for the white way improvement. The only expense to the citizens, as far as the tax rate is concerned, is the $2,000 appropriation made later in the meeting for the maintainance of the new lighting system after it is installed. Mr. Davis voiced no opposition to the $2,000 maintenance appropriation listed under the "extras."

The city meeting which had an attendance of about 500 was called to order at 8 o'clock, daylight time, by His Honor, Mayor Milo R. Waters. City Clerk Weston C. Pullen read the warning for the meeting and list of appropriations before the meeting for action.

Oneco Street Repairs.

When the meeting reached the item for macadam repairs, which was listed as $9,000 under the department of public works, Edward Kirby moved that the $9,000 be increased to $11,000 and that the extra $2,000 be used for the improvement of Oneco street. The motion prevailed.

Cemetery Appropriation Cut.

The appropriation for the department of cemeteries was cut $2,400, which amount was listed as a reappropriation for an office building at Yantic cemetery. The $10,000 appropriation for the general expense of the cemetery department went through without opposition.

When the mayor read the $2,400 appropriation for the cemetery building John Holland, a resident of the Falls, stated that in the past the cemetery has rented the building which houses the present office at a monthly rental of $20. He said that he understood that the building can be purchased. He offered a motion that the city continue to rent the building at $20 a month.

Mayor Waters called Mr. Holland's attention to the fact that the discussion was on the adoption or rejection of the appropriation. Mr. Holland then offered a motion that the appropriation be disapproved. The appropriation was disapproved on a yes and no vote.

The next item that caused a discussion was the $22,000 appropriation for street lighting listed under police department expenses. Martin E. Jensen, one of the gas and electric commissioners, moved that this item be increased to $24,000. He said he felt the money would be well spent.

G. Warren Davis inquired as to what the purpose the extra $2,000 was intended.

Mr. Jensen in answer stated that the extra $2,000 was for the cost of maintaining the white way which the commission planned to install in the center of the city.

Mr. Davis then wanted to know what the police department has to do with street lighting and was promptly informed by the mayor that the city charter provides for the listing of the street lighting item under police department expenses.

No Need for White Way.

Mr. Davis said that he appreciated the fact that there may be need for the white way but that he could not see need for the white way. He said he could not support with his vote the extra $2,000.

Edward T. Connelly stated that he disagreed with what Mr. Davis had said in regard to the white way. He felt that the gas and electric commission were willing to install the white way that it ought to be supported by the meeting. He said it is a good thing to have.

Mr. Davis said he couldn't support any white way when "we have our present rather good system." Two thousand dollars is only a beginning, he said. Mr. Jensen, continued Mr. Davis, says that it is only the maintenance expense for half a year. Nobody has told us how much the white way is going to cost or how many lamps there are to be. He pointed out that further down on the list was an appropriation of $15,000 for the white way.

"You are all wrong," said Mr. Jensen, taking exception to some of Mr. Davis' statements.

"Mr. Davis has the floor," said Mayor Waters.

"Am I out of order?" asked Mr. Jensen.

"You are," answered the mayor.

Mr. Jensen then arose to a point of order but Mayor Waters stated that the question was not on the white way but on the street lighting appropriation. He said Mr. Jensen's point of order was not well taken.

Motion Withdrawn by Mr. Jensen.

Mr. Jensen then withdrew his motion for the additional $2,000 and the second was also withdrawn. The street lighting item as it originally stood ($22,000) was voted.

Clarence E. Carpenter started to make a statement in defense of the gas and electric commission, during which he stated that the commissioners received not one cent of salary, when the mayor interrupted him to say that the matter in question had nothing to do with the gas and electric commission but was in the police department.

Wanted to Increase Milk Inspector's Salary.

When the mayor read off the $700 appropriation for the milk inspector, Mr. Davis offered a motion increasing the milk inspector's salary to $2,000. Corporation Counsel William H. Shields, Jr., stated that this matter is fixed by statute.

The item of $573,416.67 for the operating exenses and improvements at the gas and electric plant next came in for discussion. Mr. Davis said that this figure was quite an increase over the figure last year. He wanted to know if it were possible that the amount as listed included in any way the $15,000 for the white way.

Mayor Waters informed Mr. Davis that it did not and that the item applied only to the operation and improvement of the gas and electric department.

Opposed to White Way.

Listed under the expenses of the gas and electric department was an item of $15,000 for the much talked of white way. When this item was read by the mayor for action by the meeting strong opposition was voiced by Mr. Davis. Mr. Davis stated that the white way had been spoken of as something of a gift from the gas and electric commissioners. These gentlemen are not going to build it out of their own pockets, he said.

We (meaning the gas and electric commissioners) have the money, said Mr. Jensen. If you build it, or if you don't build it, your taxes won't be changed one sou, he said. (Applause.) The only way it will affect the tax is that we ask you for $2,000 for maintenance. Mr. Jensen said that if the $15,000 appropriation wasnt voted the gas and electric department would hold on to the money.

"If Mr. Jensen has $15,000, why doesn't he pay some of the bonded indebtedness?" asked T. C. Murphy.

"Mayor Murphy, if you are not talking on the white way, you will have to take your seat," said Mayor Waters. The mayor then asked Mr. Davis to continue his remarks. Mr. Davis said he would try to.

"If we didn't have any lighting system, or if there were oil lamps, I don't think I would say a word," said Mr. Davis. "We have a very good lighting system," he continued. "Can I get an electric light in my home by simply applying to the gas and electric commissioners? No. I cannot, because conditions are such that they cannot give it to me. If I did get it, and put through the necessary construction it would cost me about $400." In closing he said he hoped he had made it clear that he was opposed to the Great White Way.

To Pay $30,000 on Debt.

With reference to Mr. Murphy's remarks Mr. Jensen said, "You speak of using our money to pay off our debts. We are asking tonight and are going to pay off $30,000 on our debt. We would like to eliminate the White Way but of our earnings I will vote for it."

Herbert M. Lerou spoke in favor of the white way appropriation. He referred to the meeting of two years ago when the white way was placed on the list of appropriations. The year, he said, the gas and electric commissioners have come forward and included it in their budget. All we can expect from the gas and electric commission is service. We are in a position now to get this service. Mr. Lerou said it had been his privilege last year to travel some 15,000 miles and that he had not visited any city half the size of Norwich but what has this improvement. He hoped the appropriation would prevail because it is in the interests of the city.

Trading Center for Eastern Connecticut

H. M. Gallup said he approved of all Mr. Lerou said. We want to make this city attractive. We are the trading center of 60,000 or 70,000 people in eastern Connecticut. They are attracted, more or less, by what we show them.

Mr. Gallup went on to speak of the white way in New London. Let us have this white way on our Main street, he said in closing.

Russell W. Clapp spoke in favor of the appropriation. Mr. Gallup has hit the nail on the head, he said. Continuing, he said that when a business concern is faced by competition it does not lay down. It advertises. He hoped the appropriation would pass.

As We Were in 1659.

James J. Sheridan also favored the appropriation. Mr. Sheridan said he votes for what he thinks the city ought to have. The trouble with the city meetings, he said, was that it was not a question of what the city requires but how little the city can get along on. He raised a laugh when he suggested that the historic signboards bearing the year "1659" be placed on Main street or Franklin square, to let the people know that we are still as we were in 1659. Prolonged applause greeted Mr. Sheridan's remarks.

As the discussion came to a close, Mr. Davis moved that the vote be taken by check list.

Mr. Murphy said that it was pretty hard to ask all the people in the hall to pass by the chair and register their votes by check list.

Mr. Davis then withdrew his motion and a yea and no vote was taken. The appropriation was passed.

As soon as the white way matter had been disposed of the meeting lost its interest for a number of those present and quite a number left the hall.

All "Extras" Voted.

All the extras, totaling $64,600, were voted as listed. Among the more important provisions are the macadamizing of Central avenue, West Main street from Thames square to the city line and Elmwood avenue, and $2,000 for the maintenance of the new white way.

The first item on the list of extras was a $5,000 appropriation for equipment for the street department. Mr. Davis asked if this item hadn't been taken care of earlier in the meeting by the passing of a similar appropriation for the same purpose listed under the public works expenses.

Corporation Counsel Shields stated that the public works department had asked for $10,000 and that $5,000 had been placed with the regular appropriations and $5,000 with the extras.

Mr. Lerou moved that the appropriation be passed and his motion prevailed.

The next six extras were passed in quick order but there was some discussion on the eighth, an item of $27,000 for the construction of a sewer in Brook and North streets.

Charles L. Stewart appeared in behalf of the property owners interested in the sewer and urged the adoption of the appropriation. He said that the people living on the streets which would be affected by the new sewer have no sewer accommodations whatever.

Mr. Murphy said the meeting ought to be careful in making this appropriation as it might place a heavy burden on some of the property owners affected through assessment.

Mr. Carpenter spoke in favor of the appropriation, as did two or three of the property owners interested in the sewer. Henry Gebrath, speaking in favor of the appropriation, said that conditions are such that in the spring of the year the cesspools there overflow. Those people are in need of the sewer for sanitary purposes, he said.

Mr. Murphy said he was glad to hear the expressions of the people living there.

Let's give these people the sewer, they need it, said Mr. Gallup. The appropriation was then made by the meeting.

Tax Rate 25 Mills.

The usual resolutions, authorizing the common council to make the appropriations passed at the meeting, and authorizing the borrowing of money by the city in anticipation of the taxes, were adopted by ballot, the clerk being instructed to cast one ballot in favor of each resolution.

A resolution abating certain taxes on the 1919 list as uncollectible was adopted, as was also a resolution abating the sprinkling assessments for last year. By a statute adopted at the general assembly street sprinkling charges are now listed in the general expenses.

A resolution fixing the tax rate at 25 mills was adopted by ballot, the clerk being authorized to cast the ballot, and the collector's compensation was fixed at the usual rate, 1 per cent. of the tax collected.

The meeting adjourned about 9.30 o'clock.

AWARDS COTTRELL WIDOW $100 ALLOWANCE INCREASE

Judge George E. Hinman in the superior court here Tuesday handed down decisions in the appeal from probate brought by Leone Balfe Cottrell from the will of her husband, the late Edgar H. Cottrell, millionaire manufacturer of Pawcatuck, Stonington. Judge Hinman grants the widow a maintenance allowance for herself and four minor children of $300 a week from the estate of her husband.

In the Stonington probate court, Mrs. Cottrell was granted $250 a week which was later raised to $400 a week. In the action before the superior court, upon which Judge Hinman has just rendered his decision she asked for $700 a week.

In his memorandum of decision Judge Hinman says:

In view of the well established nature of our statutory allowance for support, the paramount consideration is, what sum is required to meet the necessities of a reasonable continuance, pending settlement of the estate, of the support to widow and children furnished them by the husband and father before his death.

No doubt it appeared to the probate court, at the time when the amount of the allowance appealed from was fixed, that the sum prescribed would and should be sufficient for such negessities. It is satisfactorily established, however, in the light of experience under said allowance, that the amount is not entirely adequate to the expenses reasonably to be incurred in supporting the family in a manner commensurate with the scale of living maintained before Mr. Cottrell's death, appropriate to their station in life. The sum paid income of the estate, and giving consideration to the needs, wants and the ability to earn, reasonable sums of maintaining children in school, travel, and other occasions for expense.

It is conceived to be the duty of this court, on this appeal, to determine the amount reasonably necessary to provide such support and to make allowance of such a sum as will be sufficient therefore. On the other hand it is the desire and intent to grant no more than will be required for proper expenses of such support as distinguished from current expenses of litigation instituted by the widow, or in behalf of the children, adversely to the estate, or other similar expenditures.

Upon the evidence presented $300 per week is considered sufficient to cover legitimate present expenses of family support. If changing conditions render this amount inadequate in the future doubtless additional allowance will be made by the probate court on proper application and showing of the necessity of such increase.

Judgment may enter setting aside the order and decree appealed from, and allowing the sum of $300 per week from date of judgment for support of the widow and children.

Mother Not Guardian Ad Litem.

In another decision upon the application to have a guardian ad litem appointed for the children, Edgar H. Jr., Elizabeth, Leone and Nicholas, Judge Hinman decides that neither the mother nor Charles P. Cottrell nor Arthur M. Cottrell are such disinterested persons for this appointment as the statutes contemplates and he grants the request for a further hearing.

His memorandum of decision says:

It appears to the court that it is for the best interests of the minors involved in these appeals that they have some disinterested person other than their mother, to be their guardian ad litem to represent them in the proceedings for or pertaining to the settlement of their father's estate. This conclusion is based upon an apparent possible conflict of interest between the mother, as the widow of the deceased father, and said minors, especially in view of the election of said widow to decline to accept the provisions of the will in lieu of her statutory share and to claim said statutory share, and her action in appealing, for herself and as next friend of said minors, from the admission to probate of the will. The minors are entitled to independent and disinterested advice as to whether such lack of community of interest in fact exists, and if it does, to have representation conducive to their best interests.

The persons appointed by the probate as guardians ad litem—Charles P. Cottrell and Arthur M. Cottrell, especially the former, by virtue of their position as executors, and the interest of said Charles P. Cottrell under the will, are not regarded as such disinterested persons as the statute contemplates.

Further hearing will be granted counsel as to the selection of some disinterested person to be appointed guardian ad litem.

No Guardian of Children's Estates.

Appeals by the children to have a guardian of their estates appointed are dismissed by Judge Hinman, with the following memorandum of decision:

No circumstances are disclosed by the evidence rendering necessary or desirable the present appointment of a guardian of the estate of the appellant minors. In the choice of a proper person to act as such guardian when the settlement of their father's estate shall have progressed to a point when an appointment of such guardian is required by reason of the impending receipt of estate by such minors, the amount of estate belonging to each and whether it passes in trust, under the will, or as intestate estate, may well be important, even controlling, considerations. Appointment of such a guardian, therefore, may well abide this development.

Judgment dismissing the appeals.

Ruling on Demurrers.

Decision on demurrers to motion to disclose in the same probate appeal, is given by Judge Hinman as follows:

It is considered that this appeal from probate is to be regarded as a civil action within the provisions as well as the reason and purpose of Section 5764, General Statutes, and that the executors—defending the will—are "adverse parties" to the appellants for the purpose of this statute and the pending motion brought thereunder. Hence said applicants are entitled to a disclosure of such facts within the knowledge, possession or power of said executors, as such, as are material to the support of the appeal.

In this examination of the motion for disclosure and the demurrer thereto the word "defendants" as used in the motion is construed unless the context forbids, as referring to the executors in their capacity as such and not as individuals, and the motion as referring to documents belonging to the estate of the decedent and in their possession as executors, as distinguished from information in their possession as individuals—in which latter capacity they are not parties and so are beyond the scope and reach of this motion.

The situation has been (it appears needlessly) complicated by the inclusion—in the reasons of appeal not only of allegations which are essential to the issues properly to be presented by the appeal—the legal execution of the will and the testamentary capacity of the testator—but of others appropriate to a construction of the will, the suitability of the executors and other extraneous subjects of inquiry. The court in its memorandum on the motion to expunge recognizes that, on the trial upon the merits, the court will not be bound to broaden the scope of the testimony because of the presence of allegations of the latter class.

However, the existence of the documents mentioned in paragraph one of the motion and, if existent, the documents themselves may be material to the issue of capacity of the testator. For example, if no such contract as that mentioned in subdivision "a" exists; or if said contract be improvident to the testator or unduly advantageous to C. P. Cottrell; or if annual appraisals agreed to by the testator show an unexplained inconsistency with the actual value of the shares as shown by documents of other information then in the possession of the testator, such facts might have significance as bearing upon the issue of a capacity or undue influence.

The interrogatories contained in paragraph two of the motion appear, except as documents bearing thereon may be covered by paragraph one, to relate to knowledge of Charles P. Cottrell, or both, as individuals or as officers of C. B. Cottrell & Sons Co., rather than as executors of the will of Edgar H. Cottrell and so are not within the statute or the proper scope of this motion.

The demurrer is overruled as to paragraph one of the motion for disclosure, and sustained as to paragraph two.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Like all the other communities in Windham county, Danielson was enveloped in smoke all day Tuesday. It appears that the smoke, covering hundreds of square miles of territory, drifted down from the vast areas that have been swept by forest fires in Maine and Canada during the past few days. Late in the afternoon the smoke became so dense that the day had the appearance of being heavily clouded and the sun's rays were no longer penetrating to the earth in the early part of the day a widespread impression was that certain forest fires were raging somewhere in neighboring territory, but telephone inquiries for miles around brought only the information that there were no fires and only the same smoke conditions that existed here.

Next Wednesday, June 20, in the evening, a class of 18 will be graduated from St. James' parochial school. These exercises will mark the end of one of the most successful years in the history of the school, which has been under the direction of the Sisters of St. Joseph since its establishment, nearly 56 years ago.

Tuesday at noon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Bell at Connecticut village, Mr. Bell's sister, Miss Winifred Jane Bell, and Charles Carver of Goodyear were united in marriage by Rev. C. C. Tibbetts, pastor of the Methodist church, in the presence of relatives and a number of guests.

Miss Clare Albury was bridesmaid and George Bugs of Holyoke, formerly of Goodyear, was best man.

The bride wore a gown of white satin with a garniture of pearls and a veil. Her bouquet was of bride's roses. The bridesmaid wore a gown of sunset taffeta and carried a bouquet of tea roses. Her headdress was of silver.

Jane Tyrell was flower girl and Owen Bell, Jr., was ring bearer. Twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. Bell, Richard and Gilbert, held ribbons that formed an aisle through which the bridal couple walked. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Arthur Eddy.

A reception followed the marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Carver are now away on their wedding trip and will visit in New York and at Holyoke. Upon their return they will make their home on Furnace street in Danielson. The bride received many beautiful gifts.

Rosario Aubin, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Omer Aubin, was drowned in the Quinebaug river Tuesday afternoon while bathing above the old Quinebaug bridgeroads with a number of companions. The Aubin boy gave up his life at one of the old swimming holes where others have gone down to death before him. It appears that he was incapable of estimating and apparently got out beyond his depth and was carried away by the swift current while his lavish companions were powerless to aid him.

The accident happened shortly after 4 o'clock and within a short time the river was being dragged for the body, which was recovered about five o'clock and was taken in charge by a local undertaker.

Coroner Arthur G. Bill viewed the body and gave permission for its removal to the Aubin home on the West Side.

The first of the drowning accidents of the present season may serve as the warning of bathing in such large volumes as the Quinebaug river, which offers a treasure even to powerful swimming because of the sharp variations of its depth even close to shore and the treacherous undertow which it presses along over the greater part of its course in this vicinity.

It appears that Danielson's chances of getting a circus this year are small. The comparatively large circus that showed here last year did not draw as well as had been anticipated and attendance records of every town are known to all circus-booking agents before they select their routes for another season. The no more than passable showing made here last year is a surprise in view of the fact that for many years Danielson had a great rating as a circus town that purchased heavily and even the Barnum and the Forepaugh shows have exhibited here in years long since past.

One local purveyor of gasoline has put the price of that commodity to 25 cents a gallon thereby putting Danielson on the basis on which nearby communities, including Putnam, Attawaugan, Brooklyn and other places have been dispensing it for some time while Danielson buyers continued to pay 27 cents. With one dealer cutting its ante to predict that 25 cents will be the ruling price here by the end of the week. But the best of it is that there is a prospect of further slashing, which performance will not be regarded with regret by those who operate motor vehicles.

The Wauregan band should have been given the credit for doing escort duty for Quinebaug lodge of Odd Fellows when Memorial services for deceased members of the lodge were held here Sunday afternoon. Mention was made of another band in Monday morning's issue of The Bulletin.

Entertainment marked the meeting of the committee in charge of arrangements for East Killingly's Fourth celebration Tuesday evening. Plans for the event are now far advanced and will be announced in detail in the near future.

It appears there is a possibility of the old Whitestone mill property at East Killingly again changing hands and being used, insofar as its water-power and intact buildings are concerned in establishing another industry. A prospective buyer inspected the property Tuesday. The mill was destroyed by fire last December and now is practically worthless except as an interesting ruin—and ruins pay small profits. There is a fine water power there, nevertheless, and that may be the basis of a new industry coming into that section of the town.

A big crowd is already assured for the boxing exhibition Friday evening for the benefit of the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital. Promoter Frank Barber said Tuesday that the present prospect is for a sell-out.

J. Carl Witter, who has occupied a store in the Evans block for a number of years, is preparing to vacate and will devote his entire time to his auction business, which has increased to the point where it demands all of his attention during business hours.

There was a surprise and birthday party held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Adams, Saturday night Mr. Adams was presented a gold signet ring by his friends.

Games were enjoyed through the evening and refreshments were served. Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. William Harold and family of Wauregan, Mr. and Mrs. Augustin Picke and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Odias Perrin.

The new warning signals at Attawaugan crossing were in working order Tuesday night. A battery of four signals at this crossing should furnish ample warning to any but a blind man of the approach of a train hereafter—the possibility of electrical devices going out of commission always considered. This set of signals at a busy point during the summer season, and more or less so during all of the year, will be appreciated by that great proportion of the traveling public that like protection and help supply it for themselves by exercising caution at grade crossings. Incidentally the New Haven road would do well to install similar signals at two bad grade crossings within the borough of Danielson at Franklin street and at North street. Both of these crossings have furnished tragedies in the past, and the risk of others is now greater than ever before.

PUTNAM

Smoke of the density of a London fog hung over all of eastern Windham county all day Tuesday and while the obscuration did not equal that of the famous yellow day of more than forty years ago the sun's rays barely manage to penetrate the pall which came, it was said, from forest fires that have been raging in northern Maine and over the border in Canada. The smoke was heavy with the smell of burning fir and spruce and balsam and lumber men were of the opinion that such smoke could only come from territory far to the north.

However, residents of every town in this corner of the state was sure that a fire was raging in the neighboring town and many were the telephone inquiries sent out to establish the location, all without avail. From North Grosvenordale southward into Plainfield and through the Woodstocks and Pomfret and through the string of towns to Willimantic the smoke blanket covered all. It was so dense at times that it could be seen seeping through screens into homes. Vision was cut down to about a quarter of a mile in low-lying sections of the county, while some who viewed the peculiar spectacle from high points of vantage reported that the range of vision was less than a mile and that all the countryside seemed obscured in fog.

The sun shone dimly through this smoke screen in dull yellow rays. The smoky conditions became noticeable early Tuesday morning and grew denser as the day wore on, enduring over much of the territory when darkness came on.

Officers of the Putnam Chamber of Commerce are mailing notices to the members of the annual meeting of the organization to be held Tuesday evening of next week in Red Men's hall and of their efforts to make this gathering an unusually interesting one. The entire evening will be taken up by business.

Aside from the election of officers several matters of vital interest, especially to merchants, will be taken up. Among other things it will be proposed that an iron-clad ban on program advertising and other such publicity methods be adopted.

A feature of the meeting that is expected to arouse no end of interest will be the "criticism hour" during which the chamber will receive constructive criticism for what it has done as well as for what it has failed to do. And the officers invite the members to air their grievances before their fellow members and to make any suggestions they regard as valuable. It is already assured that some interesting and constructive criticisms will be forthcoming during the particular hour of the meeting.

This morning the strike of workers of the Manhasset company enters its sixth week. Nothing new developed in the strike situation during Tuesday. It appears, too, that about all the vacating of tenements that is anticipated has been completed and that about 25 rents of the mill company are now vacant. Some new families have moved into homes vacated by the strikers. Over on South Main street a lunch room has been opened for the strikers who care to use it and it is quickly becoming one of the congregating points for the strikers who still remain in the city. A sign over the door informs the public that the lunch room's services are "For Strikers Only."

Those strikers who care to take employment elsewhere seem to have little difficulty in getting work and the original ranks of those who would not work under the present wage scale have dwindled materially as families and individuals have gone forth to new fields, scattered over southern New England.

In the meantime the Manhasset company has built up its weaving forces, which was hard hit by the strike, to nearly a full complement and is increasing the number of employes in other departments.

Nearly a score of pickets remain on duty and keep daily tabs on the numebr of workers going in and coming out of the big plant.

The town school committee has voted approval of a request that an educational thrift system be installed in the schools of the city. Under this system which is expected to teach the valuable lesson of thrift devices will be installed in the schools in Putnam, but not in the outlying districts of the town, and he pupils will have before them at all times when they are in the school building the incentive to save something out of the greater or lesser sums that come into their possession, these sums to be periodically deposited in an interest drawing account. A Putnam bank will cooperate and only about an hour each week will be required of any teacher's time in this effort to get pupils started early in life as builders of savings accounts. The system has been adopted with great success in various towns and cities of Connecticut and in some schools the sense of thrift developed has been really surprising. The system will be ready for use when the schools reopen in September.

Small boys' eyes popped with excitement Tuesday, and some of the grownups were little less interested as a band of lithographers went about the city placarding billboards, roofs and even the sides of buildings with gaudy announcements of the coming of a circus—the first and probably the only one destined to show in Putnam this season.

J. J. Whitehead, directing the Nurses' Home drive, said Tuesday that $55 has been received from an anonymous donor in Woodstock and that employes on the estate of Norman B. Ralph W. Pierce, a graduate the past week of the Worcester Polytechnic institute, will leave within a few days to take a position with the General Electrical company at Schenectady. He is a son of Selectman and Mrs. Clarence Pierce and is now visiting with them.

Director H. H. Ellis of the state trade school in this city has been in neighboring towns recently addressing schools in the interest of the institution of which he is the head and pointing out the great advantage that will accrue to those who come here and take courses.

Investigation by a representative of the bureau of immigration of the charge that labor has been brought into Putnam in violation of the contract labor law will begin this week, it was stated Tuesday. This investigation is one of the interesting sidelights on the strike that has held on here the past five weeks.

Lighting company linemen were engaged Tuesday in making ready to change cross arms and wires at a pole at the corner of Front and Main streets in connection with the work of replacing a damaged pole with a new one.

Thirty-five representatives of the commercial and traffic departments of the S. N. E. T. company's divisions in eastern Connecticut had one of their regular meetings at the Pomfret Manor inn Tuesday. A business session was held and a dinner served.

The return trip will be early in September.

Tools That Chew Iron

THE FAMOUS DARCO LINE

Wrenches, Cold Chisels, Augers, Hacksaws, Pliers, Punches, Pocket Knives, Paring Knives and a variety of other tools and implements.

This remarkable line really is not dulled by use on iron. A Darco pocket knife will shave a nail without the knife edge turning. A Darco utility axe will chop spikes like toothpicks. A cold chisel will cut through half-inch steel without getting dull. All the Darco line can be sharpened by filing. A remarkable line. See the astonishing display in our show window this week.

For Preference.

A reader mentions the case of a detective, who, after twenty years, remembered the face of a forger and arrested the man when the crime had almost been forgotten. One would rather have that sort of memory than that sort of face.

To Clean Rings.

Hot lather of soap, water and ammonia will clean rings better than most anything else; use a brush to remove the dirt from the cleaning and beneath the stones. Dry, on a pointed towel.

POETRY

SPRINGTIME IN HOLLAND.

The clacking of the wooden
Sabots on the cobbled street;
Merry-faced men and women
A-dancing on the feet.
The sun-eyed cattle grazing
With cream-thick milk in abundance.
Are glad for to graze;
I'm back again in Holland,
In sturdy, grassy Holland—
Beside the Dreyker Zee!

The Nikie children dancing,
And prancing in their glee
To some gay street parade
With strummin melody.
Their wooden shoes clacketing
Upon the cobbled street;
If trouble troubles me,
I'm back in Amsterdam again,
As happy as the first day when
I lost my heart in Holland,
In sunny, sunny Holland,
In Holland by the sea!

The father-boats a-resting
In rows along the quay;
The red-tiled roofs a-peeping
The milk carts filled with shining cans
Drawn by the dogs in harnessed prance;
The queer canals with quiet households
With smoking stacks and pipe and gossip,
And fenced shirts hung out to dry
Beneath the sunny open sky—
I'm back to where my heart with
The Land of Dykes and Windmills,
To rocky Hills Holland,
To happy-hearted Holland,
Beside the Dreyker Zee!
—Louis C. Peake, in Detroit Treasure.

NO MORE THE LILAC WAVE.

No more the lilac wave—a purple glory—
Their petals blew about us as we passed;
Again spring's loveliest things have said their story,
Gay tulip cups lie broken in the grass;
Soon peony time will come and go, and after
Red roses hurt us with their perfectness,
And from old apple orchards flowers laughter
Break through the garden's silence lean and lean.

Quaint silhouette against a white plaster—
With beaks stretched wide above a clay bowl's rim—
Four hungry fledglings twitter: "Faster, faster!"
To reforestate hoveled in a nearby limb.
While in my heart a voice cries, so will I over:
"O Time, go slower, slower, slower, slower . . !"
—Isabel Valle, in New York Herald.

NEW LONDON POLICE WOMAN FINDS PLENTY OF WORK TO KEEP HER BUSY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 12.—Mrs. Alice Hunt, appointed police woman by the city council recently, has made her initial report of her doings to City Manager James E. Barlow. Mrs. Hunt when interviewed this afternoon, as to what had comprised her work for the past two weeks, stated that the greater part of her time had been devoted to protective work at the dance hall at Ocean Beach and on the side streets. She stated that she has generally been cordially received by members of the police department who appeared willing to co-operate and assist her in performing the work she was appointed to perform. Mrs. Hunt further said that at some of the places she visited she found plenty of material to claim her attention and cited the numerous young girls to be seen about the streets late at night and in the last instance last night. She also referred to interrogating one girl late last night as to the latter's conduct and also to having talked with others on several occasions. Only one of the young men interrogated showed displeasure at the interview.

Mrs. Hunt said she desired an advisory board to be appointed for the further successful handling of her work and for advice in cases that puzzled her. She stated that she had prepared a tentative list of ten names which she would submit to City Manager Barlow for his consideration at an early date. Mrs. Hunt stated that such cases would be discussed with the advisory board, but the identity of the individual would not be revealed, the case under advisement being referred to by number.

Mrs. Hunt contemplates being furnished with a three-room suite in the Day Nursery on Main street where girls who are arrested and detained over night will have a comfortable place for needful rest. Mrs. Hunt concluded her remarks by stating that there was much protective work to claim her attention among the young people and that as great was the work that she was kept on the move practically all of the late afternoon and night.

John J. O'Connell, local salesman in the employ of the H. J. Heinz company and Miss Margaret Connor, daughter of Mrs. Margaret T. Connor of Squire street, were married at 9 o'clock this morning at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. The nuptial mass was performed by Rev. T. M. Crowley, rector of the church, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends of the contracting couple. David Lyons of New Haven was best man and Mrs. Anna McVeigh attended the bride. Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. O'Connell received the hearty congratulations of their many friends at a wedding breakfast served at the home of the bride's mother, after which the couple departed upon their wedding tour, which will include a trip to Niagara Falls, N. Y. The bride was formerly employed as an operator by the Southern New England Telephone company.

The announcement is made of the engagement of Robert T. Keefe, son of Mr and Mrs. Arthur Keefe of Broad street, and Miss Julia Kiley, daughter of Mrs. Hannah Kelley of No. 188 Montauk avenue. The wedding will be solemnized at St. Joseph's church Wednesday morning, June 27.

In the superior court at Worcester, Mass., this morning, Julius Egatowsky of that place was sentenced to a year in jail for defrauding Vincent Morris of Milford, Mass., of $500 on the representation of Egatowsky that he could manufacture money with a small machine that he possessed. Egatowsky was arrested in New London for the Worcester authorities.

George S. Prest, vice president of the National Bank of Commerce, was tendered a gift of $500 by the directors of the institution yesterday in recognition of the many years of faithful service of Mr. Prest. The presentation was made by Benjamin A. Armstrong, resident of the bank.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Barbara A. Smith, daughter of Mrs. Aborn F. Smith of Montauk avenue, to James H. Sagar of Boston. The wedding will take place next Saturday. Last night at the home of Miss Ruth Topping, of Riverview avenue, an intimate friend of the bride-to-be, a miscellaneous shower was tendered Miss Smith and was attended by a number of Miss Ruth's intimate friends, included among which were several young ladies employed by the New London Ship & Engine company.

It is believed that the police this evening solved the numerous burglaries and attempted breaks at the store of James H. Ames and the Cheney-Packer company, Nos. 429 and 433, Bank street, respectively, for two youths were apprehended in the act of attempting to gain entrance to the stores for several months had been perpetrated by juveniles and because of the numerous burglaries in that street the past few weeks, the police maintained a watchful eye for the offenders. Early this evening Patrolman Dennis Cavanaugh went to the rear of the stores and his visit there was most opportune for he discovered three boys, none over 11 years of age, in the act of prying at a window in an endeavor to get inside the places. When the officer approached the trio of youths, they made a scramble to make their escape and one of them was successful, but the officer nabbed the other two. The boys were brought to the police station and delivered into the custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield, who will arrange for their presentation in the juvenile court within a few days.

It is among the possibilities that City Manager Barlow will be requested in the near future to comply with the ordinance regulating the police department and make an appointment of the number of supernumerary policemen that the measure provides shall be appointed. With the summer season at hand, and with conditions in New London such as to warrant all the police protection that it is possible to provide, there are some taxpayers who are to insist that the full number of supernumerary officers be appointed, and with this end in view some of the members of the city council discussed the matter informally following the regular session of the council last evening. The ordinance provides for the appointment of 12 supernumeraries and to date but three have been appointed, and these are doing regular patrol duty at the present time. With the annual Yale-Harvard boat race approaching and with summer traffic at full height thereafter, it is pointed out that the city needs all the police it is possible to assign to duty and that the city's supernumerary list should be completed by the appointment of the additional nine officers, that they may be called upon should an emergency arise. The officers already appointed are Henry Selesnitsky, Jeremiah Murphy and Thomas Lyden.

Paul Smylgin of Crystal avenue was taken into custody by Motorcycle Officer John Cavanaugh this morning upon complaint of Mrs. Smylgin, who levied a charge of breach of the peace against her husband. Smylgin will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning, for Mrs. Smylgin declared that she would appear against her husband, who, she alleges, has beaten her several times before. Smylgin was a saloon proprietor on North Bank street following the advent of prohibition.

"Pinky" Burns, who has fought with more or less credit in the squared circle in New London, Mystic and Norwich the past two years, is to seek ring honors in New York rings and tonight the New London lightweight departed for the metropolis, where he has obtained a bout at one of the New York clubs Friday night. Burns did not know who his opponent would be, but was satisfied to take a chance and show the fans of New York that he is able to made a creditable showing with the preliminary boys of the big city.

This port has had its first visit from the yachts this season, but it will not be claimed that the pleasure vessels aroused anything like the interest that was always apparent when the yachts of the New York club squadron have visited this port in the years before the war. There were no famous racing yachts such as are enrolled in the New York squadron and indeed the famous skippers that made the old-time yachts so well known for their performances are not on the craft this year. True, Pierpont Morgan's Corsair, with a party, was in the harbor to see the start, but she was alone in her class and did not attract the attention that might be anticipated. The squadron today was made up of some 20 vessels and they began a journey of some 660 miles when they left port at 10 o'clock this forenoon, going out into the Race and to the sound on their way to Bermuda. The run is expected to occupy four to five days. The Yale-Harvard races will bring to this harbor a much finer display of marine craft and one that will be a sight that will outshine that of today. The handsomest vessels the country can boast, both steam and sail, will be here on the 22d inst., and they will remain till the following day, that their owners and guests may have a view of the struggle between the oarsmen of the leading colleges of the country.

Decorations for Flag day are appearing on public buildings and clubhouses and private residences, so that the city will present a gala appearance when the procession under the leadership of the Elks passes through the business center on Thursday. The city is to spend $250 for decorations for the event, and that sum will add to the display that has already been made.

It is believed the Salvation Army will succeed in raising the $4,000 they are making a drive for, but that it will be an easy task is not likely. The "drive" business has been strictly pursued in this city almost to the limit, so that the undertaking in the near future will be more difficult than any drive that has yet taken place.

George N. Branch, aged 24 years, of Waterford, and Miss Anna M. Stetson, age 19 years, of New London, were married this noon. The marriage ceremony was performed at noon by Justice of the Peace Thomas F. Morton and at the home of the justice in Waterford.

Mrs. Raymond Cross of Groton, Mrs. Jerome Leary and baby daughter of Coleman street and Miss Theresa Costello, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Costello of Green street, were patients discharged at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital today.

Mrs. Richardetta Beebe Kenyon, wife of Hugh E. Kenyon of Willetta Avenue extension, died last night at her home following a brief illness. Mrs. Kenyon, besides her husband, is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Erastus Beebe.

Coach Edward O. Leader of the Yale crews now at practice on the Thames river for their annual races with Harvard on the 22nd inst., and who was arrested yesterday by Traffic Patrolman Braxton Hill, charged with operating his automobile with defective brakes, was not presented in the police court this forenoon. Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin dismissing the charge against the crew coach upon Leader's promise to pay the costs of the damage to a truck of the Thomas Transfer company into which Leader's car crashed when the brakes failed to respond. The damage to the truck will probably entail an outlay of $100.

Charles Stanton of No. 6 Union court, and employed as a cook on the tug Miles Standish of the Thames Towboat company's fleet of harbor craft, died at Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital this morning of heart trouble. He was 76 years of age.

The brick building on the north side of Golden street and recently bought from Antone Leverone, is to be demolished to make way for an addition to the New London City National bank. The building is one of the oldest in the city and was formerly a part of the Lawrence property. A recent fire there threatened to destroy the building, but good work by the firemen at midnight stopped the flames.

Tom De Carlo, who has been in the barber shop business on Howard street some time, is missing and so are some of the equipment of the shop. His partner, Ralph Harris, has been searching the city for him and failing to find him he believes Tom has gone to parts unknown.

The city council last night accepted invitations enough to keep them busy for some time with social functions. They agreed to attend the exercises of Flag day at the home of the Elks and to review the procession that passes the municipal building just after 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the 14th. The council also voted to attend the exercises and feast to be provided by the Spanish war veterans. The Chamber of Commerce asked for an appropriation of $300 to decorate the Soldiers' and Sailors' monument and to display flags along the line of march on the occasion of the visit of Admiral Colby M. Chester to this city on Flag day, when he is to address the school children and others. After some discussion as to where the money was to come from, an appropriation of $250 was made, that sum to include the decoration of the municipal building.

Day's total sales, 731,600 shares.

Twenty industrials averaged 95.97. Net loss 1.25; high 102.8, 106.38; low 92.77.

Twenty railroads averaged 83.71; net loss .90. High 1923, 90.63; low 80.38.

MARKET WAS BEARISH.

New York, June 12.—Taking advantage of the lack of public interest and the apparent absence of any effective buying and support, professional speculators for the decline launched a series of successful attacks on most of the list in today's stock market. The selling pressure was most effective against the industrial stocks many of which yielded 1 to 3 points, but rails, which had held firm earlier in the day, yielded with the rest in the heavy selling of the last hour.

The bear attacks were conducted in the face of several favorable developments, including the placing of American Smelting common on a $5 annual basis, after a non-dividend paying period of more than two years. American Smelting crossed 63 on the announcement but fell back later to 61 3-4, where it was off fractionally on the day.

New low records for thme year were made by more than a score of stocks including General Asphalt common and preferred, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Invincible, Cadde, Shelby, Tidewater, Hincials and White Oils, Producers & Refiners, Panhandle Producing & Refining, Sinclair Petroleum, Kelly-Springfield, U. S. Rubber, Lee, Goodrich, Goodyear and Miax Rubbers, Pierce-Arrow, and American Ship & Commerce.

Heaviness of rubbers was a direct response to a 10 per cent. dire cut by the Firestone Company which was regarded in some quarters as a forerunner of a "price cutting war." Oils continued to lose ground as a result of the heavy over-production with its prospect of further price cuts. Directors of the Pan-American Company, meeting today, were informed, however, that earnings for the current quarter would equal those of the preceding quarter and that net earnings this year would approximate the high return of last year.

New York Central was pushed up to 103 1-4 in speculative expectation of the stock being placed on a $7 dividend basis tomorrow but it dropped later to par for a net loss of nearly a point. Atchison, Canadian Pacific, St. Paul preferred, Rock Island, Baltimore & Ohio and Union Pacific also were offered freely in the last hour, losing 1 to 2 points on the day.

Woolworth established a new high at. 242 and then broke 12 points for a net loss of 4 1-2 on the day. Tidewater Oil was off 10 on the day.

Call money opened at 5 per cent. but eased off to 4 1-2 where it closed. The time money and comercial paper markets were dull with no change in rates.

Foreign exchange rates were inclined to ease on quiet trading. Demand sterling held fairly steady around $4.61 3-4 but French francs broke 5 points to 6.59 cents. German marks touched a new low at .0011 1-4 cents.

BOND MARKET.

New York, June 12.—Bond prices generally were easier in the trading today but losses were small, many investment houses, unable to supply customers' orders for the New Austrian government bonds, went shopping at the New York Stock Exchange where the bonds sold fractionally higher than the issue price of 90. Trading in these bonds was active through the day, the top price being 91 1-4, the same as yesterday's highest quotation.

With the exception of the Austrian 7s and the Serbian 8s, which gained 1 3-4, foreign government issues yielded in today's dealings. United States government bonds, with the exception of treasury 4 1-2s, also eased slightly. The treasury's moved up 1-32 of a point.

Railroad mortgages, while still active, were offered more freely. Seaboard Air Line 6s dropped 1 1-4 and Norfolk & Western convertible 6s lost a point. Union Pacific refunding 4s advanced 1 point. Industrial liens again were dull and price changes unimportant.

Total sales (par value) were $10,283,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 12.—Wheat averaged lower today largely as a result of better weather in the southwest and because of lighter export demand. The close was unsettled at from 7-8 cents net decline to 1-8 cent advance, with July 110 3-8 to 110 1-2 and September 109 1-8. Corn lost 5-8 cents to 1 cent, and oats 1-8 to 1-2 cent. In provisions, the outcome was ten cents to 17 cents gain.

With word at hand that cutting and threshing of wheat was under way in Oklahoma, absence of rain over the southwest gave an immediate advantage to the bears, inasmuch as fear of a wet harvest has of late acted as something of a prop to values. The fact that Liverpool quotations showed a decline was likewise a factor in bringing about price setbacks here by giving emphasis to current gossip that in view of the wheat surplus in North America and the impending movement of the new crop, foreigners saw no reasons for anxiety relative to supplies, and would continue to buy in only a sparing manner.

Absence of influential buying of a domestic character as well as the meagerness of export characterized the day in the wheat market except that spreading operations formed something of a feature in the late dealings. As a consequence of the spreadings. As a consequence of the spreading, July lost some of its premium over September. Meanwhile also, December gained on the other future deliveries, and closed at 1-8 cent advance, in contrast with declines for July and September.

Hot weather predictions led to an increase of selling pressure in the corn market. Oats followed corn, and the September delivery of oats touched a new low price record for the season.

Provisions rose in response to an upturn in hog values.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Picking Cherries

One day as Little Jack Rabbit was hopping over the Sunny Meadow, clipperty clip, ilpperty lip, he came to the orchard. Right beside the Old Rail Fence stood a big cherry tree just loaded down with nice ripe fruit.

"Oh dear me!" sighed the little rabbit, "I wish I could climb a tree like Squarrel Nutcracker—I'd get some of those cherries for mother to make a cherry pie with."

"What's that?" asked a voice close at hand and when the little rabbit turned around he saw his old friend, the Circus Elephant.

"Let me pick some for you."

"Let me pick some for you," said that big kind beast, reaching up into the tree with his long trunk and before long he had picked maybe a bushel. Wasn't that kind of him?

Filling his knapsack and his pockets and even his little khaki cap, the little rabbit climbed up on the elephant's back, who of course, helped him up with his trunk and then they started off for Old Bramble Patch.

Well, sir! As soon as pretty Lady Love who was sitting on the front porch, mending holes in the little rabbit's stockings, saw all those cherries, she started right away to make the dough for a cherry pie.

"You must stay and have some of the pie," she said to the elephant, smiling from her kitchen window.

"Ha, ha, ha!" said the elephant big. I can eat more pie than a hungry pig. There's nothing so nice as a cherry pie.

It makes me feel so young and spry."

The great big elephant and the little rabbit played jack stones on the front steps and when they grew tired of that they went around to the barn to see the old Brown Horse who had come to make a visit. He liked the Old Bramble Patch, you see, where the grass was green and the chestnut tree kept him cool when the sun was hot, for there wasn't any tree in his own grass lot.

"Hello!" said the elephant, taking off his little hat to the Old Brown Horse.

"Oh, I'm very well," answered the Old Brown Horse. "I like to be near Little Jack Rabbit. He and I are great friends, and now that my master has an automobile, I have little to do but eat and sleep.

"Oh, an automobile with its whizzing wheel
Is king of the roadway now,
So I'm turned out to graze these sunshiny days,
Except when I'm hitched to the plow."

MUTILATED MARKERS MAY BE EXCHANGED FOR NEW

Much cheaper material than usual and hurried work are the reasons given by officials of the state motor vehicle department for the alleged poor grade of 1923 automobile markers. A large number of this year's markers are declared to be in such condition at the present time that it is almost impossible to read the numbers correctly. The enamel has fallen off many of the markers, others are rusty, and in many cases the figures are mutilated.

Announcement has been made at the headquarters of the motor vehicle department in Hartford that in cases where the markers are so poor as to make it difficult to read the numbers, the department will exchange such mutilated markers for new ones, but this will only apply in cases where new markers are really needed and not in cases where an autoist wants new markers for appearances sake only.

All Norwich drivers who desire to have different markers exchanged for readable ones must apply at the New London office, which is located at Putnam's furniture store, and the markers will be examined there. Then if the examiner decides that new ones are needed, the state will furnish the new ones. Only those persons who absolutely need markers to replace mutilated or disfigured ones need apply.

Besides the cheaper material used in the construction of the markers this year, it is claimed the work was hurried because of the increased number that had to be issued. It has been pointed out that motor vehicle traffic has increased 18 per cent over last year and this means that at least 30 per cent. more markers were called for in the spring of this year than were demanded last year.

All the markers for the state are made by the inmates of the Cheshire reformatory at Cheshire. Between 32 and 35 boys do this work in a period of from five to six months. This year's output of markers reached a total of 200,000 pairs, which in the short time allowed hurried the work considerably.

George J. Erskine, superintendent at the reformatory, Monday morning stated that he had received no complaints of this year's markers. The superintendent said that out of the 200,000 pairs manufactured at the reformatory for this year only 200 pairs manufactured at the reformatory for this year only 200 pairs, from all over the state, had been returned to him to be replaced.

The year's markers must be finished in the month of October preceding the year for which the markers are manufactured. At the present time many a boy time on the [illegible] the state motor vehicle department will have plenty of opportunity to return any which it thinks are poorly manufactured.

Mr. Erskine states that every year there is some trouble along the line of poor markers, it being natural that a few pairs would be returned out of an output of between 150,000 and 200,000 pairs. This year, he claims, is not an exceptional year, despite the fact that officials at the Hartford office of the motor vehicle department are considerably worried by reports coming in that there are now a large number of poor markers throughout the state.

FRAUD WAS INSUFFICIENT TO ANNUL MARRIAGE

Annulment of the marriage of Victoria Wickowski Novak of Montville and Stephen Novak, alias Gus Lesur, which was sued for on the ground of falsehood and fraud on the part of the husband is denied by Judge George E. Hinman before whom the case was heard in the superior court here last Friday.

The couple was married Oct. 21, 1922, when the husband was 22 and the wife 14. The wife brought the petition for annulment on the ground that she was induced by the falsehood and fraud of her husband to marry him and that his real name was Gus Lesur, although he was married under the name of Stephen Novak. He is now of parts unknown.

Judge Hinman's memorandum of decision on the case is as follows:

The facts of this case do not support either an annulment under Section 5393 general statutes, to which the complaint is adapted, or divorce on the ground of fraudulent contract under section 5360. The marriage while made possible by perjury as to the age of the plaintiff and without consent of her parents is not, thereby, rendered void.

The misrepresentations made by the defendant as to his name and his intention as to future support of the plaintiff do not constitute the "deception in respect to facts affecting the very essence of the marriage relation" essential to fraudulent contract.

The plight of the plaintiff commands sympathy, but is not susceptible of immediate legal relief. The evidences does, however, establish desertion by the defendant from about March 1, 1921, which, if continued for the statutory period, will support a divorce on that ground. It is suggested therefore, that after March 1, 1924, the complaint be appropriately amended so as to claim a divorce on the ground of desertion and the case be re-tried on that ground. As the notices by publication heretofore given treat the action as one of divorce it would seem that no further notice should be necessary.

The case is returned to the files without prejudice to further proceedings as above suggested.

Many a man who is willing to be a grafter lacks the chance.

RAPID RECUPERATION AFTER TYPHOID AMAZES FRIENDS

Owner Says Wincarnis Did It

"When I was able to walk around, the doctor said it would be a month or more before I would get back strength. I had pains on both of my sides and around my heart. One evening my brother saw an advertisement of Wincarnis and my mother got me a large bottle.

"By the time I had finished the bottle the pains in my right side were gone. I continued to take Wincarnis and soon the pain in my left side and around my heart disappeared and I quickly became well and strong and was feeling fine long before the time the doctor had said it would take me to get well. All my friends noticed the change I underwent. From being thin, I made me look well so quickly."

If The Wheels Stopped Turning

IF the wheels in every one of the sixty mills operated by the American Woolen Company stopped turning today, more than 35,000 men and women would be jobless tomorrow.

Affecting all classes from the wool grower in the field to the man on the street, the cessation of the activities of this company would react adversely upon every industry in the country, such is the scope and magniture of its operations.

That the wheels may continue to turn, that countless thousands may continue to be happy at their work, that men and women may continue to buy good clothing at fair prices, and that prosperity may continue to be the reward of endeavor — that is the purpose of the American Woolen Company and the reason for its existence.

TAFTVILLE

Arthur Newton of North A Street has returned from a few days stay in New Bedford, Mass.

See-saws have been placed at different points about the village for the children by the Ponemah Mills, which are enjoyed by the youngsters. There have been three placed on the Providence Street baseball ground.

The Army & Navy club are busy having their clubhouse on Dion Street remodelled and improved. Shower baths have been installed on the first floor. Ten new members were initiated this week, and plans were made to hold a dance in the near future.

Constable Hormidas Disco of North B Street was in Groton, Tuesday.

Charles Meyer of Lisbon has purchased a new automobile, as have John Ely and Rudolph Gley.

Miss C. Evelyn Atkins entertained the Thimble Club at her home on South Second Avenue Tuesday evening.

Villagers were discussing the cause of the smoky atmosphere which prevailed in the town all day Tuesday, but no one seemed able to solve the problem.

The Union St. Jean Baptiste Society initiated one hundred and fifty new members last Sunday at a meeting in Parish Hall. Several speakers from Woonsocket, R. I., were in attendance and pointed out the benefits of joining the order.

In a fast game Tuesday evening on the Providence street grounds the Black Birds defeated the Army and Navy club by the score of 10 to 8. The directors of the Taftville Athletic Association met Monday evening and decided to have a band concert on the Providence Street grounds by the Tubb's band. If the villagers desire to continue these concerts which are being given free they should turn out a large numbers to witness the games and listen to the music.

DIVER TUG AND LIGHTER TO RECOVER AUTOMOBILE

After spending a day in interviewing local contractors about getting his lost automobile out of the channel of the Yantic river, where it landed after running off the West Side bridge Monday night, Joseph Nejime came to the concinsion Tuesday night that a marine wrecking company was the only thing to do the job right and he put in an order for the T. A. Scott Co., of New London to take the contract.

The Scott people told him they would have to use a diver, a tug and a lighter to do the work and that the outfit would probably reach here about 11 o'clock this (Wednesday) morning.

Mr. Nejime's plight with his submerged automobile has enlisted general public interest as he found Tuesday when scores of people asked him when he expected to get it out of the river. Many of them expressed the intention of taking a day off so that they could view the operation.

In view of the audience that seems to be promised when the runaway machine is hauled from its muddy bed, Mr. Nejime thought it advisable to notify the police department Tuesday evening with the suggestion that they have an officer or two on hand to control the crowd that will strive for reserved seats along the river bank.

Announcement was also made by the president that the total gifts to the college now aggregate $361,512.22 and that a total towards the college endowment fund of $59,575.40 had been raised by alumnae, students and faculty in campaigns last year and this spring. It was announced that the endowment effort will be continued through the summer and autumn, in the hope that $350,000 will be raised by Jan. 1, in order to qualify for a conditional gift of $150,000 from the general education board. Gifts for buildings cannot be applied toward this amount so that the college now has only $59,275.40 in cash and pledges that may be considered. A special extension effort will be made in Connecticut from Oct. 1 to 6.

Norwich girls figured prominently in the announcement of prizes and honors. Miss Helen B. Avery of Norwich Town won the $25 prize for proficiency in all studies in the four years' course. REV. DICKSON BROWN IS REAPPOINTED TO PASTORATE

In the appointments of ministers for A. M. E. Zion churches Rev. Dickson Brown has been returned to the pastorate of the McKinley Avenue church, which will be his second year at this church. The appointments were made on the closing day of the 79th annual New England conference which was held in Hartford last week. Rev. D. R. Overton was appointed pastor at Willimantic and Rev. E. George Biddle, formerly pastor at the Norwich church, was appointed evangelist. He is now located at Cambridge, Mass. J. W. Powell of Malden, Mass., was appointed missionary.

The morning service of the last day of the conference was conducted by Bishop William L. Lee of Brooklyn, N. Y., the presiding officer, and consisted of a sermon by Bishop L. W. Kyles of Winston-Salem, N. C., and singing by the junior choir. Following this Sunday school services were held at which the report of the committe was read.

The afternoon session opened with a sermon by Rev. D. H. Sansom, Jr., representative of the American Bible Society, and was concluded with singing by the choir of the Columbus Avenue A. M. E. Zion church of Boston.

The evening service that preceded the reading of the appointments and the announcement of the appropriations were conducted by Rev. W. J. Walls of Charlotte, N. C., editor of "The Star of Zion," who delivered the sermon.

The meeting of the Varick Christian Endeavor was held under the supervision of Rev. G. F. Green of Danbury, the conference president.

N. F. A. ALUMNI ASSOCIATION SUGGESTING NEW PLAN

Of interest to every graduate of the Norwich Free Academy is the proposal by President Grosvenor Ely of the Alumni Association to make every graduate a member of that association.

It is proposed to revise the constitution, abolishing the requirement of 50 cents dues, and to substitute therefor voluntary dues or contributions of 50 cents or $1 annually. There is also provision for life membership on the payment of $10.

This suggestion will be submitted to the Alumni association at its meeting next Monday evening and the question will be definitely decided at the meeting next year since the constitution of the association provides that such matters lie over one year. All graduates will be welcome at the annual reunion.

While there are several thousand alumni of the Free Academy the membership of the Alumni association is less than three hundred at the present time It is not believed that this small representation indicates any lack of interest in the school but that it shows rather too great formality as a requisite to membership in the association. The present effort is an attempt to make all graduates and the Alumni association coincident.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR HOLD REVIEW AT NEW HAVEN

The Knights Templar of Connecticut under Right Eminent Sir James C. Macphersen of Norwich, held its field day and review in New Haven, Tuesday. The twelve subordinate commanderies assembled at the Union station arriving both by train and automobile, and after receiving the grand commandery a line of march through the down town streets was taen up ending on the Central Green where there was a dress parade, and review by the grand commander. The formation on parade passed by city hall where from the stand Mayor David E. Fitzgerald, with other guests of the day, reviewed the Sir Knights as representative of the city.

The grand commander was accompanied by a personal staff of aides and his associate officers of the Grand Commandery.

After the review the commanderies went to Hale dining hall for dinner and later were taken to Light House Point for an afternoon and evening of sports and interchange of social courtesies.

NORWICH TOWN

A special business meeting of the several committee's of the Norwich Rural Association was held Monday evening, at 7.30, in the first Congregational chapel, with the president Grosvenor Ely in the chair.

After each committee had held a brief session talking over matters of importance in connection with the branch of work assigned to it; all united for a general discussion on the various topics concerning the activities of the association, with the chairman of each committee giving a report in detail of what progress had been made thus far this season. The spirit of the meeting manifested much enthusiasm on the part of those present, and there were many helpful suggestions. Never before has so much been accomplished toward beautifying historical Norwich Town, as has been and still is, in progress of being done this year, under the supervision of this association.

It is advantageous to the property owners, to cooperate as much as possible in the present efforts for improved conditions in many sections of the town in which we live.

The various committee's are working zealously to accomplish what they have set out to do, and it is generally hoped in many quarters that a year that will go down in history for the Norwich Rural association.

The membership is steadily growing, this year numbering 78, a gain of 12 over that of last year.

At the meeting on Monday evening the following chairmen reported for the committee they represented: Sidewalk committee, Clyde M. Beebe; board walk committee, Allen L. Latham; permanent walk committee, Grosvenor Ely; tree committee, Miss Elizabeth Hualington; community picnic committee, Miss Anna L. Ely; custodian of flag and steps at Meeting House Rocks, Henry T. Frazier; Sanitary committee, Mrs. Charles B. Gilbert. A publicity committee having recently been formed comprises Mrs. Charles H. Lamb, chairman; Mrs. Frederic H. Wyant and Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey.

The reports were most encouraging. It was prophesied that Upper Washington street, as well as East Town street, were to receive a coat of oil; 14 trees thus far this season have been planted in different locations; permanent walks practically assured within the next two years for about 1000 feet on Town street, from Harlands corner going North, and a long stretch on Upper Washington street, have their permanent walk under construction; and one owner has had a fine cement walk for about two years. Although the Community picnic was a decided success, the singing especially being a pronounced feature; it was deemed advisable not to have a second one this year, because of so many people being absent from town during the summer.

One very gratifying problem under way, is the removal from homes of garbage, ashes, etc., the latter it being suggested might serve well together with a preparation of cement, in covering long stretches of sidewalk where a permanent walk might not be a vailable, in place of the customary boardwalk. Special mention was made to the removal of poison ivy, also a new rope being placed on the flag pole, on Meeting House Rocks. Reference was made to the Old Cemetery, it being suggested that at a future time some conditions there would warrant improvement.

After the secretary and treasurer, Philip A. Johnson submitted his report the very interesting meeting adjourned. The next meeting is assigned for next fall.

42 SAILORS DESERTED WHEN DEPRIVED OF THEIR TOBBY

Of Original Crew of 159 Men of the Steamer Argentina 42 Were Missing When Vessel Sailed From New York—Crew of the Steamer France Declare They Will Not Ship on Her Again Unless Allowed Wine Ration Provided by French Law—State Department Has Made a Compromise Offer to Foreign Governments.

New York, June 13—The first direct effect of the treasury department's strict interpretation of the dry ship ruling, cutting off spirit rations of sailors on foreign vessels, was the sailing today from this port of the Argentina with 42 men missing from her original crew of 159, and of the France with nearly half the crew declaring they would not make another trip to America.

Captain Dmitsek of the Argentina, which sailed for Mediterranean ports, declared that the 42 seamen had deserted because they could not have wine with their meals since Sunday morning. Whether they were able to quench their thirst ashore the captain was not prepared to say.

Sailors on the France said they would not ship on her again unless arrangements were made to give them the 2-litre daily wine ration provided by French law.

Officers of the vessels asserted that grievances of the men "would be settled on the other side" and declared that the France would return on schedule even if a new crew had to be recruited from the French merchant marine college.

The fact that the France's crew was comparatively peaceable during the four dry days the vessel spent here was attributed by officials to the seaman's desire to get back to France where the wine flows freely. A strike was avoided, it was pointed out, by the men's realization that such action would have caused them to be left behind in a dry land when the ship sailed.

COMPROMISE OFFER MADE TO FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS

London, June 13—(By the A. P.)—The British and other governments have been approached by the American state department with a compromise offer permitting the ingress of liquor under seal into American ports, provided an agreement is reached to the right to pass such laws as they extend the limit of territorial waters from three miles, the present mark, to twelve miles.

While it is too early to forecast the British attitude toward the proposal, it may be said that the government is not averse to submitting the whole question of territorial waters to an international conference. Foreign Secretary Curzon has already made such a suggestion to Russia in connection with the dispute over the Murmansk fisheries.

The British government is anxious to accommodate the American views and secure a satisfactory solution for the British shipping interests, but difficulties are foreseen in adopting the Washington suggestion in its entirety, as extension of the three-mile limit would introduce complications concerning estuaries and other difficult points.

In any case, no reply will be made to Washington pending careful study of the suggestion by the British government experts. Briefly, it may be said that the government is prepared to bargain with the United States if any method can be found of overcoming the rigidity of the supreme court ruling.

FIVE STOWAWAS ON SHIP DIED OF ASPHYXIATION

Marcus Hook, Pa., June 13.—The sugar freighter, Santa Theresa, brought a tragic story when it dropped anchor off Gloucester immigration station, near here today. During the voyage from Havana, five stowaways died of heat and coal asphyxiation in the bunkers of the vessel. Four other stowaways were rescued and today were taken to the immigration station.

The survivors were Jose Raimindez, Fernando Fernandez, Antonio Fernandez and Michael Sanahez.

"The five dead men," said Rainindez, the only one who spoke English, "were not familiar with ships. Otherwise they would have never hidden away where they did.

"They were buried at sea last Monday. The captain read the funeral service over them and the sailors lined up along the deck as they were lowered over the side. The men had had been roasted to death by the heat and choked by the coal gas.

"The Santa Theresa sailed from Cuba Friday. When the five men crowded into the bunkers next to the boilers. The stokers told us later that after the ship had been at sea two days, they noticed a peculiar odor. When they shoveled away the coal they found us.

"They kept on going until they reached the other side of the bulkhead next to the boilers, where they stumbled over one of the dead men. They found the other four lying close together."

GERMANS ARE CREATING A REIGN OF TERROR

Duesseldorf, June 13.—(By The A. P.) Another German who was wounded when a French patrol fired into a crowd in Dortmund Sunday night died today, making the total dead in the affray seven. One of those killed was a Swiss, named Hans Schieb, who was visiting the Ruhr on business connected with his dye works, according to German sources.

German nationalists who, according to the French military authorities, have organized a reign of terror against the forces of occupation, have established headquarters in an old castle near an unnamed town in unoccupied territory east of Dortmund. From this point, French secret service agents report, they direct acts of sabotage against railroads and the telegraph lines and also night attacks upon the French soldiers.

These operations, it is asserted, are in the hands of a chief, who is assisted by captains and lieutenants who control their men in the field by means of secret telephones communicated with points in the occupied territory. It is alleged that the band has counterfeit Fresco rubber stamps, which they use in signing passes for Germans who go to and from occupied territory, which is prohibited without the French stamp on passes.

WOODS IN AROOSTOOK CO. ABLAZE FOR 25 MILES

Bangor, Me., June 13.—The woods along the line of the Ashland branch of the Bangor and Aroostook railroad in Aroostook county were ablaze tonight from Masardis to Smyrna Mills, a distance of twenty-five miles, and inhabitants of small settlements in that district were fleeing from their homes.

Masardis, a town of more than 1,000 population, was in danger. Griswold a village of 200 persons, was destroyed last night. So quickly did the flames descend upon the little community that the inhabitants had barely time to escape. Men carried women and children on their backs across the St. Croix stream, and later a special train took the refugees out of the danger zone. Relief trains were ordered to stand by tonight to rescue villagers who might be forced to flee from any settlement along the line.

The wind this noon changed from northeast to southeast and blowing a half gale turned the fire back over some forest sections burned earlier in the week. Deputy Forest Commissioner Neal Violette who is making his headquarters at Stockholm and sending out crews of men from there in response to calls for help from various towns, said, nothing but rain could wholly subdue the fires.

Men were fighting fires in Washburn, Wade, South Wade, Crouseville and Perham throughout the day. No houses were burned in those villages but there was a distinct feeling of uneasiness over the situation in the district. A fire which started in the Mud Lake region was reported burning toward the village of Grand Isle. Another new fire was reported in the woods half way between Caribou and Van Buren.

TURKS AND ALLIES ARE NEARER AN AGREEMENT

Lausanne, June 13.—By the A. P.)—Allied representatives late tonight said that the Turks and the allies seemed nearer an agreement both on the question of the Ottoman debt and concessions.

The allies anticipated that Ismet Pasha would be satisfied with a moratorium, Turkey to reach an agreement with the bondholders specifying the amount of annual interest charges. In the matter of concessions, Ismet will be asked to write a detailed letter to concessions holders, affording protection to their interests and rearranging arbitration for the disputed conditions of adoption and prolongation of contracts.

The French insist upon the maintenance of the Samsun-ivas contract as valid, but apparently stand ready to make arrangements with the Turkish government or the Chester company so as to avoid any conflict.

The program as outlined by the experts, must be submitted to the plenipotentiaries.

YOUNG WOMAN ROBBED IN BEDROOM IN WATERBURY

Waterbury, June 13—Two diamond rings valued at $500, were stolen from Miss Bernice Hammond, of 227 Hillside Avenue, early last night when a man with a revolver in his hand jumped through the window of the young woman's bedroom, grabbed the two rings from the top of a dresser, where she had just placed them. He escaped through the window after ordering the young woman to make no outcry under penalty of being shot, according to the police accounts of the affair. Detectives were assigned to the case the morning and it was learned that a man had followed Miss Hammond from the lawmakers session in Hartford to Waterbury. [illegible]

PRESIDENT LI YUAN-HUNG IS VIRTUALLY A PRISONER

Tientsin, June 14.—(By the A. P.)—Li Yuan-Hung, president of the Chinese republic, is being held a prisoner aboard his special train in the Central railway station here at an early hour this morning, following his flight from the capital at Peking yesterday. The train is surrounded by troops acting under the direct orders of Wang Chen-Ping, governor of Chihli province.

OFFER CONTINGENT UPON RECIPROCAL AGREEMENT

Washington, June 13—Modification of the effect of American prohibition enforcement regulations as they apply to sealed liquors in transit through American territory or in ships' stores has been offered to various maritime powers by the state department as a solution for present inconveniences occasioned foreign shipping. The project, it was learned today on high authority, contemplates exercise of the treaty making power to amend existing statutes, which means that senate ratification would have to be obtained to make the modification effective.

The offer also is contingent upon a reciprocal agreement in treaty form by the powers involved which would give the United States the right of search up to twelve miles off shore in carrying on its war against rum smugglers operating under foreign flags.

The American proposal is the outgrowth of prolonged study of the involved legal and international situation that has arisen both from the rum smuggling operations and from the recent decision of the supreme court upon which the present rigid treasury regulations excluding all beverage liquors from American territorial jurisdiction are based. It was presented, in answer to numerous complaints made by the maritime governments against inconveniences to their shipping resulting from the regulations. It also follows the refusal of Great Britain last year to agree to a treaty permitting the same extension of the right of search against smugglers which is now proposed, coupled with the offered modification of ship liquor and liquor in transit rules.

Comment on the new American proposal was withheld in diplomatic circles. There was no indication available there or at the state department as to the probable attitude of the nine governments which have made the new ship liquor regulations the subject of diplomatic conversations. Since the project does not contemplate a joint treaty but wholly separate pacts the possibility presents itself that some of the maritime powers might enter into such relationships as proposed where others found it inadvisable to do so. In that event, providing senate ratification was obtained for the treaties negotiated, a solution for these two vexing international aspects of American prohibition enforcement would have been found so far as the treaty party nations were concerned at least.

The American proposal does not contemplate any action to alleviate the ship liquor situation prior to ratification of the treaties by both parties. It therefore offers no method of overcoming the obstacles to international commerce imposed by the treasury regulations for several months at least, as the American senate will not reconvene before December unless called in special session.

Conversations with the foreign diplomats, it is understood, although in progress in one form or another for some time, have not reached a point which would justify any definite plans. The question of ratification by the senate will not come up until there is at least some assurance of acceptance of the proposal by some of the powers involved. It is recalled, however, that in the exchange of notes with Great Britain relative to the previous proposal for extension of the right of search as a means to check rum smuggling, that the British reply, although unfavorable to the project, admitted that there existed an "abuse" of the British flag in the protection it accorde to the hovering smuggler craft off the Atlantic coast.

GROTTOES END THEIR CONCLAVE IN CLEVELAND

Cleveland, Ohio, June 13.—An informal grand ball at Public hall brought the three days' conclave of the Mystic Order of Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm—the playground of Blue Lodge Masonry—to a close tonight. Music was furnished by a massed band of several hundred pieces. Street dancing was also on te programme.

Preceding the ball prizes were awarded the various winning drill and band teams. Next year's conclave will be held in Indianapolis in JUne. Today's programme was featured by band contests. Eleven teams competed in the first division, the Islam Grotto of Pittsburgh winning the first prize, giving it two legs on the cup which goes to the winner of the contest three times.

Among the resolutions adopted today include one urging all state legislatures to take advantage of the provisions of the Sheppard-Towner maternity bill and recommending the creation of a federal department of education.

Security Gets Worse as Homicide Rate Rises

Shows an Indifference to Human Life Without a Parallel in History—Statistics for 1922.

New York, June 13—Drastic federal legislation for the control of firearms as a means of checking the steadily growing homicide rate, was urged by the Spectator an insurance periodical, today, in making public homicidal statistics for 1922, which showed a staying rate in 55 of the largest cities of 9 per 100,000 of population.

"The record since 1900," said the Review, "reflects an attitude of lawlessness and indifference to human life without parallel in the history of mankind. Nor is the true state of facts clearly revealed by the recorded murder death rate, in view of the practical certainty that to an increasing extent clever methods of crimes are resorted to, and successfully, to hide the true facts of murder, while deaths are reported as accidents or suicides.

"The outstanding facts of America's murder record are: First, the excessive proportion of criminals who go entirely unpunished, or who fail to receive punishment proportionate to the seriousness of their offenses; second, the large majority of murders committed by shooting, as the result of the ease with which revolvers and ammunition can be secured even where the law prohibits their sale."

Capital punishment, the Review concludes, "is not a sufficient deterrent to homicidal crimes to justify its continuance," and should be abolished as "a relic of barbarism for which modern civilized society should long since have been able to find a proper substitute."

The review showed Memphis, Tenn., again heading the homicide rate list with 57.4 per 100,000 of population. Spokane, Wash., was at the other end of the list with 1 per 100,000. Nashville, Tenn., had the second highest rate, 30.7. New Orleans was third with 21 and St. Louis fourth with 16.9.

Next to Spokane, the cities with low rates were:

Reading, Pa., 1.8; Hartford, Conn., 2; Milwaukee, Wis., 3.3; Rochester, N. Y., 3.2; Providence, R. I., 3.3; Boston, Mass., 3.6; Seattle, Wash., 5.4 and Minneapolis, Minn., 5.5.

Sectionally, the south showed the higher rates, while the New England states recorded generally speaking the lowest. A supplemental list showed Stockton, Concord, Lynn and Salem, Mass., as without any murders in 1922, as were New Haven, Conn., and Williamsport, Pa.

"On account of a few exceptional outstanding cases," said the review, "the New York city murder record is always more or less in the limelight, although the New York rate 5.8, is much below the national average."

Citing a number of recent outstanding cases in which the slayers have escaped unpunished [illegible] including the slaying of Dorothy King, New York model, Clarence Peters, Haverhill, Mass., youth, the double murder of the Reverend Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Reinhardt Mills of New Brunswick, N. J., the Herrin massacres and the Mer Rouge hooded band killings—the review concluded:

"Murder indeed has become a safe trade and the government and the public view the most appalling situation on record with indifference if not with a lack of serious concern."

PARADE OF MEMBERS OF LEAGUE OF MASONIC CLUBS

Boston, June 13.—Bearing the square and compass through gaily draped streets more than 10,000 members of Masonic clubs and Eastern Star chapters, twenty-five bands and a score of floats, paraded today in the most colorful feature of the eighteenth annual convention of the National League of Masonic clubs being held here this week. Major General Clarence R. Edwards, retired, headed the parade as grand marshal. With him were Admiral R. E. Coontz and Brigadier General Ames A. Fries. Conspicuous in the procession was the Zambkin club composed of postmasters and firemen of Philadelphia and the Police Square club and the Fire Square club of New York city.

Plans for the $100,000 memorial to be erected to George Washington at Fredericksburg, Va., were discussed at the business session in the morning.

Admiral Coontz, in an address declared that the one great aim of Masonic clubs should be to disseminate information on what Masonry stands for throughout the United States and to act as a centralized authority to speak for the order.

TO RE-ARGUE PETITION OF GARGANO FOR NEW TRIAL

New Haven, June 13.—The state supreme court of session here today granted the motion of State's Attorney Arpeon Alling that he be granted permission to re-argue the petition of Biagio Gargano for a new trial which the court granted several weeks ago. The state and the defense will each be given a half hour Friday.

Gargano was convicted as the leader of a gang that held up members of the Orange Dramatic club in Savin Rock more than a year ago. He was sentenced to from nine to ten years in prison. Error was found in his trial and a new trial was granted. The state's attorney will attempt to have the court reverse this finding.

The arguments in six cases were completed today.

Stoeckel, treasurer of the delegation, by the New York Central railroad. Payment of a bill of $3,536.35 from the railroad has been held up by Mr. Stoeckel because of alleged failure of the railroad to provide accommodations as agreed upon.

That is, if you [illegible] of how in the language [illegible] stand. But with Madge [illegible] matter is a serious one.

Madge Fuller, [illegible] is known as the "[illegible] trainer in the world [illegible] comes to Norwich [illegible] year, which is to exhibit [illegible] Friday, June 23 she will [illegible] from riding the [illegible] to [illegible] horses to handling the [illegible] of the two elephant groups. And [illegible] does all this, she will be [illegible] her farm on her fingers. But [illegible] sounds as though it may be a [illegible] it isn't. The truth of the matter is that Madge, equestrienne [illegible] jaw artist, elephant trainer [illegible] ous ambitions for the future. [illegible] wants to go back to the farm and train cabbages and onions and milk the lowing kine and all that sort of thing. And the means of being that lies in the diamonds she wears.

There are many of them, and some day Madge plans to [illegible] them as "Uncle," sell them, and with the proceeds buy a little farm outside of her home town, Circleville, Ohio, and live out her life, far from the glare of the "Big Top" band, far from the glare of the chandeliers.

"And why shouldn't I?" she asks. Diamonds are only good to look at. I never realized that until after I had skimped and saved for years to buy them. Now however, I know what I really want in life—and I'm going to make those diamonds give it to me. But not this season—next, maybe, or the one after. I want to see all the lure of the sawdust out of my system first.

And while Madge plans for her farm, she'll keep right on riding the fancy gaited horses and training elephants. And of course she'll form a part of the things that can be seen when the big circus comes here.

Seats can be secured [illegible] day at John F. Marsh, 10 Broadway.

Fannie Hurst's Latest Story at the Broadway Theatre

What is believed to be the most remarkable studio set ever designed for the making of a motion picture is one which was fashioned during the filming of "The 10th Commandment," a picturization of the famous Fannie Hurst story of the same name. This particular set represents the interior of an up-to-date New York [illegible] ment store so complete as to [illegible] it entails everything that is [illegible] to excite the fancy of a [illegible] bunting bonanza.

In fact, there is not a [illegible] which one might find in the [illegible] metropolitan department store, that is not included in this studio room, around which one of the most interesting episodes of the story is woven. When the scene was filmed every special department was in full [illegible] camera. These special departments include lingerie, clothing, [illegible] furnishings, ladies' and children's wearing apparel, millinery, corsets, [illegible] furniture, kitchenware, [illegible] trunks, sporting goods, musical instruments and a popular [illegible] booth. Incidentally, the scene includes a wrapping department, where fifty [illegible] dressing cash-girls and everything else that goes towards the hustle and bustle of a modern department store.

The construction of this [illegible] stands as one made necessary by the fact that the location [illegible] to be in one of New York's [illegible] stores. No department store with a [illegible] floor space of the required size and completeness could be found in Los Angeles, and as this completeness of detail is vital to the story, Frank Borzage, who directed the picture, decided to construct a replica on a scale more lavish than ever before attempted for a similar [illegible]

It [illegible] to be Nating's most ambitious effort thus far.

The picture is a colorful story of the shipyards; of a [illegible] to transplant [illegible] 17 by her father and to carry on his shipbuilding work.

Probably no more [illegible] of screen talent [illegible] than is gathered together [illegible] the cast of "The 10th Commandment." Besides Colleen Moore [illegible] Robards, the [illegible] Phillips, Charlotte Merriam and George Cooper complete the principal of the players who interpret the story. A Christie comedy [illegible] and a news are the short subjects.

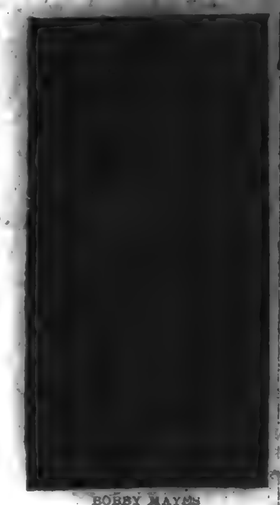
LARGE ATTENDANCE EXPECTED AT CHARITY BOUTS IN DANIELSON



BOBBY MAYES

Danielson, June 13.—A capacity house is the forecast for the fine card of boxing bouts that are to be put on at the town hall Friday evening of this week for the benefit of the nurses' home fund of the Day Kimball hospital. Promoter Frank Barber has arranged a fine card and great enthusiasm is being shown over the event. Every cent of the net proceeds will go to the fund.

The headline event of the evening will be the 12 round bout between Bobby Mays of New Bedford and Sammy Leonard of Pittsburg at 126-122 pounds. Leonard, a World's veteran, is lighting fast and has been going great guns in star bouts in many of the large cities of New England. In the past few months he has faced several men pounds heavier than himself and has romped through every bout with the speed and skill of a thoroughbred. As an artist in the ring Leonard is far and away ahead of the average boxer seen in this section of southern New England.

It is not probable that he will have everything his own way here Friday evening, however, for in Bobby Mayes of New Bedford he will find one of the cleverest bantamweights in New England, a boxer who has attracted widespread notice in his home state and has a great reputation in Providence and in Boston and cities thereabouts. He has been featured in a number of bouts and has demonstrated his ability and willingness to stage a great battle on every appearance.

Other promising bouts on the card for Friday are the ones between Bobby Kelley of Waterbury and K. O. Dinsdale of North Scituate, eight rounds at 148 pounds, and six rounds between two fast light-heavyweights, Steve Ketchell of Providence and Frank Bush of Norwich. In the preliminary event Young Bernier of Danielson, who is developing much ring skill, will meet Joe Bronsseau of Norwich.

This array of events is rated far and away the best of any arranged for Danielson since boxing became popular here.

Leonard will arrive in Danielson this morning and will work out at the state armory this afternoon and tonight the fans will be welcome to see him at his training, which will include light work with the gloves.

REDS DRIVE M'QUILLAN OUT AND BEAT GIANTS

Cincinnati, O., June 13.—McQuillan was knocked out of the box by the Reds in the third inning today and the local team won from the champion Giants, 6 to 3. Ryan allowed only one hit during the balance of the game, but Donohue was very effective and held the champions safe after the fourth inning in spite of ragged support. Catches by Burns and Young in right field and the latter's general play to Grisch at second were features. It was the sixth straight victory for the Reds, who have not yet lost a game to any eastern club on the home grounds. The score:

NAYLOR HOLDS TIGERS WHILE ATHLETICS WIN

Philadelphia, June 13.—Rollie Naylor staged a comeback today and defeated Detroit 5 to 2. On Saturday the Tigers batted him out of the box. The local twirler was also the batting hero, his single scoring Welch and Galloway with the runs that won the game.

Perkins had a double and a triple, while two sensational double plays aided Naylor when danger threatened. The victory gives the Athletics the series, two to one. Score:

PENN GETS LUCKY COURSE FOR REGATTA

New York, June 13 (By the A. P.)—Pennsylvania has drawn the "rabbit's foot lane"—No. 2—for the three-mile varsity race, blue ribbon event of the regatta at Poughkeepsie on June 23, according to announcement of drawings for positions, made today by Morgan C. Bogue, chairman of the board of stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing association.

Whether or not the Quaker eight derives any advantage over its five rivals as a result of the luck of the draw, records reveal that No. 2 position has produced more winners than any other in the 26 years of regatta history. Fluctuations of wind and tidal conditions, however, render doubtful the benefit to be gained from any particular course.

The Naval academy's eight, which swept to its first triumph on the Hudson in 1921 in the "lucky lane," has drawn No. 4 this year. Last year the Middies won in No. 5, while Washington; runner-up last year in No. 1, has drawn No. 1, the lane nearest the shore, for the 1923 race.

The complete list of positions drawn for the three races—junior varsity, freshman and varsity—follows:

Junior varsity, 1½ miles, standard time, two miles—No. 1 Cornell, No. 2 Pennsylvania, No. 3 Syracuse, No. 4 Columbia.

Freshman race, 4 p. m., two miles—No. 1 Pennsylvania, No. 2 Cornell, No. 3 Syracuse, No. 4 Washington, No. 5 Columbia.

Varsity race, 5 p. m., three miles—No. 1 Washington, No. 2 Pennsylvania, No. 3 Cornell, No. 4 Navy, No. 5 Columbia, No. 6 Syracuse.

A Secret of Great Strength and Powerful Muscles

Jack Dempsey, World's Heavyweight Champion, Reveals a Secret of His Training for Great Strength, Energy and Endurance

Science has now proved that your real strength, energy, and endurance, that mysterious force that enables you to dominate and control others and win in every walk of life, all depend upon the strength and nature of the millions of cells that compose your body and brain—that the physical strength of these cells depends absolutely on the food you eat, that is, the material with which they are built, just like a house that is built of boards and mud is not so strong as one built of stone and iron. The most important element in building strong, forceful cells is a peculiar form of iron found in the husks of grains and in the peels and skins of certain fruits and vegetables, a fact modern methods of cooking throw three important things over to that today probably not one person in twenty has enough iron in his body. Jack Dempsey, World's Heavyweight Champion, who is training, takes regularly this newly found iron, known as Nuxated Iron. Many great athletes like Dempsey realize the importance of iron in the blood. It would seem that every man, no matter what his age, who wants to increase his strength and bodily powers, would realize how much more important it is for him to make sure his reserve and supply of iron Nuxated Iron. Thousands have proved marvelous results in strength and endurance after using Nuxated Iron for only a few weeks. Nuxated Iron is now obtainable from all druggists and may be obtained from any reliable druggist under the positive guarantee of satisfactory results or your money back.

WHIRLWINDS DEFEATED HARDDIGS IN FAST TWILIGHT LEAGUE GAME

The Whirlwinds made it four in a row at the fairgrounds last night at the expense of the Harddigs, the final score being 6 to 2. The game was very interesting until the last of the sixth when A. Heebner tripled with two on and scored a minute later on C. Leesman's single to left. Peterson pitched airtight ball throughout and eased up in the seventh, allowing the Harddigs to score a run. He also made a spectacular catch of Mahoney's liner with two on and two out in this inning. Red Leesman made two running catches at short and aly ab aided in the scoring by getting three shashing hits. A. Heebner's hitting also featured. Mahoney played in hard luck for the losers as he was left on third three times during the game. The Harddigs also lost the services of their star catcher, Tombery, in the first, as he lost a nail from his finger with a foul tip. His place was taken by "Dolky" Siegal, who caught in great style, but he must have left his batting eye at home as he failed to get a hit. Ellie Siegal pitched good ball for the Harddigs but the Whirlwinds' timely hits were a little too much for the youngster.

Next Friday night brings an open date for both the Professional team and the Whirlwinds. They will play that night instead of the following week. This will leave an open date the following week for some of the other teams to play a postponed game.

BURNS' HITTING IS FEATURE OF BOSTON'S WIN

Boston, June 13.—George Burns' hitting, five hits in five times at bat, was a big factor in Boston's 10 to 9 win over Chicago today. It gives Boston the two to one edge on the three-game series. Hooper's only hit of the series was a home run drive into the right field bleachers as lead-off man in the sixth. The two second basemen were brilliant in the field. Devormer was put out of the game in the seventh for pushing Umpire Rowland in protest over calling Kamm safe at the plate on Pinch Hitter Struck's sacrifice fly to Shanks. The score:

BRITISH OPEN TOURNEY SETS UNDERWAY TODAY

Troon, Scotland, June 13 (By the A. P.)—On the wind-swept links of Troon eighty-eight of the world's premier golfers, among them the little group of Americans who qualified in the preliminary, will strike off tomorrow in the 72-hole struggle for the British open championship. To compete half of their journey toward the goal on the first day the players will be swinging their irons from eight-thirty in the morning until the same hour at night. On Friday another grind of similar extent will bring the competition to a close.

Edward Ray, one of the finest figures in the long history of the game, will be the first off the tee tomorrow, going out with his partner, James MacDowall, of Prestwick. James Braid, another old timer and perennial participant in championships, will be the last in return to the clubhouse, driving off on his second round at five-thirty in the afternoon.

Len Dougherty will be the first American away. He will be followed at intervals by John Farrell, Walter Hagen, George Aulbach and MacDonald Smith. Despite his disappointing play in the qualifying round and his narrow escape from the lot of those who tried and failed, Walter Hagen, who holds the British title, is still one of the favorites. When he seemed almost certain to collapse in the storm of Tuesday, and thus eliminate himself, he suddenly pulled himself together and finished strongly. Many think that his experience in the qualifying rounds has purged his system of whatever bad golf it contained, and from now on will play steadily and well.

MacDonald Smith has almost as many warm admirers as Hagen, but he is not so well known. His work throughout has been consistent and sometimes well beyond the standard.

Today some of those who entered the championships spent their time in a long driving competition. With the wind directly behind him, D. A. Crutis, of Bournemouth, won the prize for the longest drive, making a distance of 378 yards. Walter Hagen was fourth with 370 yards. All three of Jim Barnes' drives were out of bounds.

Roger Wethered, the British champion, won the cup for three balls, aggregating 809 yards, an average of 269 yards, 2 feet.

HARTFORD GRAYS AT TAFTVILLE ON SATURDAY

On Saturday the strong Hartford Grays of the Capitol city will be the attraction at Taftville. The visitors have an unusually strong lineup, including Swatts lf, Barry ss, Bagshaw 3b, Trombly 2b, Fitzgerald 1b, Foman cf, Adlum rf, Meyers c. Cleary or Gatteralough are scheduled to pitch, or Maloney might be used. Taftville will use Morin in the box, with Belair receiving; Cardie will be on first, Jack Murphy at second, F. Murphy or Dugas on third and Liberty will perform at short. The outfield will be composed of Gaudette, Jarvis and Jim Murphy. The Taftville A. A. has been putting up a good brand of baseball this year, and the Hartford Grays are expected to be the fastest team imported here this season. That the game will be a thriller goes without question. Manager Troland hopes that the J. B. Martin Co. team and the Taftville A. A. will cross bats in the near future to decide which is boss of the town, and show the fans some real baseball. So, J. B. Martin, make connections with Manager Troland and let's get something started.

LARGE ENTRY LIST FOR PUBLIC TOURNEY

New York, June 13 (By the A. P.)—The entry list for the National Public Links championship, to be held at Washington, D. C., June 26 to 29, has closed, with 112 municipal stars, representing 21 cities in all parts of the country, listed for competition, the United States Golf association announced today.

Already, four cities have entered bids for the 1924 championship tournament, it also was announced.

Among those seeking the next event is Worcester, Mass.

Entries from as far west as Portland, Ore., and Seattle and as far south as Atlanta are included in the list announced today. Other cities represented are: Chicago, Worcester, Mass.; Bridgeport, Conn.; New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Newark, N. J., Indianapolis, Hartford, Conn., Memphis, Tenn., Detroit, Toledo, Boston, Buffalo, St. Louis, Mo., Washington, Baltimore and Dayton.

NORWICH A. A. HAS STRONG SCHEDULE

The Norwich A. A. will again hit their old stride when they start again after a few weeks' layoff. The team is scheduled to play some of the best teams throughout eastern Connecticut, including three teams from Rhode Island, they being the Providence Independents, a fast semi-pro team representing Pascoag, and another from Woonsocket. On Sunday the Norwich team will travel to New London to play the Tabs. The Tabs will comprise the best New London can produce. The best men available will be picked from the Independents, the former Tabs and several out of town players. The Norwich team itself will be no slouch when they line up against the Whale city boys.

Manager Weisner has taken much care to pick from the best men throughout the city for the rest of the season, and claims his team is as good as any around this vicinity, barring none.

The lineup will be announced later in the week and the fans can then see what the Norwich A. A. team will consist of. Manager Weisner stated last night that they have some good, snappy baseball players still left in Norwich so he will not trouble to bring in any outsiders. The team will consist of absolutely 100 per cent local men and the boys will go out in Sunday's game to prove to the fans that a good snappy bunch of ball tossers still exist in Norwich.

YALE CREWS HAVE SECOND TIME TRIALS

Gales Ferry, Conn., June 13.—The Yale varsity and the freshman crew in training here for the regatta June 23, had their second time trials today. No time was given out. The varsity rowed over the four-mile course, being paced for two miles by the Junior varsity and rowing the last mile alone. The freshmen shell went over the two-mile course also at a racing stroke.

Alexander Wilson, No. 5 in the varsity boat, is out temporarily, on account of illness. It is expected that he will be able to resume his place within a few days. Miller, No. 5 in the junior varsity, took its place today while Kirby, number 7 in the combination crew, filled in on the junior varsity. Ellis of the 1921 crew took Kirby's place. The combination had a light workout in order to give Ellis an opportunity to get into shape.

Tonight the Harvard crews and staff were the guests of Yale, coming to Gales Ferry early in the evening.

WALZ IS AWARDED CUP AS BEST ATHLETE AT N. F. A

At the last session of the Academy in Slater hall, Joseph Walz was presented the loving cup, provided by a fund donated by the class of 1912 in memory of Robert O. Fletcher and Charles W. Willey, who made the supreme sacrifice in the World war.

Walz has taken part in all branches of sport at the local institution, having two years of baseball, two of track and one of football to his credit and is regarded as the one in the class of 1923 who took the most important part in athletics.

Although the last baseball team on which Walz played was not a shining success, he played a fine game in left field and was a big asset to the local nine.

Everyone is sorry to see Walz go and athletics will lose a most devoted follower.

PROFS AND BRASSCOS SPLIT DOUBLE BILL

M'TIGUE MAY FIGHT BATTLING SIKI AGAIN

New York, June 13.—An offer of 20,000 pounds to Mike McTigue, the world's light heavyweight boxing champion, for a return match with Battling Siki in Dublin on September 7, was made today by Irish interests, according to Joe Jacobs, the title-holder's manager. Jacobs deferred his decision but indicated he would accept.

McTigue wrested the 175-pound crown from Siki on points in a 20-round match at Dublin last St. Patrick's day.

THE CITY MEETING RESULT.

The action of the annual city meeting in voting practically everything asked for and some more is of course only history repeating itself. It is what has happened time and again and it can be expected that it will be repeated from time to time. It is in keeping with and has helped to boost along our rapidly increasing tax rate. Norwich has now reached the point where the additional taxation of property, and the attention is being called to substantially to the marked reduction in taxation from year to year is necessary.

It was a statement that that large number of those attending the city meeting was there for the purpose of boosting it, while very little was decided to be nearly half, left the meeting. They had no further interest in the appropriations following a million and a half in case of fire. No action on the tax rate. It was one of those meetings which has in times gone by called forth much criticism. It didn't even represent the same considerations consideration for the welfare of the community and the taxpayer that had been given to the items by the finance committee and the common council which were only willing to endorse items calling for $3 1-2 mills. It was one of those occasions when there was a determination to put things through and let the consequences fall on those in power.

A year ago this month the voters of Norwich had an opportunity to adopt a revised charter. There was a provision therein for the spelling of the existing method of authorizing expenditures and have it placed upon a sound, businesslike basis. The public would have had a chance to be heard but comparatively few would have been voted with full consideration for the indebtedness, the needs and the tax rate. It would have eliminated the so-called packed meetings and meetings where half of the attendance was composed in but does them and where a mass handful voted items that increased the tax rate a fifth in one bound.

When the voters turned down the revised charter they of course gave sanction to the type of meeting of Tuesday night, which is one more illustration of the mistake that was made on that occasion.

UP TO CONGRESS.

Congress some little time ago enacted dry legislation for this country. It has been put into effect and tested in various ways. The supreme court has been asked to say and has said what it provides for relative to the transportation and sale of liquor within the three mile limit and on the high seas. It has not undertook to alter the legislation, but it has explained what the law was that congress passed and what effect it had upon the bringing of liquor into the territorial limits of this country.

What the supreme court has said does not point most therefore to the guide of the government in upholding the law of the country. Congress has declared what must be done and it rests with the government to do it to the best of its ability.

The fact that the legislation might conflict with the laws of other countries and interfere with what they consider to be their rights relative to their own vessels may or may not have been taken into consideration. Obviously such difficulties were not contemplated for it can hardly be imagined that there would be an international conflict with international relations to the extent that serious difficulties would be invited.

With the government's hands tied in the matter of upholding the law, is a plausible course that is being followed in indicating to the protesting nations that remedial legislation, or amendments which will permit of liquor on foreign ships in our ports where their laws demand it as a right, will be brought to the attention of congress, the lawmaking body as soon as it convenes.

What congress will do there is no telling. It cannot tell, however, to look at the situation for which congress is responsible and it is the duty of congress to deal with it in the light of the present day revelations.

TODD'S RESIGNATION.

Because the commissioner of immigration at Ellis Island deals with so many of the cases where aliens are ordered the country and where it becomes necessary to apply the immigration laws, the fact that such an official has resigned is of interest to those living outside New York. Commissioner Todd has been recognized as a thoroughly fully competent official and the respectful... the immigration laws ... with which he has ... to deal when ... to turn ... they were ... to the best ... ability.

PEARLS OF NEWS TALK

"Did you have a good time this morning, dearie?" inquired the long-faced woman hurrying to the dressmakers to catch up with her last call.

"I don't know," confessed the embarrassed lady, who was rushing around the back way, trying to buy a hat before her shy friends saw her in what she had brought back from the country. "I am sure that it should have been a delightful time, but when I come to look it over it strikes me as being a somewhat nervous season. There was no calmness about it. We never knew when things were going to boil over!"

"You don't say!" said the long-faced woman in pleased and expectant tones, dropping squarely in her trunks. "Why, I thought perfectly lovely people went to Apricot Lake!"

"If you took the people one by one," the mean-faced lady mused, "each one would have been beyond compare. It was just that their auras didn't mix. If you get me, Mrs. Flutter! Just so surely as you confidentially told Mrs. Babble that the way Mrs. Whatt neglected her child was a shame, Mrs. Babble would burn up the path to Mrs. Whatt's house to repeat to her the glowing bit of news.

"Instead of rising to the occasion and saying she had every confidence in you and didn't believe a word of it, Mrs. Whatt would snort and refuse to speak to you when you met at the bridge club. Then you had to get good and mad at Mrs. Babble for stirring up trouble, and if you impressed the fact upon her she would look at you reproachfully and murmur, 'Well, but you did say it, dear; now didn't you?'"

"Then Mrs. Babble and Mrs. Whatt would be closer than peas in a pod until somebody would say to Mrs. Whatt that it wasn't a shame the way Cynthia Hewitt were out with that coarse Worthington Whatt, simply because of the admiration Mrs. Whatt received. Would cause a procession of tears and take her dear friend Cynthia that it was just awful how people talked and she should think Henrietta Stonehart would not be so catty as to say what she had about Cynthia and she didn't agree with her at all!

"Then Cynthia would cry until Mrs. Whatt would reluctantly confess that what Henrietta said was that Cynthia looked years older than she pretended to be—whereupon Cynthia would refuse to sit in the same room with Henrietta. Of course you were steering clear of enraged Mrs. Whatt and that was a foursome which hostesses couldn't mix, not if they know what is good for them. As for the Babble woman, if people wanted her they just couldn't expect you to be annoyed by breathing the same atmosphere.

"Why, if Mrs. Puffer gave a party and you told somebody that, while food meant nothing to you, yet if a person was entertaining why not go to a little trouble about it and have something that a person could eat—the very next time you met Mrs. Puffer she would look daggers and say right out before everybody that Mrs. Dilly had told her you said she didn't serve a thing that was fit to eat at her party and how about it? And when you sailed into Mrs. Dilly like as not she would look indignant and say that if Mrs. Puffer said that she certainly used her imagination, and very shortly after Mrs. Puffer would insist that Mrs. Dilly was telling around that her word could not be trusted and didn't we think it was outrageous enough to warrant taking it to a lawyer?

"You just weren't safe in making the simplest remark, such as how dreadful it was the way Mrs. Brake's husband neglected her for that blond from the south at the hotel—whoever you said it to ran and repeated it to Mrs. Brake.

"I have no interest whatever in my neighbors' affairs, I am sure, and yet my best friend, Zinnia Dank, told me that she thought it was her duty to let me know what the rest of the women had said the night they were all sitting together on her porch and they hushed up so quickly when I came up. Zinnia said she thought it was dreadfully unjust and she had just been telling them so! They said they thought I knew more about what was going on in everybody's cottage that anybody else on the place and that I gossiped. It makes me so mad to think I didn't know about it before I told them that interesting piece of news about the Black girl being thrown over by her third fiance. It would have served them right!

"The worst troublemaker in the place, however, was a Mrs. Bingo from Minnesota. She made fun of every other woman and flirted with their husbands and——"

"Did she really!" barked the long-faced woman, fire in her eye. "I'd have you know Mrs. Bingo is my sister-in-law and a finer woman never lived and she wrote me she never spent a summer in a cattier place in her life!"

"Oh, well, what's the use!" muttered the moon-faced woman, proceeding on her way desperately. "You get into trouble in town just as well as in the country if you say the least little thing!"—Chicago News.

A Little Talk on Thrift

Analyze Attitude and Actions.

True thrift is a matter of correct proportions. It is the proper balancing of one's activities and accomplishments.

This question of proportion is one of the most important problems of life—a subject worthy of the most thoughtful attention.

The man who works so hard that he ruins his health has an incorrect understanding of proportion. So also has he whose thoughts and attentions are ever alert to the passing pleasures of the moment. The miser is devoid of a normal understanding of proportion. The same is true of the man whose ambition for wealth or power lead him to transgress the rights of others and the limitations of the law.

There are those who allow their sense of proportion to be warped by some passing grievance or fancy. Vanity, avarice and selfishness each plays its part.

Analyze your attitudes and your actions. Herein lies a splendid field for self-improvement. Perhaps you are giving too much thought to some particular phase of life. Perhaps you are placing undue weight upon matters that are of inconsequential importance and are for this reason neglecting the things that count—the things that mean success, progress, usefulness and substantial happiness.

Thrift is by no means the accumulation of money alone. It is just as truly an exemplification of rightful proportions. For when this exists we become stabilized, well-poised and efficient.

Study relative values. Develop a sound sense of proportion. Learn to harmonize the various elements in your life in such manner as shall mean the most in your upbuilding. Do not overstress matters which, upon sober reflection, are plainly of trivial importance. Cultivate a broad viewpoint. Make your moments count to the best advantage from the standpoint of your greatest good, regardless of temporary whims or caprices. To do so is true construction thrift.—American Thrift Society.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

The Siam Elephant Drive.

The greatest hunt in the world and the most unusual surviving court ceremony—the famous elephant drive of Siam—is to be abolished.

"Siam's centuries-old spring festival gives way before modernism which has adopted the machinery, the economics, and even literature of the east, for Shakespeare in translation now is a Siamese 'best seller,'" says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Once the hunt dramatized a military necessity and the king's annual visit to the ancient capital, Ayuthia, netted him elephants of war which were the first line of defense of the new Bangkok.

"In later years the elephant was a commercial asset, especially in teak lumbering, but the motor has supplanted the animal, and rice fields are spread over the marshes where elephants were driven many miles to the royal stockade. The principal factor in the abolition of the spring damages the state treasury had to 'drive' may have been the enormous damages the state treasury had to pay rice growers for trampling their crop.

"Weeks ahead of the king's arrival at temple-dotted Ayuthia a small army of 'beaters' would spread out for scores of miles above the deserted city and begin their slow task of driving the elephants into one great herd.

"By the time the animals have been herded at the banks of the Ma Nam river the king has come up that river in a barge and occupies a royal 'box' in a grandstand built back of the north wall of the stockade.

"All the Siamese who can come are there. They tax the railroad trains, crowd the river with their craft, and even at that the greater number walk along the dusty roads.

"The most spectacular feature of the entertainment is drawing the slow moving beasts across the river to the kraal. They splash and roll in the stream, spout water and scoop it with their swinging trunks, and trumpet in a guttural chorus like no other cacophonies that ever assailed the ear of man.

"At command here are the tame elephants, who lead the way and bring up the rear, and innocently amble into the kraal for their unwitting companions to follow.

"Once inside the trap the work of picking the 'thoroughbreds' of the jostling, ear-flapping, panicky, gelatinous mass of animal flesh begins. A Siamese picks an elephant on 'points' as a Kentuckian would a horse. His skin must be unbroken, not fungus-grown, and light in color. Black toenails are desirable and these should be intact. Many are rejected because their tails have been torn off in some jungle fight. The gait must be steady and even.

"The elephants chosen are fastened to stakes, which makes many of them frenzied, and occasionally one breaks loose and attacks his fellows. Such battles are fervently hoped for by the spectators.

"After the connoisseurs have picked a few hundred of the best animals the many hundreds are set free and left to find their old haunts again."

CHILD TRAINING

IS YOUR CHILD WELL-BRED?

By Helen Gregg Green

I remarked to a friend the other day, "Do you think it well-bred for Jimsy to sit in the house with his hat on?"

"Oh, my dear, you are perfectly absurd! Jimsy's only five and a half."

Which was the prologue to a rather lengthy, and a bit hectic discussion of when, where, and how a child should acquire good breeding.

My friend contended that a parent need not bother with "such little things" until the child is old enough to become interested himself.

"When he is interested enough, he'll pick it up," she declared.

Good breeding is not picked up. It is either learned in childhood, or not at all. Of course a certain superficial type of good breeding may be acquired, but not the way-down-deep, always-have-had-it kind that is really charming and worth while.

A young banker in our town, a chap about twenty-one, has passed me repeatedly on the street, and spoken without so much as touching his hat. It seems unbelievable.

It should be as natural for a small boy to lift his hat at the proper time, to stand when a woman enters the room, and to do the hundred and one other little things that are so charming, as it is for him to eat three meals a day, and go to Dreamland at night. If these habits are inculcated in youngsters at an early age, they will never be forgotten.

Then there are the many little things that children should be taught not to do, except in privacy.

I was calling at a friend's home the other day, when the son and heir of the household joined us on the porch. He was a handsome youngster, just ready for high school. He had no sooner sat down, than it was apparent he had tarried only long enough for a first class manicure. I could see his mother was very much embarrassed. Personally, I think she deserved to be.

She asked, "John isn't your bedroom the place for that?"

John was unimpressed. His mother had spoken eight years too late. The manicure was completed with flying colors.

You can tell a well-bred child, one taught the many little niceties of life when quite young, by his lack of self-consciousness. This is the beauty of it all. This and his thoughtfulness.

And, after all, courtesy, charming manners and good-breeding are synonymous with forgetfulness of self.

Stories That Recall Others

Playing Safe

The dear old lady entered the drug store and looked doubtfully at the youthful clerk behind the counter.

"I suppose," she said, "you are a properly qualified druggist?"

"Yes, madam."

"You have passed all your examinations."

"Certainly."

"You've never poisoned anyone by mistake?"

"Not to my knowledge."

She heaved a sigh of relief. "Very well, then, you can give me a nickel's worth of cough drops."

Watching and Praying

Recently some one times were discussing Memorial day when there was a mountiful spread for the gathering. When the women had put the finishing touches on the table the minister was asked to say grace.

The minister prayed, and the memory was that it was an eloquent and able prayer, calling down blessings on our country and incidentally not forgetting to pray for every other nation and people, of whatever race or color, under the sun. When the minister ended his prayer and opened his eyes every particle of food was gone and the women were busily clearing the tables.

"Well," said he, as looking about he realized what had happened, "the Bible says, 'Watch and pray and I forgot to watch."

POINTS OF VIEW

FLAG DAY.

In proclaiming today, June 14, as Flag day, Governor Templeton recommends that the national colors be displayed from schools and homes and places of business in token of our loyalty.

That our national banner, starry flag, so much as it does to this country, is entitled to such a special day for the pledging anew of our allegiance will be made manifest throughout the country by its display, but in addition there will be the exercises in the schools and in the patriotic organizations of the land. It is of course a time for remembering the fact that the Star Spangled Banner forever shall wave over the land of the free and the home of the brave.

That we love and revere the flag that has inspired heroism and idealism more than any other flag in the world is not stating it too broadly and yet from time to time it is discussed that we are quite as thoughtless in its use and quite as frequently thoughtless in observing the proper degree of respect as we are in many other things that are of much consequence.

It was only during a recent convention in Washington that descendants had to be called to account for the manner in which they were bunching up and draping the national emblem. It was not meant as disrespect but was the outcome of being without the right attention being directed to the etiquette of the flag. No doubt it started thought along a line which will have its good effects under similar circumstances in the future. It shows that we should all give a little more consideration to Old Glory and the part it has played in the development of the nation and the world, and the preservation of peace and high ideals.

A FINE EXAMPLE.

In connection with the promotion of Lincoln it is no small saving that has been made by those who have shown a practice of selling their old paper. The returns therefrom may vary from time to time but it means the turning back into the channels of business raw material which can be utilized in other ways. Even a disturbing process makes it possible for newspaper to be reconverted into newsprint again.

In New York attention is being called to the work which the Salvation Army has been doing in providing employment by hiring men to collect old papers, bundle them and sent them to the mills to be made over and last year there were 15,000 tons disposed of in that manner. It meant work for some without it, it meant some profit and it meant the preserving of certain waste. Just how much this waste amounted to is indicated by the estimate that these 15,000 tons saved the trees on 9,000 acres which would have been required to supply the equivalent of wood pulp.

The Salvation Army saved only a small portion of the old paper that was gathered up throughout the country during the year, but it nevertheless set an example that is highly commendable from several viewpoints. It is only one of the ways of preventing waste but it presents an impressive lesson as to what can and ought to be done, and how much can be accomplished when there is the will. The aim may not have been to save the woodlands but that is what it helps to accomplish, along with other good.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Flag day, so show your colors.

The law of gravitation has its effect upon rules as well as other things.

Getting news out of Russia is a good deal like getting reparations out of Germany.

From the way things have warmed up in Bulgaria, it won't care if summer is a bit backward.

It is impossible to think about Germany these days without there coming to mind marks and remarks.

It wasn't any struggle at all for the city tax rate to outdistance the town tax rate in one grand leap.

With the repeated use of bricks of rubberia Ceylon it should be easy to stretch construction activities over there.

A liberal city meeting always makes the city fathers and the petitioners wonder why they didn't ask for more.

The man on the corner says: That western girl who can stand on her head 14 minutes is probably training to enter politics.

Apparently West Virginia knows better than to blow out the gas, but the supreme court now tells it that it must not turn it off.

Prohibition is to be enforced to the limit on water within the three-mile limit. If it is it will be more than has been done in any neck of land we know about.

Will congress put more teeth in the dry law to deal with cases like the New York situation, or will the New York situation cause congress to tone up the dry law a bit?

Wives of Famous Men

Juana Pacheco Wife of Velasquez.

The marriage of Juana Pacheco and Diego De Silva, known to the world as Velasquez, great Spanish painter of the Elizabethan era, was that rare combination, a marriage of convenience that was also a love match. Juana was the daughter of the youthful artist's master, a rich and fashionable painter. At 18 his work had convinced Pacheco that the pupil was greater than the teacher, and being ambitious, Pacheco thought it would be a great thing to have the young man in his family.

Wiley old person that he was, Pacheco invited Velasquez to make his home with him in order that the younger man might better avail himself of the instructions. Unostentatiously at first he revealed Juana, a restless, spring-like girl, with a gentle, shining soul and an enchanting beauty. Obviously such a girl would have a host of suitors—the studio was crowded with them day and night—but Juana did not seem to care particularly for any of them.

Juana and Diego were precisely the same age, 18, highly impressionable, eager, groping. It is only natural that, living side by side, they should mean come to love each other. In less than a year Pacheco's dream was realized—he was the father-in-law of one of the world's greatest painters.

As they grew older their love grew deeper and broader. Their lives, even after Velasquez was appointed court painter by Philip IV, were closely wedded. He consulted her in everything. She thought him ideal; she predicted that the king would send for him. To her he was the greatest man on earth and her life was dedicated to his service. Her faith of course, gave him added faith in himself.

When Velasquez died in 1660 at the age of 62, Juana said she did not wish to live any longer, and so closely was her life bound in his that it was only eight days later that she followed him to the grave.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

"Keeping steadily on the job" has become its reward in the case of Willis J. Fowler, who has been promoted to the position of First Deputy Comptroller of the Currency in the Treasury Department at Washington. Mr. Fowler entered the government service as a $900 a year clerk in 1895 and has since remained in the Treasury Department in different capacities. In the course of his long career in the department his capabilities and faithful service were rewarded with several promotions, both as to position and salary. Likewise, his latest advance to one of the most responsible and remunerative positions in the department is undoubtedly due, not to any political influence but to his long and honorable record of service.

Following complaint by Milton McClure of Poquetanuck that the motorcycle he was riding with Earl D. Caulkins of Fox Hill had been driven into a gutter and hit at Taftville by an automobile driven by Henry La Plante of Occum, La Plante was arrested Wednesday night and was brought to Norwich police headquarters on the charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. A relative provided a bond of $300 for his appearance in police court this (Thursday) morning.

Caulkins may have a broken leg and fractured ribs as a result of the accident, in the opinion of Dr. David Sussler who attended him.

McClure reported at police headquarters to Capt. D. J. Twomey that about 7.30 o'clock he and Caulkins were riding the motorcycle up Providence street between Norwich avenue and Trout street when the automobile came down on the left side of the street. Caulkins pulled into the gutter and the machine struck the motorcycle, injuring Caulkins and damaging the cycle.

Dr. Sussler took Caulkins to his home and is to have an X-ray picture taken to determine the extent of the man's injuries.

Capt. Twomey had a warrant issued for La Plante and Constable Fillgar arrested him at his home in Occum about 10.30 o'clock, bringing him to police headquarters. He charged the motorcyclists with driving on the left side of the road and denied that he was operating his car so as to endanger them.

Men's Bible Class at Y. M. C. A.

The reward of obedience was the topic of the Bible class for men at the Norwich Young Men's Christian association Wednesday evening. The scripture used was the fifth chapter of second Kings, the story of Naaman, the leper. In the study the following points were brought out: Though Naaman was very popular and honorable as well, the sad fact was that he was a leper. The awfulness of leprosy was described by one of the group, W. C. Cain, who spent some time in Y. M. C. A. work in Palestine; he had seen lepers and had watched the progress of the malady.

Leprosy is in a sense a type of sin; it begins in a small way, and spreads and spreads until it eats out the life of the one afflicted. So sin begins in a small way, indeed it seems very innocent at first, but day by day it grows on the life until the whole moral nature is affected. Leprosy separates one from his family, from his friends and from healthy society; so sin causes separation in more ways than we think and its greatest affliction is that it separates one from God.

The three practical lessons from the study were, first, if we would keep away from sin we must think of it as a very terrible thing; we think too lightly of sin in these days. Second, we must be willing to help even an enemy as the little maid did, even though she had been stolen from her home in Israel and was made a slave to Naaman's wife. Third, if we are to live as Christ desired we should, we must put away self-conceit and foolish pride and the desire to have our own way.

When a young man acts as a girl's escort for the first time she tries to impress other girls with the idea that she can marry him any time she wants to.

NORWICH BRAKEMAN IS STABBED BY YARDMASTER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 13.—James C. Sullivan of No. 73 Bedford street, Norwich, employed by the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad at New London as yard brakeman in the union station yards, is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, suffering from several knife wounds he sustained this evening when he engaged in a fight with Night Yardmaster Ray Clust. The latter, who resides at No. 139 Crystal avenue, was arrested by Motorcycle Officer William Babcock, charged with assault. He was released from custody upon furnishing a surety on a bond of $200 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning. Herman Katz becoming the surety.

Sullivan's wounds, while painful, are not serious, and it is believed he will be able to leave the hospital within a few days.

Sullivan was at work in the yard south of the union station shortly after 6 o'clock, and a part of his duties was to ride cars uncoupled by the yard switch engine to the extreme end of the yard. A string of six or seven cars was uncoupled and Sullivan did not ride them, the cars continuing to the end of the yard under their own momentum. Clust, who was on top of other cars, remonstrated with Sullivan for not riding the uncoupled cars, and a war of words followed, as Sullivan resented the reprimand. Sullivan, it is alleged, threatened Clust, if the latter came to the ground. Clust started to descend the ladder and Sullivan started after his superior and, yanking Clust from the ladder, both fell to the ground, but with Sullivan on top. While in that position Sullivan is alleged to have beaten Clust and the latter pulled a pocket knife and wielded it several times, the blade penetrating Sullivan's clothing and inflicting numerous wounds on the thigh. Fellow employes separated the two combatants and a physician who was called gave emergency treatment after which the injured man was removed to the hospital.

BIG CROWD WATCHES AUTO HAULED FROM RIVER

Three hours after Joseph Nejime's Oakland sedan had been hauled from the bed of the Yantic river the engine was operating again Wednesday afternoon and the car was ready to run in good order except for a badly smashed in rear and a broken running board.

A diver, with a tug and a lighter, from New London, got the car out of the river about noon Wednesday before a crowd estimated at over a thousand people who occupied every vantage point at the West Main street bridge where a view of the operations could be secured. Automobiles were parked all along West Main street and for a long distance up Washington street, their occupants having gone to see the car rescued from the bed of the river, where it landed Monday night after running away backwards and plunging off the bridge. The bridge was packed with spectators Wednesday so that at one time the marine wreckers feared the weight might break it down, and requested the police to keep so many people and automobiles off.

The diver spent about 25 minutes under water before he gave the signal to hoist. He had attached chains to the four hubs, which brought the car neatly to the surface, where it was swung aboard the lighter. The boat was then moved to a dock where the automobile was pulled off and towed to the Oakland service station.

Mr. Nejime at once went to work on it, draining the water out and drying the necessary parts. He had to put in a new battery and a new coil, but when these had been installed and all the water got out of the machinery, the machine was cranked and kicked off and moved away under its own power.

The diver reported that the bottom of the river was not muddy but was clean and sandy. Some of the sand came up on the wheels of the machine.

All the glass in the car was shattered by the shock when the machine hit the bridge.

The brakes were found on. It is believed now that the machine was started running down hill even with the brakes on by the jar of three army trucks that went through Main street within a few minutes of each other Monday night. Mr. Nejime found someone who told him they saw the car start to move just after the army trucks had gone through.

The Colchester territory is one that has always been a business contributor to Norwich stores and the merchants appreciate the importance of having an adequate means of transportation to this city. SOUND VIEW PROPERTY SUIT IS ON TRIAL

Trial of the $50,000 damage suit of Frank Way Chapman of Old Lyme against Joseph T. Cruttenden and Coast Line Realty Co., continued all day Wednesday here in the superior court before Judge George E. Hinman.

The plaintiff is seeking damages and to have a large tract of real estate at Sound View, Old Lyme, re-conveyed to him, besides having a certain contract and certificates of preferred stock in the Coast Line Realty Co. cancelled and set aside.

Mr. Chapman's suit is brought on the claim that Mr. Cruttenden by undue influence induced him about May 1, 1922, to execute a deed of the property so that the real estate might be sold and the avails turned over to Chapman. He claims that there was an agreement that the deed was to be kept in a safe deposit box by Cruttenden. He claims that for years later, Cruttenden had the deed recorded without Chapman's knowledge and that the property was worth $30,000 for which Chapman received no consideration. It is further claimed that Mr. Cruttenden had the $100,000 Coast Line Realty Co. incorporated and that he conveyed the real estate to this company without consideration.

A certain contract is part of the evidence by which it was agreed that $20,000 in preferred stock was to be issued to Chapman and was to be held under certain conditions that provided for money payments to be made to Chapman when lots were sold from the real estate. The plaintiff claims that this contract was improvident, unfair to him, unreasonable and illegal.

Witnesses for the plaintiff Wednesday were Harold P. Garvin, Harry J. Hibbard, Dexter S. Case, Atty E. B. Smith, Frank A. Young, Clarence L. Brockett, and the plaintiff's wife.

The plaintiff rested at 2.30 in the afternoon. His attorneys are Hull, McGuire and Hull.

Attorneys for the defendants, who are Arthur M. Brown and William H. Shields, Jr., called to the stand as witnesses Eugene D. Cunliffe, Henry B. Morton, George Griswold and John P. Parker.

The trial will be continued today.

AUTOMOBILE CRASH IN WILLIMANTIC STREET

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, June 13.—The bumpers were ripped off of two automobiles about 6.15 o'clock Wednesday evening by a large Velie touring car owned and driven by William Ibatrar of Mill street, Burnside, Conn. Ibatrar was proceeding west on Main street and the South Coventry trolley was coming from the east. The driver of the machine did not observe the oncoming trolley car until it was fred a few feet away at a point opposite the Popular Lunch in the center of the business section. Ibatrar found that his car was plumed between the trolley and two automobiles, a Cadillac owned by Dr. Owen O'Neill, and another machine owned by Alfred Nicholl, which were parked at angle along the curbing. Not being able to come to a sudden stop and endeavoring to avoid a collision with the trolley, Ibatrar drove his machine toward two standing cars, ripping off both bumpers. The right fenders on the Velie were damaged to some etent. Ibatrar agreed to settle for the damages and paid $12.50 to Dr. O'Neill and $20 to Nicholl.

Planets Valuable Commercially.

When in the month of May, 1492, Christopher Columbus arrived off the shores of Jamaica he recorded the fragrance of the spices borne far out to sea by the land breeze. Then as now in the month of May the air is charged with the aroma of the planets tree's blossoms. Both the leaves of the tree and its small, round, dark-colored berries are also heavily scented; the leaves contain oil of cayenne and the berries the "all spice" of commerce—formerly the one truly indigenous wild product which always has been, and still is, of considerable importance.

A Safe Wager.

We are told that there is nothing sure but death and taxes; and we feel pretty certain that we shall never see a circus parade headed by a pleasure car.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

East Killingly's Patriotic club is out to make that community the center of interest for the entire territory on the Fourth. Its committees have all been appointed, and they are at work. Not being at all selfish, and anxious that all with special ideas may compete, the club has invited anyone, whether resident of East Killingly or not, to compete for the cash prizes that will be given in connection with the parade and the athletic events.

James P. Aldrich is chairman of the parade committee. The parade is to be an event of the morning and there will be prizes for the best float, for the best decorated touring car, for the best mounted entry and for the bets (or possibly worst) horrible. Harold Brooks is chairman of the committee on sports and he is arranging a program that will be one of the features of the afternoon. There will be the usual band concerts, speaking at the church and, of course, a grand dinner by King George Jacques, who will be celebrating his birthday on the Fourth. This is to be East Killingly's big day of the year, and if one may judge by the attendance there last year, the place will be crowded with people throughout the day.

Wednesday evening in St. John's hall a miscellaneous shower was given for Miss Alice Dubamel of Cottage street by a large number of her girl friends. The occasion was a particularly happy one and the bride-to-be received many beautiful gifts. Various socially entertaining features were introduced during the evening.

An automobile trip from Glen Ridge, N. J., to Indian Spring farm on Allen Hill was made recently by John G. Olmstead of the United Y. M. C. A. schools, his small son, Allen MacConnell Olmstead, Miss Evelyn A. Salmon and John W. Allen of Springfield, O., assistant physical director of the Canteen, N. S. Y. M. C. A., and student at the College of Osteopathy in Philadelphia. Mr. Olmstead and Mr. Allen have returned to Glen Ridge and Philadelphia after a stay at the farm, while Miss Salmon and Master Allen Olmstead remain to spend the summer with Miss Salmon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Salmon. Mrs. Olmstead, a college friend of Miss Salmon, who is married, during the summer semester at Ohio State university, Columbus, O., to complete her work for a degree, will motor to the farm in September to take her small son back to Glen Ridge.

A Massachusetts truck that went out of control and smashed into a pole beside the main highway on the route between Brooklyn and Hampton late Wednesday night was towed to a local garage for repairs. The machine was not badly damaged nor was anyone hurt in the accident.

An attendance that will be representative of about every community in the town of Killingly will be at the town hall this (Thursday) afternoon to attend the graduation exercises for the eighth grade pupils of Killingly's schools. The program for these exercises is such this year as to promise an interesting afternoon for all attending.

This is Flag day! Its significance is to instill patriotism; to inspire love for the flag and the deeds of those who have borne it triumphantly on many a hell-swept fields and who have given life itself for what it represents. Strange as it may seem, so soon after the world's greatest war, there is not the general respect shown the flag that veterans and all patriotic citizens would like to see. This is frequently commented on by color bearers in patriotic parades. They have noted that a large percentage of the people fail to show respect by uncovering as the flag has passed by, and it has hurt them that this should be so after the sacrifices the soldiers and sailors have made. Today in Danielson there is an opportunity to do something to offset this feeling. Put out the flags! The sight will be an inspiring one and will bring joy to many hearts.

Lessened in density, but still present, the smoke pall clung to this section of eastern Connecticut during Wednesday. Check-up of press reports Wednesday seemed to establish beyond all doubt that the smoke has drifted down from northern Maine, where great forest fires are raging in Aroostook county. There have been no forest fires of any consequence in this corner of the state or in southern Massachusetts this week.

Paul Mainden, 12, brought the body of Rosario Aubin, 12, from the bottom of the Quinebaug river within an hour after the boy was drowned Tuesday afternoon, after making the seventh dive for exploration of the stream. Mainden is a powerful swimmer and a good diver, with a faculty of remaining under water an unusually long time. On his seventh attempt to recover the body his dive took him directly to it, and he brought it to the surface without great difficulty.

Carroll S. Allen of the alumni association is to manage the alumni team that is going to beat the regular Killingly High school team in the annual game Friday afternoon of next week—that is, as the alumni see it. The team views the matter from an entirely different angle and expects to turn the alumni down by a big score. In any event, it will be the usual great game, with representatives of many classes in attendance. In the meantime Manager Allen is sending out S. O. S. calls for old-time high school players to report to him for service. He has only started to build up his team and wants to hear from all the alumni members who would be interested in playing. There is plenty of fine material for a team among the alumni and if it will only respond to the appeal the chances of victory will be increased.

A brand new vacuum cleaner found by a trolley crew beside the tracks bordering the state highway at Elmville Wednesday noon is not a device adapted for sucking dust out of the road, it has been established, but it was an odd bit of equipment to be lying around so sort of careless.

He grinds the dirt right in!

With gay indifference to your washday problems he makes a thorough job of getting grimy

How irresistible is that business-like look of his in his stiff, crackly little overalls. He works away so seriously at his small-sized edition of daddy's automobile.

Down on his knees wriggling under the wheels to see what's wrong—"oiling the engine" with gobs of mud, then wiping grimy little paws off on the convenient seat of his overalls.

You wouldn't have him be one bit less active—or less dirty!—even if you still had to rub out all the dirt he so conscientiously rubbed in.

Yet how glad you are that you no longer have to wear yourself out getting his little playclothes clean.

You can now let all that old hard rubbing be replaced by soaking.

Just soaking in the suds of this new soap—Rinso—gently loosens all the dirt. With Rinso harmless soaking does away with harmful rubbing.

Even the ground-in dirt—on seats and knees of playclothes—at hems and collar bands—is so loosened by the cleansing Rinso suds that it comes out with only a light rubbing. Do that little rubbing with a bit of dry Rinso. The worst spots will disappear.

Has taken the place of bar soap

Rinso is already replacing bar soap in homes everywhere—55 million packages of it are now used.

It is so perfect for washing machines that leading washing machine manufacturers urge women to use it for best results.

Rinso is made by the largest soapmakers in the world—the makers of Lux. It is as wonderful for the regular week-in, week-out family wash as Lux is for all fine things. Get Rinso today. Sixty Million Miles at a Cost of Less than Two-Tenths of a Cent Per Mile for Replacements

That is the amazing record made by the 10,000 Rickenbacker Sixes now on the road.

Figuring up an average of 6000 miles per car per year—and our records show that is a low average—and taking the total of replacement and repair parts shipped from our Service Department, many of which are still in distributors' stock rooms—the results show the remarkable fact that Rickenbacker cars have covered more than sixty million miles (60,000,000) at a cost of less than two-tenths of a cent per mile.

That is another—or perhaps the primary—reason for Rickenbacker success. Other reasons for the tremendous popularity of this car are:

—Power Plus.
—Absolute absence of any periods of vibration at any speed.
—Tandem Flywheels.
—Air cleaner, which guarantees longer life and freedom from excessive carbon deposits.
—Ease of control and finally, Pride of Ownership, such as you can derive from no car other than that which carries the "Hat in the Ring" insignia on the radiator.

NOANK INN PROPRIETOR ARRESTED IN NEW LONDON ON LIQUOR CHARGE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 13.—Louis Webb, formerly a member of the state police force and now the proprietor of the Bayside inn at Noank, for he is charged with having and transporting liquor that intoxicates. He was seized on the Thames river bridge by Federal Agents Joe Fitzpatrick of New London and Keeler of Williman-tic in this city early this morning and later was arraigned in the police court for a hearing. The agents who took Mr. Webb into custody had other business to claim their attention so that they were engaged all night and could not be in court this forenoon, so the case went over till tomorrow am. Webb was held in $500 to answer then. When the federal men seized the auto Webb was operating they took it to the Thompson garage on Bank street and put it in safe keeping there, but Webb appeared later in the day, claimed the car and took it away. He was warned of what he was doing, but put up a defiant attitude and went off with the car. It is understood that the seizure made by the federal men was of sixty bottles of whiskey which at ruling prices would have yielded something like $600. It is hinted here that it is to be dangerous business to be found with liquor in transportation here about hereafter. The revenue men have not been active in New London for a considerable time, but it is said they have now been "spoken to" and that they will be on the alert for offenders against the Volstead act in the future.

Albert Caracausa was in the police court this forenoon charged with embezzling $1,500 from one Joseph Laerdieri, the money alleged to have been represented in bank books in the possession of Caracausa and belonging to Laerdieri. Mr. Caracausa was held in a bond of $2,000 to answer next Saturday. He had some difficulty in finding a surety on the bond, but he was successful in the afternoon. Mr. Caracausa claims that he is the victim of circumstances, that he did not steal the funds that he had the opportunity to take and that he has offered in every way to make good any loss Laerdieri has sustained.

Mr. Caracausa declares that he made some bad investments or that brokers he dealt with did not treat him fairly and that as a result he became involved in financial dealings that cost him and his mother several thousand dollars.

Dominick Mossri, a lodger at the Lincoln house on Golden street, complained to the police this evening that late yesterday a thief entered his room and stole a new suit of clothes and a pair of shoes, the aggregate value of which was $42. That the thief had knowledge of the existence of the clothes in the room and also was well acquainted with the place, was evidenced from the fact that the thief knew just where the clothes and shoes were stored.

Samuel Arienitz of Norwich, R. F. D. No. 7, was arrested this afternoon by Sergeant Samuel Hick when Arienitz violated a city ordinance in hitching his horse on Main street, Arienitz not only violating the section prohibiting hitching, but he also violated another section of the ordinance, which makes it an offense to feed animals in the highway. Arienitz furnished a surety on his bond of $25 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning, I. Goldstein becoming the surety.

At a meeting of the directors of the Savings Bank of New London yesterday afternoon the former board was re-elected, the meeting being held in the banking rooms of the institution on Main street. Justice Morton in the Waterford town court fined Peter Toubon $50 for starting a brush fire without permission of the fire wardens. He paid the fines but was given the privilege of paying the costs in installments. It is estimated that $5,000 damage has been occasioned in Waterford during the past two years by brush fires. Testimony to that effect was given at the hearing by George and Theodore Chappell who are constant to judge.

He was 70 years of age and is survived by his wife and two sons, Harry M. Holmes, clerk in the post office and Paul Holmes, a carpenter. Mr. Holmes was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and was for many years superintendent of its Sunday school.

A still alarm summoned the Northwest Hose company and so serious was the fire that three tanks of chemicals were emptied upon the fire before it was subdued. The damage was slight.

TWO BUILDINGS BURNED AT SUBMARINE BASE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 13.—Two buildings were destroyed together with their contents of foodstuffs, an automobile and two motorcycles and two other structures were extensively damaged when fire attacked the buildings just outside the submarine base early this morning. The fire started in the grocery store of Jacob Katz, which structure was entirely destroyed and spread to the garage in the rear, which he owned and which stored the automobile and motorcycles that were the property of sailors at the submarine base. Another building, a dwelling owned by Katz and a second dwelling owned by a man named Main, were damaged by the two houses being ignited by flying sparks. The damage, it is estimated, will aggregate close to $20,000.

Katz closed his store about 11 o'clock Wednesday night and at that time the building was in a complete condition of safety. Shortly before 2.30 o'clock a watchman in passing the store discovered the interior a mass of flames and caused an alarm to be sounded at the base. The fire fighting equipment there was rushed to the burning building but by the time that the fire fighters reached the scene of the fire, the building was doomed and the fire had communicated to the garage. So serious did the flames become that assistance was asked from the central fire station at New London and Deputy Chief Rose and the Nameaug Engine company responded. By the time that the New London firemen reached the burning buildings sparks had ignited the Katz and Main tenements and the combined efforts of the firemen and sailors was devoted to saving the two houses. This was accomplished because of the exceptionally strong water pressure that was available for two streams deluged the burning buildings resulting in their being saved, but not until the firemen had worked an hour to conquer the flames.

How the fire started is a mystery, but it is believed that a cigar or cigarette butt carelessly dropped on the floor of a locker room that is located in the rear of the Katz store and which is used by the sailors was responsible for the blaze. The sailors have access to the locker room after the store is closed if accompanied to the building by the watchman and it is understood that several visited the place last night after Katz had closed the store for the night.

Day's sales, 1,661,000 shares.

Twenty industrials averaged, 94.79, net loss .18. High 1923: 100.53; low, 90.77.

Twenty railroads averaged, 83.75, net gain .04. High 1923: 90.83; low, 80.13.

MARKET WAS HEAVY.

New York, June 14.—Stock prices generally displayed a heavy tone during the greater part of today's market despite another series of favorable dividend developments, including the raising of the New York Central rate from $5 to $7 annual basis. Professional bear traders continued their attacks on the market and succeeded in forcing some material recessions in the steels, oils, equipments, rubbers and motors, but many of these rallied a point or so before the close. Sales exceeded the million mark for the first time since May 22.

On the theory that it reflected the financial judgment on present and future conditions of the Morgan, Baker, Vanderbilt and other powerful financial interests, the increased new York Central dividend was regarded in many quarters as one of the most constructive market developments in many months. The stock, which closed at par yesterday, advanced to 103 in the early trading but dropped back to 99 1-4 on circulation of reports while the directors were in session that the new rate would not be over $6 and that the rate might not be changed at all. The announcement of the $7 rate came as a surprise, the stock soaring to 104 1-8, a new high, often jumping half a point between sales. Approprimately 135,900 shares changed hands during the day, the closing price of 104 3-4 representing a net gain of 5 3-4.

During the market's reactionary periods another flock of new low records were made including such stocks as U. S. Steel common, Bethlehem Steel, General Asphalt, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Sinclair, Producers & Refiners, U. S. Rubber, Kelly-Springfield, Goodyear, Goodrich, American Sumatra Tobacco and Consolidated Textile.

American Can sold as low as 96 1-4, closing at 97, off 1 1-8. Woolworth was strong until the directors announced that there was no intention of increasing the dividend, the stock dropping from 328 1-2 to 321 1-4, off 1-8. California Petroleum closed nearly a point higher.

Southern Railway was again active, closing nearly a point higher. Other carriers showed mixed changes but they were mainly higher.

Call money opened at 4 3-4, eased off to 4 1-3 and thence to 4, where it closed. The time money market was dull with a few loans arranged at 4 3-4 but bankers asking 5 for all maturities. The bulk of the commercial paper business continues at 5 per cent.

Renewed weakness of German marks which fell below .0016 cents for the first time was the feature of the quiet and irregular foreign exchange market. Demand sterling held just above $4.61 and French francs eased slightly to 6.38 cents.

BOND MARKET.

New York, June 14.—After opening dull and slightly lower bond prices turned upward on announcement of the higher dividend rate on New York Central common stock but reacted somewhat at the close. Net changes on the day were small with a majority of the listed issues yielding.

New York Central 6s climbed more than two points but failed to hold at this level and closed about 3-4 higher than yesterday's final quotations. Many of the other railroad mortgages showed signs of strength around midday but closed fractionally lower. Third Avenue adjustment 5s were off a point.

Industrial liens moved irregularly within narrow limits, a loss of 1 point by Empire Gas & Fuel 7 1-2s being the only outstanding change.

United States government bonds were slightly reactionary, losses ranging from 2-32 to 1-32 of a point. Foreign government issues also were somewhat heavy although net changes were small. The new Austrian 7s continued in demand with a few odd lot sales going as high as 91 1-2.

Total sales (par value) were $30,169,000.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 13.—Unfavorable reports about probable serious curtailment of the wheat yield in Kansas this season, and also in France, had a bullish effect today on the wheat market here. Closing prices were firm, 1-2 to 1c net higher, with July $1.11 1-4 to $1.11 3-8 and Sept. 1.09 1-4 to 1.09 3-8. Corn, too, finished 1-8 to 1c up, oats at unchanged figures to 1-4@3-8c lower and provisions 10c lower to 10c higher.

An upward tendency which the wheat market showed at the opening soon was followed by a material decline, and it was only in the last hour of trading that price gains were re-established. The initial strength of prices appeared to be due chiefly to an unexpected advance in Liverpool quotations. However, the Liverpool advance failed to hold, the buying here lacked volume, and there was considerable selling as a result of bearish estimates of the winter crop in Illinois, Missouri and Nebraska, all suggesting much larger production than previously indicated.

Offerings of wheat became scarce in the last half of the day, and shorts who tried to buy met with difficulty. Under such circumstances, the market proved sensitive to advices regarding Kansas crop deterioration and to assertions that the condition of the wheat crop in France was alarming because of bad weather. A little investment buying at the last gave added force to the price advance, and the finish was at virtually the day's top figures.

Corn swayed with wheat. During the late dealings, liberal orders to buy July corn at 80c and September at 76c brought about a tight situation for shorts. Besides, shipping demand here was said to be more urgent than has been acknowledged. Oats were weakened by slackness of cash inquiry.

In the provision market, selling on the part of smaller packers counterbalanced firmness of hog values.

WESTERLY

Judge William A. Wilcox held the second town court since taking office in the Stonington town court room in Stonington, Wednesday morning.

State Traffic Officer John Palmer, from the Groton headquarters, presented in court William Shaffer, 19 Northwest street, Stonington, who was arrested June 9th, charged with running an automobile without an operator's license. At the same time John D. O'Neil, of Pearl street, Groton, was also presented, charged with an improper use of number plates. He had a registration "O'Neil," a public service marker used for a Studebaker car which were attached to a Chalmers sedan. Clerk A. G. Martin read the charges and both Shaffer and O'Neil pleaded guilty. Prosecuting Attorney George R. McKenna addressed the court, stating that these cases grew out of an automobile collision which occurred Saturday night, June 9th, on the Stonington road one mile on the Stonington side of Wequetequock. A Ford touring car with winter top owned by Shaffer was standing on the car track when the other car came along and struck the standing machine and considerable damage was done to both automobiles. Investigation by the state traffic officer resulted in the finding of the facts as brought forward in the writs.

Lafayette Main of Swan Town Hill was present in court and addressed the judge in behalf of the offenders.

Judge Wilcox found the defendants guilty and fined each $10 and costs, $11.27, totaling $21.27. The fines and costs were paid.

At the weekly drill of the 240th C. A. C. company in the state armory on Dixon street, Tuesday evening there was an informal check up by state and federal officers on the organization, equipment and progress made. The plotting board which had not been properly set up was fixed and some minor conditions remedied or recommendations made. Besides the regular company officers, Capt. Christie McConnell and Lieutenants John F. Datson and G. S. R. Moorehouse, there were present Major Taylor, U. S. inspector for the Rhode Island National Guard, with his associates, Captain Sam Anderson, Sergeants Lundregan and Edward A. Coy, U. S. A., Major J. D. Collins and Major D. W. Wells, P. and D. officer. A detail in charge of Sergeant Maxwell moved some of the heavy fittings of the disappearing gun on the lawn in front of the armory. It is expected that on next Tuesday night considerable progress may be made in getting the big guns into the armory. Intensive training of range sections will be started in preparation for the company target practice at Fort H. G. Wright.

Opposition by the Shore Line Electric Railway company to the granting of licenses by the Rhode Island Public Utilities Commission for a route from Hope Valley-Westerly was made at the hearing in room 121 Rhode Island state house in Providence on Wednesday, when interested parties were heard.

The funeral of Mary Ella Davis, widow of George F. Davis, who died in Pawcatuck, June 11, age 83 years, was held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. G. Martin, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services were in charge of Rev. B. U. Hatfield of the First Baptist church. Interment was in White Brook cemetery, Carolina. The bearers were Amos E. Burdick, Paul Rietzel, William A. Wilcox, Charles E. Card, of Providence, and Arthur R. Riley. Mrs. Davis passed the early days of her life on the Jonathan Potter homestead, so-called, on the Richmond road coming to Westerly about eight years ago to make her home with her daughter, Mrs. A. G. Martin, 27 Moss street. The deceased was well known as a kindly, self-effacing host to her friends retaining the amiable characteristics of the old fashion mother. She maintained active interest in current affairs to within a short time of her death. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. A. G. Martin and Mrs. Amos E. Burdick, both of Moss street. STONINGTON

The Stonington Baptist Union Association met with the First Baptist church of Stonington, Wednesday, and will continue its session on Thursday. The pastor, Dr. Henry M. Thompson, gave the words of welcome, and told those present that they were being entertained by one of the oldest churches in this part of the country, being instituted on the 22nd day of April, 1778, in the midst of the stirring days of the American Revolution. It has been a factor in the religious life of the people of Stonington for more than 145 years.

Wednesday's program had many fine features. Prayer was offered by Rev. George A. Atha, of the Groton Heights Baptist church followed by prayer by Rev. Edward Knapp, and the scripture lesson was read by Rev. W. D. Hetherington. Rev. Elmer E. Scates gave a stirring talk on Christ's Friends. He spoke about the act of friendly feelings toward one's neighbors, and of the spirit of community friendship and said we should have an international friendship of mankind toward one another which should be a greater friendship for the world. He quoted from Emerson, "If you would have a friend you must be a friend," and finished by quoting from the scripture, "If you do whatsoever I command you you are my friend."

Letters to the entertaining church were read from the different churches, and the moderator, Rev. George Atha of Groton, responded. He thanked the church for the hearty greeting extended and of the pleasure it gave by reviewing the past, and they would go back to do their work better than in the days gone by. The nominating committee was chosen and they are to report Thursday morning. Mrs. Brown, of the Noank Baptist church, and Mrs. Fred Brown of Stonington, were appointed to act on the committee.

The Jubilee Singers, a colored quartette, from Shaw University, Raleigh, N. C., sang to selections most effectively. Benediction was given by Rev. James Higgins. A recess was taken at noon and the delegates and those present from out of town were provided dinner at the community house by the J. F. Trumbull Woman's Relief Corps. They took care of one hundred and fifty persons.

The letters read were from First Groton church at Groton, Groton Heights Baptist church, Jewett City church, Laurel Glen, Mystic Union Baptist church and Noank Baptist church, and the First Baptist church of Stonington, Ledyard Baptist church. The following churches sent delegates Old Mystic, First Groton Baptist church 3; Groton Heights 4, Jewett City Baptist church 1, Laurel Glen 1, Mystic Union Baptist 5, Noank Baptist 4, Second North Stonington Baptist 3, Third Baptist church, North Stonington 1, Pequonoc Baptist church 6, Preston City Baptist church 3, Sterling Hill 1.

The afternoon session, Mrs. Henry M. Thompson, presided, and after a musical service, Mrs. Lucian Drury, opened the devotional service of the afternoon session. Mrs. Arthur M. Brown, gave a talk on The Study Books, this was followed by a most interesting address by Miss Lydia Edgerly, of Hartshorn college. Mrs. Frank Stanton, rendered a solo most effectively. Mrs. H. E. Dudley, spoke on Murma, telling of the people and the ways and customs. The Baptist Convention was given by Rev. Elbert E. Gates. The Jubilee Singers rendered most delightfully a selection which was followed by the offering which was taken up and benediction given by Rev. Lucian Drury. The meeting closed at five o'clock. Supper was also provided for the visitors present.

The evening service opened at six o'clock, and the Jubilee Singers, again entertained with vocal selections, followed with a devotional service by Rev. Henry M Thompson, D. D. The First Baptist church choir rendered a musical selection. The choir was assisted by Mrs. Frank Stanton of the borough. J. Foster Wilcox, D. D., gave a talk on "Our Citizenship."

The benediction was given by Rev. Jonathan G. Osborne, which concluded the evening's program. The Jubilee Singers, of Raleigh, N. C., proved to be a great treat, and their musical selections rendered were greatly appreciated by the large audience present at all of the meetings. Rev. George A. Atha of Groton was moderator and Rev. C. A. Merrill, of Noank acted as clerk.

Engine No. 3 of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad and a Dodge automobile owned and driven by Erick Jensen of Groton were in collision Tuesday night at the North Water street crossing. The car was slightly damaged.

A west bound freight had passed the crossing and backed into the station to await power orders. The crossing tender, W. C. Dalton, had raised the gates to let the waiting automobiles pass over the tracks and did not notice the train coming from the west. As the wheels of Jensen's car left the rails the locomotive sideswiped it causing it to spin around. The frame of the machine was bent and the gas tank was demolished.

The other occupants of the car were Mr. Jensen's wife and a lady friend who was thrown from the car onto the ground. None of the occupants was injured.

VERDICT FOR DEFENDANT IN SUIT OVER GAS MACHINE SALE

Christopher Hansen of Franklin, defendant in a case on trial here Wednesday in the common pleas court before Judge C. B. Waller and a jury, won his case when the jury late in the afternoon returned a verdict for the defendant.

The plaintiff was the J. B. Colt Co. New Jersey, which sued him to collect for a gas machine and a note, which was involved in the sale of a machine to Hansen on Oct. 16, 1920, which was to be delivered on Nov. 1, 1920, at the station of the Central Vermont road at Yantic. It was not delivered until January 1 and Hansen refused to accept it. The agent in the sale was Frank Murphy. The note in the case was for $345.95.

The witnesses were F. P. Dunphy, Herman A. Gibbs, A. Hansen, Orra E. Miner, John Eugene Murphy, Harry Alfred Hansen, Sinne Hansen and Emil Edward Rother.

The arguments were made in the afternoon by Attorneys E. W. Perkins for the plaintiff and by Attorney Charles W. Stewart for the defendant.

Court adjourned to the next morning when the suit of Henry Marx against Alex Lapate, both of this city, was taken up for trial. It is a suit for damages to Marx automobile in a collision at Taftville on the night of Oct. 28, 1922, with Lapate's car.

In the court on Tuesday the suit of Frank Ferry of Norwich against Joseph Ferrino of New London, was on trial on Ferry's claim for $1,000 damages from Ferrino for injuries received when he had ribs broken and when he was thrown out of his wagon which was hit by the Ferrino automobile on West Main street on Feb. 1, 1921. The jury gave a verdict of $350 for Ferry.

Attorney Talley E. Babcock was counsel for the plaintiff and Attorney Thomas E. Troland for the defendant.

YALE-HARVARD DAY FOR NORWICH ROTARIANS

Wednesday was Yale-Harvard day at the regular meeting of the Norwich Rotary club held at the Wauregan hotel, when members of the Harvard and Yale coaching staff, and crew managers met on common ground as guests of the local club. Collegiate rivalry was dispensed with and only once during the luncheon was it manifest. This was when the Yale men and grads were asked to sing and they responded with "Poor Harvard." The Harvard men took their turn at the piano and although small in numbers were mighty in their vocal powers they responding with a song that consigned the members of the Yale crew to a much warmer climate than that at Gales Ferry.

Those present from the Harvard quarters at Red Top were Coach Bill Haines, Crew Manager Sheridan Logan, Assistant Crew Manager Frank Baldwin 2nd, Assistant Crew Manager W. Scott Blanchard, 150 Pound Crew Manager Ranny Miner, Assistant Manager A. T. Wells and Assistant Dean of Harvard college Robert E. Bacon. Those from the Yale crew were Crew Manager J. T. Houck, Assistant Manager Robbins, Freshman Coach Murphy and Assistant Coach Moore. The tables for the luncheon were decorated in blue and crimson with toy balloons of the same colors.

President Charles A. Saxton presided and Adelard Morin was the song leader. During the luncheon Coach Bill Haines entertained with two ripping English songs and after insistent applause responded with a corking good song about Widow Way. There was a section by those members elected to political power led by Mayor Mile R. Waters.

At the business session two new members were extended the right hand Rotary fellowship by President Saxton, Secretary Joseph W. Weymouth, who is the delegate to the International convention of Rotary at St. Louis next week was given a traveling bag containing many of the necessities for such a trip.

After the business of the meeting the remainder of the time was turned over to Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, chairman of the educational committee. Dr. Campbell introduced the speaker of the day, Dr. A. B. Meredith, chairman of the state board of education, who spoke at length on the problems of Public Education.

In his talk he laid especial stress on the fact that the state board of education was not trying to get control of the publication education under one head but rather that it was trying in all possible ways to assist the municipalities in improving their school systems. The state has no tendency to take away any privilege that the towns have but rather wants to stimulate interest in the school affairs. The question of public education is one of importance as the boys and girls that are in school now will hold the balance of power 15 years from now. With this in view the education of these children can not and must not be neglected. We must get away from the crowd thinking and do a little individual reasoning. It's all very well to follow a slogan but each one must do his own thinking and get away from the danger of the crowd-mind. We must train the young people to think creatively and to this end the state is doing its best.

We have in Connecticut a town-state system of schools while some other states have a strictly state system. It is the function of the state to fix minimums standard in the hands of the state board of education. Health instruction and training for citizenship are among the features considered as well as a minimum standard of teaching. There is difficulty in bringing municipalities up to the standard in spending money for education Connecticut is not out of proportion to other states. Comparative figures were quoted by the speaker, showing that this state is somewhere near the top in public education, which is steadily taking on more the character of a profession.

At the conclusion of his highly interesting and instructive talk Dr. Meredith was extended a rising vote of thanks.

The singing of the Star Spangled Banner closed the meeting.

OLDEST ACTIVE PAINTER HAS NIECE IN NORWICH

Joseph Warner of Holland, Mich., whose niece is Mrs. H. A. Wheeler of 52 Union street, this city, is probably the oldest painter in Michigan if not in America who is still actively engaged in his art and who is still practicing it to contribute to his support. Mr. Warner is 92 years old and will be 93 in October but he still goes out from time to time with his easel in hand to do some sketching, later on painting the pictures in his studio at his home. In addition to doing some landscape painting, Mr. Warner also still occasionally does portrait work in the way of copying photographs for enlarged canvasses.

Mr. Warner was at one time a portrait painter and worked up quite a business in that line. But the rapid strides made by photography made the path of the portrait painter rather hard and so Mr. Warner deserted that line and went in for landscape.

Mr Warner is an ardent spiritualist and is deeply interested in the work of such men as Conan Doyle, Sir Oliver Lodge and other defenders of the philosophy of spiritualism. "I am still quite well and enjoying life," said the veteran artist, "and I am ready for anything that may be in store for me. I am ready to go on living and I am also ready to become an angel any time. I am not afraid to go when the time comes."

Arizona comes to the front with the discovery of mines of petrified whiskey. In after years they'll probably discover a petrified bar in that vicinity.

PRESTON'S ANTI-POLLUTION BILL AROUSES INTEREST

Presentation to the board of finance of Waterbury last week of Engineer Charles Preston's bill for studying precipitation in the upper branches of the Naugatuck, ordered some years ago, has stirred public interest to the point of asking if the project proposed at that time to eliminate the river pollution could not be carried to completion now and so obviate any danger of future legislatures passing such drastic legislation as that now before the governor but which is expected to be vetoed.

This project was probably the first step taken to attempt to solve the problem of eliminating the pollution of the Naugatuck or any Connecticut stream. In 1913 about 30 manufacturers of the Naugatuck valley held several meetings in Waterbury, discussed not only the great shortage of river water during the summer months but the horrible insanitary conditions that prvail practically the entire length of the Naugatuck from Torrington to the confluence with the Housatonic at Derby. Matters had come to the pass that the Naugatuck Valley manufacturers were willing to expend large sums of money to have any scheme put forth that would not only give an additional stream flow but would take the sewage off and keep the stream fairly sanitary.

Accordingly, Engineer Charles H. Preston of Waterbury was retained by these 30 corporations and ordered to investigate the Naugatuck river, its tributaries and make a detailed report on some method of "Equalizing the Naugatuck river stream flow and cleansing the valley to a more sanitary condition. The manufacturers appointed a commission consisting of the late Ex-Senator Lewis A. Platt, president of Platt Bros., Co. Waterbury; W. H. H. Koorsier, president of the Seymour Manufacturing company, and Charles H. Preston, the consulting engineer, and active investigations began early in 1914.

Mr. Preston after several years of the most careful preliminary investigations reported to the manufacturers that in his opinion enough water could be stored in the upper reaches of the Naugatuck by a huge water conservation project which meant that by the construction of a series of large dams and holding basins to be built on the large tributaries) it would be possible to impound billions upon billions of gallons of water which would be gathered in during the annual spring freshets and held in storage until about July each year and then during July, August, September and October this water thus released could flow down the river channel and not only maintain the stream flow throughout the year, stop to a great extent the freshets that caused annually thousands of dollars of damage but would create quite a live stream flow all through the summer months that naturally would take along with it the sewage and industrial wastes which now are polluting the Naugatuck, one of the most important streams from an industrial point of view in the New England states.

Mr. Preston's report covered mainly the four largest of the tributaries and work was begun investigating Lead Mine Brook whose watershed has a total area of nearly 23 square miles.

The first of a series of dams was laid out, the valley measured to determine the storage capacity, a careful series of borings along the center line of the great dam (1,400 feet in length and 118 feet thick at the base) taken down to bedrock and the whole scheme and plans were submitted to the Connecticut Board of Civil Engineers who issued the Civil Engineers who issued to the Manufacturers' Commission a certificate of approval for construction in accordance with the engineer's plans.

It is estimated that this work, one of the first of a series would cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000.

Meanwhile the State Board of Health had created a States Industrial Waste Board who also made investigations of Lead Town Studies have been carried on a very extensive scale to determine methods of handling the many wastes such as brass, copper, iron, silk, paper, rubber and many others. The sewage of practically all cities and towns is now turned into the river untreated and Waterbury is one of the largest corporations in the valley contributing in this way.

From time to time the Wastes board have issued reports and recommendations among the most prominent and apparently most worthy is the one in which it states "It is probable that the correct solution of this problem will be found in a combination of partial purification of domestic and factory wastes with such increased dilution as may be secured at reasonable cost by the storage and compounding of waters from conservation."

NORWICH PRIVATE DAY SCHOOL'S CLOSING EXERCISES

The Norwich Private Day school held the closing exercises of its tenth year Tuesday afternoon at Slater Memorial annex with a large attendance of patrons and friends of the school. The principal, Miss Mararete Bucky, presided at the exercises and made a short welcoming address in which she outlined the purpose of the school work of the past year.

The motto chosen for the past year she said, had been "Play the Game Fair."

That means to know the rules of the game and it is a good way to look upon our daily duties as upon a game, and now, at the end of the year's game, we find the results are in keeping with the effort made in keeping the rules of the game.

These results, of course, may not be shown in a moment, nor will they appear here during these exercises, but they will show, and as the days go by, probably all of us will find in looking backwards, that a greater step has been made ahead, than we dared hope in looking forward. This is always so, fully plods along, when one learns the little lessons, besides the big ones, for the little lessons are the character builders, they will never fail us.

Prizes Presented.

In presenting the prizes for the year Miss Suck said: A visible proof of the effort made by the pupils is here shown by the little records, which I am about to give out.

These books are not prizes in the sense of having been offered at the beginning of the year, and worked for, they are records given for faithful works, not for ability nor gifts, for these are records in themselves, and competition would therefore be unfair. Still we do call them prizes, since that is the custom.

She presented the following:

A prize offered by "A Friend of the School," and voted by the pupils to be given for Steady Work to Virginia Grover and to Frisbie Mitchell.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

The Elephant and the Cherry Pie

Now, let me see. Where did we leave off in the story before this. Wasn't it just when the Old Brown Horse was saying that automobiles had left so many horses without anything to do?

Well, just then, the little rabbit's friend, the elephant sang a song that he had heard while travelling with the circus.

"The circus tent is big and white,
And it's just like home to me;
And I love to play in the great big ring;
Oh, it's there I long to be."

"Yes, the things we used to do always seem the best," sighed the Old Brown Horse. "Very often I grumbled because I had to draw the old buggy, but how I wish I were back again at my old job."

Then the elephant sighed only when he sighed it sounded like a gale of wind.

"Yes, that's the way I feel. Used to grumble because I had to stand on my head in the circus, but if I could only go back I'd stand on my tail!" and that great big beast wiped a tear from his left eye with the tip of his right ear.

Just then, little Lady Love called from the kitchen window. "The cherry pie is baked!" and you should have seen them scamper back to the house. Maybe I shouldn't say the elephant scampered for he is too big, but he got there just the same and when they were all seated on the back steps little Lady Love handed them all a big piece of cherry pie.

But, oh dear me! All of a sudden the elephant began to choke and tears as big as silver dollars fell from his eyes. By and by there was a big puddle on the ground for Mrs. Duck to swim in.

"Let me pound you on the back," said kind Lady Love, but the poor old elephant had swallowed a cherry pit the wrong way and, although she pounded him with all her might he got black in the face. I mean he grew a deal blacker for he was black anyway you know.

"What shall we do?" cried Little Jack Rabbit getting dreadfully worried over his big kind elephant friend.

"Open your mouth, Mr. Elephant," said Mrs. Duck swimming over. Then pushing her long neck way down his throat she pulled out the cherry pit with her big yellow bill. Wasn't that clever in her? Well, I guess it was.

"Ah, I feel better now!" exclaimed the poor elephant, and hobbling over to the old well, he let down the bucket and when he had pulled it up, he drank it all down with one swallow—I mean, after he had sucked it up in his trunk and squirted it down his throat.

KING ACCEPTS RESIGNATION OF THE BELGIAN CABINET

Crisis Arose From Conflict in Parliament Over the Substitution of the Flemish Language for French in the University of Ghent—The Retiring Cabinet Was Formed in December, 1921, With George Theunis as Premier.

Brussels, June 14 (By the A. P.)—The political crisis arising from the conflict in parliament over the proposition to substitute the Flemish language for French in the University of Ghent came to a climax this afternoon when, after the senate had rejected a resolution introduced by Baron Charles De Broqueville for the use of the Flemish language alongside of French, the cabinet decided to resign. The king accepted the cabinet's resignation.

Not only was the parliament split on the question, the chamber approving the Flemish language and the senate being opposed to it, but there was a division in the cabinet itself, influential members such as M. Van De Vyvere favoring the preponderance of Flemish, though a majority of the cabinet members opposed it.

The resignation of the Belgian cabinet is the culmination of a heated controversy over the project to make Ghent university a Flemish language institution. The chamber of deputies last year voted in favor of the step, but the bill was rejected by the senate in March.

Brussels despatches for several months have reflected a spirit of unrest among the university students following the chamber's vote. A number of persons were injured in street disturbances and steps were taken to protect the Flemish deputies and their homes.

Opponents of the measure declared it a part of the program of the Flemish extremists, and threatening to Belgium's unity.

The retiring cabinet was formed, with George Theunis as premier, in December, 1921, to succeed the ministry headed by H. Carton De Wiart. M. Theunis has been a leading figure in the various conferences dealing with the reparations question, in which he made marked efforts to conciliate the British and French viewpoints.

SAYS MORSES FAILED TO MAKE GOOD A PROMISE

Washington, June 14.—A second instance of the Morses failing to make good a promise to execute mortgages on three of their steamers as surety for a government loan advanced to assist them in carrying out their ship building contracts with the emergency fleet corporation was related today to the jury in the Morse case.

Howard Coonley, of Boston, formerly a vice president of the fleet corporation, testified that in January, 1919, B. W. Morse proposed that the fleet corporation make them a loan of $750,000 and take mortgages on the steamships Minneapolis, St. Paul and Binghamton. Mr. Coonley said this was agreed to, but that "while the ship mortgages were under investigation the financial situation at the Morses' Alexandria, Va., shipbuilding plant became "very pressing" and an advance of $150,000 was made, a second mortgage on the plant being accepted.

On February 21 another advance of $100,000 was made to the Virginia plant and $150,000 to the Groton, Conn., plant. Mr. Coonley declared these advances were made with the understanding that mortgages would be given on the three ships but that these mortgages could not be obtained and in March, 1919, further advances were stopped.

On cross examination Mr. Coonley said he did not know that the steamers in question had been sold to Canadian firms. He did know, however, that on January 17 applications had been made for the transfer of the St. Paul and Binghamton to Canadian registry. Such transfer was authorized by the shipping board in a resolution which stipulated that the proceeds of the sale were to be used to pay the debts of the Virginia corporation.

ACQUITTED IN SECOND TRIAL FOR SECOND DEGREE MURDER

New York, June 14.—Raymond C. Collins, who spent nine months in the death house of Sing Sing prison, was acquitted today by a jury in his second trial for first degree murder, in the supreme court in Staten Island.

Collins, it was charged, conspired with five other men on March 1, 1922 to rob a warehouse at New Brighton, Staten Island. In the attempt Michael Cesnor, a watchman, was clubbed to death. Collins at his first trial was sentenced to die. The verdict was reversed recently by the court of appeals. At his second trial Collins' defense was that he had abandoned the gang before the murder.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cleuthier of Boston, Collins' parents, were in court when the verdict was returned. They had not seen their son since he ran away from home sixteen years ago. An anonymous letter informed them a few days ago that he was on trial for murder.

Justice Carswell directed that Collins be held and that District Attorney Malloy submit all the evidence in the trial to the grand jury to find if the defendant is subject to a lesser degree of crime than murder.

FRENCH SENATE IS TO DEBATE INTERNAL POLITICS

Paris, June 14.—(By The A. P.)—The debate of internal politics, which has been foreshadowed since Premier Poincare resigned because of the recent vote of the senate refusing to try the communists for treason, will begin in the chamber of deputies tomorrow afternoon on interpellations by representatives of the largest group in the chamber known as "the Republican Entente."

The interpellators, M. Bellet and M. Ybarnegaray, are among the less prominent deputies, but the orators of the different groups are expected to intervene and the debate will likely develop into a sort of lineup for the elections next spring.

A plan for a coalition of the radicals, republican socialists and socialists, in order to regain control of the chamber next year, has caused considerable nervousness in the present moderate majority led by Andrew Tardieu.

FIREMAN RESCUES BOY FROM NIAGARA GORGE

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 14.—Lindley Hegelheimer, 8 years old, this evening fell down the Niagara gorge, but was caught in bushes about 75 feet down. A fireman was lowered in a sling, who rescued the boy alive but in a critical condition with several broken ribs and internal injuries. The child had crawled through the guard to recover his cap and slipped over the gorge.

100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF FRANCES PARKMAN

Boston, June 14.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge turned from politics to history today to join other members of the Massachusetts Historical society in celebrating the 100th anniversary of the birth of Francis Parkman. He said that Parkman's work belonged to the small number of histories of the first rank.

"It was the mighty struggle for the possession of a continent which Francis Parkman narrated in his history," said the senator. "There could have been no greater or more momentous subject. That which was at stake was not merely the victory of France or of England. It was whether the coming people of the North American continent should speak English. It was whether from the Atlantic to the Pacific and north of the possessions of Spain the common law and the institutions of England should prevail or the institutions of France and the civil law. It is epic in its magnitude and Parkman looked at it and treated it fitly with tireless research as a historian, but also with the imagination and understanding of the epic poet."

Senator Lodge, who was a personal friend of the historian, paid tribute to his heroism in carrying on his arduous work in spite of long illness and almost blindness. In the course of his address he remarked that he thought the reading of the histories of Herodotus, Thucydides, Tacitus and Gibbon ought to be a part of every education.

LI YAN-HUNG HAS RESIGNED AS PRESIDENT OF CHINA

Peking, June 14.—(By The A. P.)—Li Yuan-Hung today telegraphed from Tientsin his resignation as president of China and turned over his authority to those members of the cabinet now in the capital.

Simultaneously Madam Li, who had taken the seals of the presidential office with her to the French hospital in the legation quarter, delivered them to representatives of the cabinet when she had been assured of her husband's safe arrival at Tientsin.

The controversy over the seals was adjusted only after Willys Peck, one of the secretaries of the American legation, had been called to the hospital to assure the chief executive's wife that her husband was safe.

Li's resignation had set at rest rumors that he intended to establish the seat of government at Tientsin. Superficially, there is no indication in Peking of yesterday's coup, which began with ultimatum of the militarists that Li resign or see his capital invaded by their forces and ended with the executive's hurried flight to Tientsin.

The youth who first dove struck his head on the boat upon coming to the surface and while his companions were engaged in assisting him back into the boat, Hyland drowned.

MAYOR DEVER OF CHICAGO

Broker E. M. Fuller Collapsed in Cell

Was Expected to Make Sensational Disclosures Regarding Secret Associates.

New York, June 14.—Investigation into the bankruptcy of E. M. Fuller & Company continued before Referee Harold P. Coffin today although Edward M. Fuller, confessed stock buckster, collapsed in his cell at the Ludlow Street jail and with his partner, W. Frank McGee, was excused from attending. Referee Coffin, however, issued an order to United States Marshal Hecht to produce Fuller and McGee tomorrow, when the pair also will be brought into state court for sentence on the bucketing charges to which they pleaded guilty yesterday.

Fuller was expected to appear and make sensational disclosures regarding secret associates he was believed to have had in the brokerage business, and also was expected to reveal the whereabouts of documents in order to end his imprisonment on contempt charges resulting from his failure and that of McGee to produce the books of the company.

The former broker, it was learned, was taken from the jail last night and questioned for two hours by United States District Attorney Hayward concerning sale of stock in the Crown Oil company, for which Fuller and McGee were indicted in 1920 for using the mails to defraud.

The Consolidated Exchange was warned a few weeks before the firm of R. H. MacMasters & Company failed that it was "shaky," J. J. McArdle, an accountant, testified. Howard J. Bell, employed by McArdle, said that on February 9, 1922, a check for $6,000 was given by Fuller & Company to the MacMasters firm and was cashed on that date.

ANOTHER ACCUSATION IN MOVING PICTURE CASE

New York, June 14.—Fred Williams, motion picture exhibitor of Greenwich, Conn., publisher of the Reeland Review, and a government witness in the federal trade commission investigation to determine whether the Famous Players-Lasky corporation is a trust, was accused today of having offered, before taking the witness stand, to call "everything quits" if he could get a five years' contract with the Famous Players company.

Robert Swaine, counsel for the film company, declared Williams made the offer in a conversation with Louis J. Selznick and George Schaeffer of the company. He also accused Williams of "slandering the company in his magazine."

Williams admitted having expressed a desire for a five year contract on a basis of a 10 per cent. increase each year in order that Famous Players "would not erect a theatre next door" to his, but he denied having offered to call everything quits.

ISLAND WHERE ABSOLUTE PROHIBITION PREVAILS

New York, June 14.—An island where absolute prohibition has been in effect for centuries and where bootlegging is unknown has been found by Capt. Edward A. Salisbury, an explorer, who returned today in the Conte Rosso, after the yacht Wisdom, in which he made a tour of the South seas, had been destroyed by fire in Italy.

The dry paradise is one of the Andaman Islands in the Bay of Bengal, where tribal customs for centuries have enforced absolute prohibition, Captain Salisbury said. The natives know nothin gof intoxicants and are not interested. Several who tried grog offered them by sailors of the Wigdom, he declared, said the liquid was possessed of the devil.

New York, June 14.—James Sheridan, resident of the Bronx, for years one of the uniformed pages on the floor of the New York stock exchange, and more recently a telephone clerk for a stock exchange house, became a member of the exchange today. He paid $91,000 for the seat of Charles G. Miller, doffed his uniform and stepped out on the floor as a trader on his own account.

Sheridan entered the service of the exchange in 1906 and has been connected with it continuously since except for the period of the World war. He was wounded in action overseas while a member of the 320th machine gun battalion.

$10,000 SUIT FOR ALLEGED SLANDEROUS UTTERANCES

Stamford, June 14.—Papers were served today in the suit of Charles Fay, chairman of the citizens' committee of 100, against Milton B. Goodkind, secretary of the Stamford Chamber of Commerce, for $10,000 damages for alleged slanderous utterances.

The plaintiff alleges that on various occasions Goodkind made certain statements intended to reflect upon his personal habits, and the further allegation is that the intent of the utterances was "falsely malicious."

VILLAGE WAS ROCKED BY EXPLOSION OF DYNAMITE

Leroy, N. Y., June 14.—This village was rocked by a blast late this afternoon when several hundred pounds of dynamite exploded at the plant of the Union Explosive company, four miles outside the village limits. Windows were broken, chimneys toppled over, and near the plant many trees were uprooted. No one was injured.

The explosion followed a fire. All the buildings at the plant were wrecked. Officials of the company would not estimate the loss.

Change of Volstead Act the Only Hope

Secretary Hughes Sees No Other Way to Clear Up the Prohibition Problems.

Washington, June 14.—Negotiations with maritime powers for reciprocal concessions by treaty to clear up simultaneously rum smuggling and ship liquor problems still lacked today any authoritative indication of how the powers approached would receive the state departments proposals. Neither through the Washington diplomats nor American ambassadors abroad, so far as could be learned has any official intimation of this nature been transmitted.

Pending some further development in the diplomatic conversations, a storm of argument swept Washington today dealing for the most part with the relation of supreme court rulings and the new administration plan for easing both the commercial intercourse and rum smuggling embarrassments that surround it. One school of thought had developed which contended that the "in transit" decisions of the court had set up such a construction of the "transportation" prohibition clause of the 18th amendment that the government, even congress, was powerless to authorize transportation of liquor within American territory.

For the administration viewpoint it was declared flatly and authoritatively that such a construction of the effect of the court's opinion would not and could not be tolerated. It also was said to be the determination of administration leaders to proceed on a contrary theory up to such a time as the supreme court might decide, in a specific case presented to it for decision and directly involving that point, that the amendment did in fact powers of regulation of the transportaprevent even congress from exercising tion of liquor.

In that event, it was added, there exists no means of relieving the ship liquor situation except by further amendment of the constitution through ratification of the amending resolution by 36 states. How many years such a process might take nobody in authority would predict.

Following what is held by high administration officials to be the only common sense and practical view of the supreme court decisions and statements, prolonged study of the ship liquor question at the state department has convinced Secretary Hughes that nothing could be done except through a change of the Volstead act. Two means of effecting such a change are open and the administration, it was explained, has elected to move at once toward exercising the treaty making power to supersede any existing statute. Supplementary remedial legislation by congress also may be undertaken later.

ACTION AGAINST NEAR BEER SALOONS IN DETROIT

Detroit, Mich., June 14.—(By the A. P.)—Federal and county officers late today were engaged in carrying out the government's new attack on illicit liquor in the Dtroit district—the serving of papers in injunction suits against the owners and proprietors of about 50 near beer saloons, roadhouses and other places were it is alleged liquor has been sold.

As a result of these processes the federal government hopes to put padlocks on the door and boards across the windows of the alleged resorts in Detroit and its suburbs where, it is charged liquor drinkers for some time have staged midnight revels and where the entrances to these places never have been barred to any except known prohibition agents.

Acting on information obtained in this part of the state, during the last two months by Izzie Einstein and Moe Smith, New York dry sleuths whose colorful methods of obtaining information against illicit liquor vendors have gained them national reputations, federal authorites obtained injunction orders in United States district court here today.

Criminal action against any landlords believed to have rented their properties to persons whom they knew to be bootleggers is threatened by United States District Attorney Earl R. Davis. Such charges would be preferred under the conspiracy statutes. Today's injunctions were obtained under the padlock law, which permits the government to close for one year any places where it can be proved liquor has been sold.

E. C. Yellowley, chief of the government's prohibition agents, directing the cleanup, said scores of other injunction cases were to be started in the Detroit river district and that the crusade to be continued indefinitely.

Einstein and Smith, it became known today, still are working in Detroit seeking information on which further injunction suits may be based.

SIMPLE OBSEQUIES FOR REV. DR. JOSEPH KRAUSKOPF

Philadelphia, June 14.—Simple rites marked the obsequies of the Rev. Dr. Joseph Krauskopf, noted rabbi, lecturer and humanitarian, whose funeral services were held today in the temple Keneseth Israel. At his request that "there be no signs of sorrow," expressed in the "ethical will" or last farewell written by Dr. Krauskopf five years before his death and read today, the ceremony was brief.

All denominations and all walks of life were represented in the thousands of mourners that gathered within the temple and those who stood outside, but only a brief eulogy was delivered. No flowers nor draperies adorned the temple. The Christian hymn, Lead, Kindly Light, was included in the music.

Dr. Krauskopf's widow, ill at Atlantic City, was unable to be present. Mayor Moore and the clergy of many denominations attended.

ACTION TO DEFINE CIVILIAN USAGE OF AMERICAN FLAG

Committee of the American Legion's Flag Conference is to Formulate a Code of Flag Etiquette For Civilians—Will Define Simple Rules for Guidance of the Civilian Population in the Display and Demonstration of Courtesy to the American Flag—President Harding Would Have Every American Learn to Sing the "Star Spangled Banner".

Washington, June 14.—A code for civilian usage of the American flag and for proper behavior in its presence was advocated by President Harding today in addressing the American Legion's flag conference which has, in attendance delegates representing a number of organizations. The president also expressed a hope that the various organizations represented would insist "upon some suitable provision" to have every American learn to sing "The Star Spangled Banner," declaring that he "would like to have the spirit of America show itself in song."

A committee to formulate a code was appointed with instructions to report tomorrow, when it is expected definite rules will be adopted for usage of the flag to supplant the varied codes being advocated by patriotic and other organizations.

Assistant Secretary Davis of the war department and Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, were among the speakers on today's program.

The problem before the conference, Mr. Davis asserted, was one of education after determination of simple rules for guidance of the civilian population in the display of the flag and the demonstration of courtesy to it.

"There is no doubt," he declared, "that there is a general lack of respect for the flag. All violations of flag etiquette are not by any means due to ignorance, but in far too many cases to a deliberate desire to offer affront. Those who wish to destroy all defenses against their unbridled action and substitute the red for the red, white and blue, do not want our people to respect the flag. Disrespect for the flag, reduction of our military defenses, discontent with our form of government and its institutions are the first steps in what is communistically termed the peaceful phase of the revolution."

Mr. Gompers assured the delegates of the sympathy with their efforts of the American Federation of Labor.

NEW MEMBER OF THE U. S.-GERMAN CLAIMS COMMISSION

Treasury officials predicted tonight that the second tax instalment would net about $375,000,000.

Wife number two comes from New York, asked for a divorce under a new statute entitling a wife to a divorce when her husband is convicted of a felony. Judge Webb granted the divorce and in the next breath he gave Gross a suspended jail sentence of one year. This was on condition that he would marry wife number three. He married wife number three in the court room after the session.

In passing judgment Judge Webb said the laws of Connecticut were not revengeful and that he hoped Gross would appreciate the clemency shown him.

CONNECTICUT TROLLEYMEN HOLD FOR FIVE CENT RAISE

New Haven, June 14.—By a 4 to 1 vote motormen and conductors employed by the Connecticut company in this city today authorized their representatives to negotiate for a five cent an hour increase instead of the four cents already offered by the company, which had been refused in a previous referendum. Of the 500 men voting here, 100 preferred that the wage question go to a board of arbitration in the hope that better terms might be arranged.

While the company has declared officially that it cannot afford more than a four cent increase, it is believed that a compromise on five cents can be affected. A working agreement has already been signed by President L. S. Storrs for the company and by officials of the trolleymens union, the wage question being the only matter in dispute.

A similar referendum was taken in Hartford, Bridgeport and Waterbury today but it is not known at headquarters here how the votes in those cities went.

At the June meeting of the Windham town school board held Wednesday evening in the selectmen's room in the town building, five of the nine members of the board were present. In the absence of the chairman, Dr. F. E. Guild, Committeeman C. C. Case acted in that capacity. Rev. John R. Clark, pastor of St. Joseph's church, was present at the opening of the meeting and called the attention of the board to the condition of the beard fence on the boundary line between the Natchaug grammar school and St. Joseph's church properties, which he said was becoming dilapidated and unsightly due to its being broken in places by school boys climbing on it. With the new addition to the Natchaug school in the near future, Father Clark said that the present wooden fence should be taken down and replaced by an ornamental iron wire fence, that would tend to beautify both properties. "St. Joseph's parish is willing to stand half the cost of such a fence," Father Clark said. He said figures from one fence building concern, who were willing to erect a fence at a cost of about $613. He had also written to another fence concern and thought that the figures might be lower. The length of the fence, he said, would be 356 feet and should be at least six feet in height. The board favored the proposition and referred the matter to the properties committee to confer with Father Clark in the near future with a view to having the new fence erected.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Stoughton appeared before the board and asked to be allowed to produce evidence that would disprove statements which were made by Principal R. A. Case of Windham High School at the April meeting which they allege tended to give the public a false impression. Among the different things brought out was the fact that Mr. Case had said that some of the members of the faculty had failed to see the ability of their daughter, Miss Sabra Stoughton. A report card from a Norwich business school was produced showing that this student for the first month's work from April 19 to May 19, had received three Es (95 to 100 per cent), two G's (85 to 95 per cent) and one F, (75 to 85 per cent). As she had an E in typewriting and F in shorthand, it showed that she had at least 33 per cent higher in typewriting and at least 20 per cent higher in shorthand than what she received at Windham High school. Mrs. Stoughton stated that the question now arises as to whether she acquired this ability in one month at the Norwich school or did she have it here in Willimantic and the teacher was unable to develop or even discover it.

On the recommendation of Secretary E. A. Case, the board voted to adopt the Elson reader throughout the grades of the various schools coming under town supervision. The report of Truant Officer Jean B. Faulkner was accepted, showing seven cases of truancy reported to him by school principals during the month of May as follows: Natchaug Grammar school 4, Windham street school 3. All were adjusted. The report of Town School Physician Dr. W. P. S. Keating for the month of June was read and accepted. The report showed that the number of cases of inspection was less than the preceding month.

Secretary Case notified the board that there would be three vacancies in the staff of high school teachers this coming fall, by reason of resignations at the end of the present term. Arthur J. Sullivan is to take a course at Harvard College. Secretary Case reported that he had secured Thomas Callaghan of Groton, Mass., a graduate of Colby College, who will coach the athletic teams of the school. Secretary Case said that Callaghan was an athlete of note and in college was rated high as a baseball, basketball and football player. Miss Florence Hedes and Barthay F. Shumpert are the others to leave. As yet their places have not been filled. Mr. Shumpert, who has been at Windham High school one year, is to take a teaching position at Columbia university.

The graduation exercises of the various grammar schools of the town were then discussed. H. Clinton Lothrop of the school board was selected to present the diplomas at the exercises of the South Windham school.

The house service appeal by the Salvation Army will be put on in this city during the coming week. The Salvation Army seeks funds for the support of its local work for one year and to complete its proposed new building on Walnut street. When the army came before the people of Willimantic last year for money to purchase and remodel the Card property on Walnut street, it was thought that the money then raised, about $7,000, would be sufficient to carry through the building plans. When the contractor began his work of remodeling, however, it was found that the condition of the frame of the building was very poor and the city was obliged to withdraw the permit for the work. The location of the property makes a fireproof building necessary to comply with the ordinances of the city. A brick structure has hence become a necessity. This will involve an additional outlay of money and the Salvation Army is asking the people of Willimantic and vicinity to help them carry out their plans. A proper and suitable place for their work has without exception been a great benefit for the community, resulting in better and more efficient work. Under the direction of a committee of prominent local citizens, the Salvation Army is appealing for $7,000 to complete the building and carry on the work for next year.

COLUMBIA

The case of Jake Berkowitz against Louis Rosinski for commissions of $30 claimed on the sale of a farm by Platt to Rosinski, and $10 cash loaned him, was brought to trial before Justice Raymond E. Clarke and a jury on Monday evening after being three times continued. Berkowitz was represented by Lawyer Harry Gamcher of Willimantic and Rosinski by Thomas Kelley, also of Willimantic.

Rosinski's answer to the charges was a general denial.

Berkowitz testified that he acted as agent for Platt in the sale of the property and that cash party was to give him $25, but that Platt gave him $20 only, stating that Rosinski would pay the difference, $5. He said it was agreed in Mr. Platt's yard to pay the $40 due, also $42 due for taxes on Katzman's property recently sold by him to Rosinski. He said the purchase price of the property was $2,800 and that each had agreed before the deed was drawn to pay $25 commission.

H. P. Collins testified hearing conversation to that effect in his office while busy drawing the deed. Other witnesses for the plaintiff were Irving J. Sweitzer of Chestnut Hill and Judge Potts of Willimantic.

Mrs. Rosinski testified that she bought the place herself with her own money, and that Mr. Rosinski was practically her agent, also that Berkowitz was not her agent and that she never had any dealings with him. She said Berkowitz knew nothing about the purchase of the farm until he met her and her husband preparing to go to the town clerk's office in their wagon, when he offered to take them in his car, and that on the way he stopped the car and spoke about making $50 on the transaction if she would keep still.

Rosinski made an emphatic denial to all of the charges. He never asked Berkowitz to buy the farm for him and never agreed to pay him a commission as was suggested by Berkowitz when they were in the car.

H. P. Collins said that during the meeting in his office he heard them say that the commissions were to be split between them.

Justice Clarke charged the jury and said that before the case was first brought to court on May 14th that Judge Foss went to Rosinski and tried to effect a settlement of the commissions claimed.

The jury retired for deliberation at a late hour and soon returned with a verdict for Rosinski, the defendant, which was announced by the foreman of the jury, Clayton E. Hunt.

Berkowitz announced through his counsel that he would appeal the case to the superior court.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

"The Nth Commandment."

Seldom has a picture been so enthusiastically received at the Broadway theatre as was The Nth Commandment, a Paramount-Cosmopolitan production which was given its opening showing there last night. This is the best picture seen in Norwich in many months, and like Hitchcock, it is intensely appealing.

Sarah Jake (Colleen Moore), working in the Mammoth department store, is undecided which of two suitors to accept. One is Jimmie, Higgibbons, the best dresser and flatterer in the store, the other—Harry Smith, a delicate but likeable young man, working in the shipping room. She chooses the latter.

Soon after their marriage, Harry becomes ill. Sarah, unknown to her husband, secures enough money from Jimmie, who has cleaned up on the races, to enable her to get Harry into the country. His recovery is rapid, and it is then that Sarah realizes that there is an Nth Commandment in life.

Colleen Moore is charming in this production. The story was written by Fannie Hurst, and Frank Borzage directed. The cast generally is excellent.

A Christie Comedy and news completed the bill.

Bread Theatre.

Marshall Neilan has again proved himself a master craftsman in his motion picture version of John Byrne's great novel concerning an American shipyard, The Stranger's Banquet, made in association with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation is the point of magnitude this is eminently Mr. Neilan's greatest production and it ranks among the seventy-five photoplays. In dramatic intensity, in the thrill of action, the appeal of young love and the spirit of reality it has seldom been equalled. It is not merely a screne entertainment, but a great drama magnificently plotted.

The story is told against a background of shipyards and the romance of building great ships destined to ply the seven seas. Old Shane Butler Keogh (acted beautifully by Hobart Bosworth) has made a fortune out of his shipyards and leaves his millions and his business to his son John (Nigel Barrie) and his daughter Derith (Claire Windsor). At once the strangers who hope to banquet on this golden feast began to gather. John marries one of them, Jean McPherson, a woman of doubtful past, acted by Eleanor Boardman. Derith is loved by Angus Campbell, superintendent of the yards and son of her father's old friend, but her lax policy of controlling the men causes him to resign. Derith proceeds to New York to plunge into a whirl of gayety. She vainly tries to bring herself to marry Conte Spenney, but when Angus arrives with news of a strike and pleading at the shipyard she returns with him. There are many thrills in the picture, sensational climaxes that moisten the eyes and an unforced strain of comedy. It is a great picture, perfectly acted by Claire Windsor, Rockliffe Fellowes, Hobart Bosworth, Nigel Barrie, Stuart Holmes, Claude Gillingwater, Eleanor Boardman, Thomas Holding and a score more. Mr. Neilan has surpassed himself.

The Strangers' Banquet is the feature attraction at the Bread theatre today and Saturday and other pictures on the bill include Pearl White in Plunder, the Pathe News and a Sunshine comedy.

FULLER SHUTS OUT JAIL HILL TEAM WITH TWO HITS IN TWILIGHT GAME

Gene Fuller, who recently severed his connections with the Atlantic Tarton Corp. team to become a member of the Dowells, shut out the fast Jail Hill team with two hits Thursday evening at the Fairgrounds. His teammates, however, pounded Shea for eleven hits which coupled with their errors by the Jail Hill boys netted the Knot Riders 10 runs.

The game was played under protest owing to Fuller appearing in the Dowell uniform, the Jail Hills claiming he had left the Atlantics without a release. This makes the second game that has been protested in which the Dowells were engaged. If the directors order both these games played over the Dowells will have to play their entire schedule to date over again.

Bill Hull, a recent acquisition to the Dowell fold, played at second and put up a brilliant game not only in the field but at bat, getting a triple and two singles in four times at bat. Tim Coughlin also hit well, getting a double and a brace of singles in four trips.

Fielding features were contributed by Lemieux, Coughlin and Riley for the Dowells and Shea for the Hillies. In the six innings that were played only two balls were hit outside the infield by the Jail Hill batters, these coming in the sixth inning by Reunan and Mathews. The score:

Tonight's game will be between the Professional Men and the Swansea. The Professional Men are playing great ball and are out to make a record. Tonight's game will be a wicked battle.

There is a movement on foot to have the games for the remainder of the season played at the Academy campus if permission can be secured to use the diamond. This has been thought about, because of the small attendances at the games and other circumstances which have arisen. It is probable a meeting will be called every soon to take definite action on the matter.

WALBERG PULLS ATHLETICS THROUGH TO VICTORY

Philadelphia, June 14—"Rube" Walberg was the hero of another Philadelphia victory today when he beat Cleveland 4 to 3. The victory with the defeat of New York by St. Louis put the Athletics within two full games of the American league leaders. Walberg went into the game in the second and held the Indians to one run during the remainder of the contest.

In the fourth his double scored Galloway and he crossed the plate with what proved to be the winning run when Matthews tripled. Matthews made a great running catch in center while his infield teammates pulled off a sensational double play in the third. Score:

HOMERS BY CUBS SEAT THE DODGERS

Chicago, June 14—Four home runs by Chicago enabled it to defeat the Brooklyn team today 9 to 6. O'Farrell led the attack with two homers, a double and a single in five times up. His first homer came in the first inning with the bases filled and Dazzy Vance on the mound. No one was on when he cracked his second four bagger. Stats hit a homer off Henry in the second inning and Friberg also drove the ball into the bleachers in the same inning with a man on. Aldridge held the visitors to three hits until the ninth, when seven hits and a walk gave Brooklyn six runs. The score:

HAGEN PLAYS BRILLIANT GOLF AT TROON

Troon, June 4 (By the A. P.)—Britons are fearful tonight over the possibility that their long lost open golf championship trophy is going to start back to America tomorrow for the third successive season. Walter Hagen, who carried it over the Atlantic last year to the United States, is threatening in a most impressive way to do it again. Tonight, with half the struggle over, he stands just one stroke behind two British players who are tied for first place, and this despite a somewhat ragged round in the morning.

The leaders, C. A. Whitcombe and Arthur Havers, each covered the two rounds in 146 strokes, while Hagen took 147.

If Hagen fails, there are two others who still have a chance to take the cup to America. One is the Australian champion, Joe Kirkwood, who resides in the United States, and the other is Johnny Farrell, of New York, who, however, is considered something of an outsider. Kirkwood scored 151 and Farrell 152 over the thirty-six holes. Between Kirkwood and Hagen only two names show on the record of today's playing—Gordon Lockhart, with 149 and Robert Scott, with 150.

If past performances are an indication, neither of the two leaders will be easy to shake off. Whitcombe was the second Britisher to finish in the open championship in 1922, his score of 303 being just three strokes above Hagen's winning count. Havers was the first British professional near the head of the list the previous year when Jock Hutchison won at St. Andrews. This morning Whitcombe steered his shots so well that he established a new course record of 70.

Meanwhile Hagen slipped slightly below the standard expected of him, and was lucky to get 76 in the forenoon. When the afternoon round began he was six behind the young record smasher, but he gained all but one back. In doing so, Hagen went down the fairways like a streak, sending his approaches straight towards the flag and shoving his putts against the back of the tins with such skill that he equalled the course record of 71 that had stood until only a few hours before.

Macdonald Smith of California still has a chance to satisfy his craving for the cup, but it is a woefully weak [illegible]

REDS CUTS DOWN GIANTS' LEAD AGAIN

Cincinnati, June 14—The Reds toppled the champion Giants back again today by winning the second game of the series, 6 to 5. Bentley was hit hard in the first five innings and retired at the end of the ninth. Ring held the champions to two runs until the eighth, when three hits and a passed ball by Hargrave, on which Young scored from second, tied up the game. The winning run was scored off Neis in the last half of the ninth on Roush's single and Pinelli's double, with only one man out. It was the seventh straight victory for the Reds and gave them possession of third place in the league race. The score:

DEMPSEY PUNISHES BURKE IN WORKOUT

After Dempsey had boxed two spirited rounds with George Godfrey, a 225 pounds negro, who nailed the champion half a dozen times with solid right hand smashes, Burke faced Jack's bombardment. In the first round Burke was sent reeling with a left hook. Coming out for the second round Dempsey smashed Burke with a hook to the chin, flooring the Pittsburgher for the full count.

Besides a round of shadow boxing and round of slugging the 250 pound bag, Dempsey boxed six rounds, finishing up with Harry Drake, the British heavyweight. The champion perspired quickly and freely today under a hot sun. He continued to wear the leather head guard to protect the cut over his left eye.

With the insurance that the second $100,000 installment, due Dempsey tomorrow, will be met, Jack Kearns, his manager left tonight for Shelby to collect. The final $100,000 of the $300,000 guarantee must be paid July 2, 48 hours before Dempsey goes into the ring with Gibbons.

Mayor James A. Johnson of Shelby, treasurer for the American Legion post promoting the fight, told Kearns the money would be placed in his hands at the appointed time.

Kearns received an offer from Simon Flaherty, a promoter of Long Island City, N. Y., for a Labor day match with Harry Wills, replying that he would consider it, provided the New York athletic commission would issue a permit for the bout.

CHIPPIE GAW WILL PITCH AGAINST SUBMARINE BASE TEAM HERE SUNDAY

When Tommy Corcoran cries "Play Ball!" Sunday at the Fairgrounds Chippie Gaw, hero of many a hard fought game, will be on the mound for the local team and Joe Murphy will be wearing the mask and protector. This battery will have their work cut out for them when the Sub Base starts sending their crew of sluggers to the plate. Chippie is a dependable pitcher and guarantees that when he starts the game Sunday he will be in top condition.

Too much cannot be said of the ability of his battery mate Joe Murphy. Joe will be remembered as the star backstop of the Holy Cross team of a few years ago and at that time was rated as one of the best collegiate catchers as ever stepped a foul tip. Murphy caught for Holy Cross for three years and was captain of the team during his last year. He has been playing semi-pro ball around Boston during the past few summers. Besides being a nifty catcher he is a good hitter.

The infield will be the same as last Sunday with Big Eddie Hart on first and the diminutive Massey on second. Shorty Faulkner in the short field and Nap Liberty, a coming youngster who is just breaking into faster company, on third. In the left garden will be "Buck" Freeman, one of the fastest outfielders in the Boston Twilight league. Buck has been here before but on opposing teams and was always a menace to local pitchers. In the center pasture will be Drohan who has played here off and on for a number of seasons. Clabby or Harry Mills will play the right field position. Clabby's foot has been bothering him of late but it is hoped that he will be able to take his regular position on Sunday.

The Submarine base will come up with their strongest aggregation which will be practically the same team as beat Georgetown University on May 29th. Davis will do the pitching and Harkey will catch. The base will be well represented and arrangements have been made to handle a big delegation of the sailors.

There is more interest in this game than in any played this season as is evidenced by the money that is being placed on both teams to win. The majority of the local fans are backing the sailors to win but they are basing their opinion simply on the outcome of the Georgetown game. Chipple Gaw is as good as Tabor who held the base to six hits so should have very little difficulty in holding down the sailors.

BROOKLYN HANDICAP WILL BE RUN TODAY

New York, June 14.—The Brooklyn handicap, one of the oldest classics of Metropolitan section racing, will be contested tomorrow as the opening day feature at Aqueduct by a small but select field. It includes Harry Payne Whitney's Bunting, 1921 Futurity winner, and his Chickvale, with Martingale, Little Chief, Knobbie, Hephaistos, Overtake and Exodus completing the efield.

The event, inaugurated in 1887 at Gravesend, renewed at Belmont in 1913 and run since at Aqueduct, is over a mile and a neighth course, for three year olds and upward. Exterminator, W. S. Kilmer's Campaigner, won last year, defeating the fleet Grey Lag, which had triumphed over John P. Grier and Exterminator in 1921.

Little Chief and Knobbie will represent the Rancocas stable. Bunting will carry top weight, 126 pounds.

GIBBONS DROPS HIS SPARRING PARTNER

Shelby, Mont., June 14.—(By the A. P.)—The big brown bag in Tommy Gibbons' training ring received more punishment this afternoon than did his four sparring partners who are preparing him for his championship match with Jack Dempsey July 4.

The challenger dropped Kid Rocco, the light heavyweight with a left squarely to the chin, but it was virtually the only time Gibbons put on full steam during the afternoon.

Gibbons used his left almost exclusively and he was not pushed hard enough to compel him to display any extensive footwork. Bud Gorman, the Racine heavy, in the absence of Tillie "Kid" Herman, who was not feeling well today, gave the challenger his stiffest workout.

Lakey Morrow, a 123 pounder from Spokane, provided hundreds of spectators with considerable merriment, but made few dents in Gibbons' defense. He mixed freely with the challenger but his blows apparently did not bother Dempsey's challengers.

HILLIES AND COAL HEAVERS SPLIT DOUBLE HEADER

Worcester, Mass., June 14—Worcester and Pittsfield split even today, the Coal Heavers taking the first game 10 to 7 and the Hillies the second, 8 to 3. Worcester greatly outhit Pittsfield in the first contest, making 19 to 8 for the Hillies. But Rosenthal kept the tally fairly even with two home runs, the first with one on base and the second with two on. He thus accounted for five of the seven runs. He also hit well in the second game, although only one of his hits figured in the run getting.

HARTFORD TAKES BOTH ENDS OF DOUBLE BILL

Springfield, Mass., June 14—Hartford took both ends of a double header from Springfield here today, the first by 2-to-1 and the second 10 to 6. Sloan out-pitched Pennington in the opener. In the night cap the league leaders put nine runs across in the first inning, seven before a man was retired by either Wiley or McFarland. Fortune went in and stemmed the tide, but Springfield never was able to make up for the first inning. Damran hit a home run in each game bringing his total to 12, and giving him the lead in the league. The scores:

YALE CREWS PRACTICE RACING STARTS

Gales Ferry, June 14.—Water conditions on the Thames this evening were excellent and the Yale crews in training here took advantage of it to practice racing starts and sprints. The varsity went three miles downstream to the submarine base and returned. The junior varsity and the freshmen also went down stream and practiced starts together. The combination crew had a time trial over the two-mile course but Coach Moore did not give out any time.

The freshmen were placed in launches after practice and followed the varsity instruction for a short time.

L. Goetchius, of the rowing committee, returned to quarters today.

HARVARD CREWS HAVE ONLY ROUTINE WORK

Red Top, Conn., June 14.—The Harvard crews went through routine work this evening going down to the three-mile mark and back. Coach Muller in a double shell with Jack Kelley, of Olympic fame, followed the practice. Racing conditions were ideal tonight in contrast with the choppy water this morning.

Examinations close tomorrow and the men will begin the last lap of the grind for the regatta June 23.

WATERBURY BEATS PROFS IN SEVENTH INNING

New Haven, June 14.—Waterbury landed on Fried in the seventh inning here today and piled up seven runs, finally winning by a 10 to 3 score. Etten hit the ball hard and also pitched a fine game. McCorry's fielding was a feature. Score by innings:

Plainfield Man Backs Wilde.

As evidence of the interest in the Jimmy Wilde-Pancho Villa fight next Monday night there have been several small wagers on the outcome of the battle. Yesterday a well known Plainfield fan and sportsman offered any part of $500 on Wilde to win at even money. As yet he has not had any takers and his money may go begging.

An Essay on Frogs.

The Chicago board of education has caused a classic essay to be immortalized in type. It's about frogs and was written by a young Norwegian. The essay: "What a wonderful bird the frog are! When he stand he sit, almost. When he hop he fly, almost. He ain't got no sense, hardly. He ain't got no tail hardly, either. When he sit he sit on what he ain't got, almost."

Figures in Wood.

Figures in wood have various sources. These may be grouped in those due to structure, those caused by color variation or pigmentation, and to combination of the two, says the American Forestry Magazine. These again may be classified as normal and abnormal or pathologic. By normal is meant the natural condition of the wood of a sound tree. In the abnormal or pathologic are to be found the peculiar distortions and colorations resulting from disease, the attacks of insects and activities of various agencies not a part of the regular life processes of the trees.

On the Farm.

Once the farmer swathed his wheat with the cradle and raked and bound it by hand. Then the horse-drawn reaper appeared, then the McCormick-binder, and finally the great mechanical tractors of the present, each of which haul two binders. Once, also, the antiquated flail "resounded from morning to night" on the best of the farms. Then horses were used to tread on the straw, and then came the treadmill thresher, the last of which went out some fifteen years ago. Today tractor threshers do the work.

Historic Knife.

The Camavalet museum recently received what is said to be the knife of the guillotine used in Paris during the French Revolution and the subsequent Reign of Terror, and which served to decapitate Louis XVI, Marie Antoinette, Robespierre, and thousands of others. It was a gift to the museum from a Belgian collector. The relic is said to have been in the possession of the family of Samson, the famous executioner of the French Revolution, for several generations.

CUTTING TROLLEY FARES.

Being forced to admit that he was all wrong, that he had urged and been elected on a policy that was not feasible and that he must now back down and resume that which he had condemned is not exactly pleasing to the mayor of a community and yet that is what Mayor Brown of Seattle has done on the question of trolley fares on its municipally owned street railway.

Seattle bought under the idea that the city could operate its lines to much better advantage and immediately there was a clamor for a five cent fare. It was out of keeping with experience elsewhere, but it made a fine chance for a political appeal at election time. Unquestionably it helped his election.

For the past year he has been laboring to practice what he preached. He has been indulging in some valuable experience and the result he declares that he will sign an ordinance increasing the fares from five cents to ten cents or three rides for a quarter, the former rates.

This plainly shows that Seattle undertook something that was not warranted. It did it on a political basis and it found out from practical experience that it was an impossibility, quite the same as we imagine it was said to be at the time the change was made.

Seattle has found out that there are certain fixed charges that cannot be ignored whether it is a private corporation or one municipally owned that runs the trolley lines. Other cities have experienced the same thing in being forced to have fares raised after too big cuts had been made in them. Connecticut might have done the same thing had the clamors for a nickel fare been heeded. Instead of yielding to something which it was apparent would result in a loss it has made reductions gradually and is now getting a lower fare than Seattle will be forced to pay under the contemplated changes, and here it applies to an entire state and not a large city alone.

THE KANSAS COURT DECISION.

From the time it was put into operation the Kansas industrial court has been the subject of much discussion and the cause of no little opposition, although it appeared to be an effort to give protection to the public and to overcome the repeated instances where the people had been required to undergo repeated hardships because of labor difficulties. The court sought to do away with strikes and bring about the adjustment of disputes in accord with facts.

It has adjusted many cases, but one of them having been carried to the United States supreme court it is found that the court hasn't the authority to enforce its order inasmuch as it undertakes something in violation of the federal construction when no such emergency as threatening the food supply of the state existed. The highest court holds that the state through its industrial court cannot force a packing company to abide by the wages which it fixed.

This brings about an understanding of the law that differs from what had prevailed. It doesn't say that the court hasn't jurisdiction in such an emergency as would be presented if transportation was about to be denied the state or if coal production was being shut off. Where the public welfare is threatened it would appear from the decision that the court has a chance to function with good results, but it cannot stand in the way of constitutional rights to make agreements where the general public is not involved.

This doesn't end the utility of the court. It doesn't terminate its usefulness. It curtails its scope and reduces its activities but it doesn't destroy the usefulness of the court. There is no question but what the intentions of Kansas in the establishment of the court were of the highest. There are no reasons to believe that it was endeavoring to do any more than end conditions which had long been bad. Having gone too far in its enthusiasm its endeavors must of course be surrounded with the necessary restrictions.

DANGEROUS LIQUOR.

Whether the many cases of intoxication in New York city and the fact that large numbers of young men and women suffering from the effects of liquor are disturbing the parts of the big city can be attributed to the abolition of the enforcement law in that state, it nevertheless reveals a situation which is not getting attention and indicates the knowledge of the trade in illicit liquor by the authorities, as if the authorities do not know about it it is because of avoiding those localities where it might be expected.

It is always wise to make due allowance for exaggeration in connection with certain of the stories which deal with flagrant violations of this character but if it is so and those who drink the synthetic stuff actually punish themselves as pictured it is a deplorable situation.

That liquor is being drunk that [illegible] is not doubted. The quantities of bogus labels that have been seized in various cities make it evident that the label no longer indicating what may be expected within the bottle. Unquestionably it will be stuff that will intoxicate and intoxicate quickly, but the chances are good that it is also a liquid that will poison and kill if habitually used.

Tests of seized liquor have resulted in statements to the effect that a large percentage of the liquor now sold may be considered no better than slow poison. This means that the authorities not only must fight for the support of the prohibition law but for the protection of those who are unwilling to protect themselves against a physical and mental wreckage.

CLEARING THE WAY.

Even though there is an opportunity for reaching an understanding relative to the German reparations, it all depends upon whether the apparent obstacles to actual negotiations can be eliminated. It would have been possible to agree on any offer that had been made had there been a willingness to ignore certain conditions and accept others. It was plainly evident that there was no such disposition and consequently no progress was made.

Whether any more favorable results will be obtained from the new offer hinges upon the same situation. There are reasons why France does not welcome an acceptance of the offer. If Germany will put forth the necessary efforts in paving the way to meeting French requirements it would be a different story.

It is useless to expect that France will be willing to enter into negotiations while the present German opposition in the Ruhr is being experienced. It has been forced to take action there which would not have been taken but for the German resistance and sabotage. Germany may be reluctant to abandon its policy and yet it can hardly expect that France will abandon the pressure in the Ruhr in order to relieve Germany, or to make possible the acceptance of terms which would be favorable to Germany.

This situation is fully understood by the other countries. Whether efforts which are being made to compose the situation will accomplish their purpose is problematical. There must be a basis for negotiations if such take place, and the present offer could be regarded as encouraging if conditions outside the direct offer were different. The problem is to bring about the necessary preliminary adjustments.

SMUGGLING ALIENS.

Just why the captain of the schooner Mary Beatrice failed to carry out his part of the deal with those 15 Chinese that were found aboard the vessel with a distress signal flying is not made clear, except that he had obtained his pay and figured that it would be to his advantage not to run counter to the laws of this country.

Let the disclosure that it was the purpose of the party to be landed in this country regardless of the law against such smuggling directs attention to the fact that it is not simply liquor and dope smuggling that the authorities of this country have to contend with.

From time to time there are those Chinamen who are found in this country without the proper papers. But a few days ago a number of such were taken out of a Long Island factory for deportation. It is probable that they were aided into the country in some such similar way as the 15 on the stranded ship had been expected to be and in fact had paid to be. This means a direct violation of our immigration laws in more than one respect and reveals a serious situation which calls for more than dealing with these particular cases.

It is unfortunate that the captain of that schooner, who must be regarded as a leader in such an undertaking, was not located. What became of him and six others is in fact somewhat of a mystery at the present time, although it is indicated that he got into the country and hoped to get away without his identity being disclosed. Such smugglers deserve the limit in punishment.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

This is the day when we're supposed to be kneedeep in June.

The crews of French vessels are saying it is rum that makes the ships go.

The man on the corner says: Did you ever try that easy job of trying to suit everybody?

Reading about the catch of that 40,000 pound sea monster makes everyone want to go fishing.

Britain must do some arguing if it expects to convince France that it ought to accept the German offer.

When Senator LaFollette goes to a sanatorium for a rest, he also renders similar service to his country.

When the new Bulgarian ministry is linked up with Germany it doesn't bid fair to insure it a long and happy life.

Lasker didn't accomplish all he desired with the shipping board, and yet under the same conditions who could have done more?

It will never be possible to convince some people that a hot wave is not the direct result of the talk about another glacial age.

These are the days when the drivers of vehicles are getting acquainted with some of the previously unknown Laurel Hill streets.

Announcement to the effect that Ambassador Harvey will sail for London July 4 means a decided disappointment to the democrats.

That New York boy who fired a revolver at his schoolteacher may realize some day that he might have killed one of his best friends.

Captain MacMillan is to start for the polar regions soon. There is nothing in the weather as yet that would drive most people to such a trip.

If Bulgaria settles down under its new ministry without stirring up trouble in the neighboring states, to say nothing of a revolt at home, it will be a remarkable accomplishment in that region.

AN EASY MARK

"I offered that salesman $5 cash to take out all that fire screen you have in the basement," Loretta told her brother. "And he said it was not enough."

"And so like a kind and dutiful sister," her brother added, "you persuaded him it was."

"Indeed, and I didn't!" Loretta replied. "It is too chilly weather to stand at an open door and argue with anybody about a thing like that. I think you will either have to offer the gentleman more or take it out yourself."

"Of course, it will end in my offering him more," sighed her brother. "But maybe you could get a better figure on it."

"No, sir!" Loretta declared with decision. "You'll have to tell me what you want to pay before I say another word on the subject to that salesman. I am not going to be called easy again."

"Ha!" exclaimed her brother. "So somebody's been calling you easy! What, may I ask, were you so easy about?"

"It was when I was visiting Aunt Jennie last summer," Loretta explained. "And we used to go sightseeing a lot together. She had just moved there, you know, and hadn't seen the city herself at all, so we had a lot of fun together, poking into all kinds of stores and museums and old churches and everything."

"Yes! yes!" said Loretta's brother. "Proceed with the confession."

"Goodness! I don't have to confess to you!" Loretta declared scornfully. "I've done lots of things you don't know anything about."

"That sounds worse and worse!" said her brother shaking his head sadly. "Just as I thought I was bringing you up so nicely, to be a credit to the family."

"We need somebody to be proper," said Loretta, decidedly. "I saw Sam this afternoon and he certainly had a beautiful lot of tales to tell of your capers at that house party."

"That's because they had paper caps for favors," said her brother with a laugh. "And Lucy said mine was becoming and Sam's was hideous. He ought to have known better than to try to wear a green paper cap. Mine was sweet—sort of a baby blue. Sam doesn't like to be outshowns and he won't forgive me that cap if he lives to be a hundred and six, which he won't if he eats so much lobster a la Newburg."

"Anyway," Loretta said, "Aunt Jennie and I got on most beautifully. We even alternated asking directions and took turns tipping guides and things like that."

Stories That Recall Others

Grandpa Still Wingy.

It was the first baby in the family and everybody wished it to look like them. Mother said with emphasis that its tiny mouth was the exact counterpart of her rather large, full mouth; father that its little button of a nose was a counterpart of his large Roman nose, and each auntie was certain that its natural complexion resembled her acquired one.

Grandpa chuckled at them all. "Well," he finally said, "there ain't nary an argument against me claiming that it stoothlessness and baldness are both like mine, is there?"

OBITUARY.

Lloyd H. Thompson.

After an illness of several months, Lloyd H. Thompson, one of the best known members of the Norwich fire department, died Thursday afternoon at 5.45 o'clock at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William N. Thompson, No. 644 Main street. Mr. Thompson had been in failing health since the early part of last winter and in January was forced to give up his duties at the Central fire station. Since that time he had gradually grown weaker until claimed by death Thursday afternoon.

Lloyd H. Thompson was born in Norwich 40 years ago, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Thompson. About sixteen years ago he became a member of the Norwich fire department. He was driver of the old horse drawn apparatus at the West Side station and when the old Falls station was opened was transferred there as driver of Chemical No. 3. Later he was transferred to the Central fire station as a member of the crew of the auto pumper, serving in the capacity of a driver.

Eleven years ago Mr. Thompson was united in marriage with Miss Jennie Rhinehart, who survives him with three children, Lloyd, Ruth and Raymond. He also leaves besides his parents, one brother, Frederick L. Thompson of this city.

Mr. Thompson was a member of Norwich lodge, No. 430, B. P. O. E. He was one of the most popular members of the fire department and was universally liked by a host of warm friends. In his death the department loses an experienced fireman whose services were ever cheerfully and willingly given.

INCENDIARY ATTEMPT AT WARREN CORNELL'S PLACE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Westerly, June 14.—Early Thursday morning an attempt was made to burn the place of Warren D. Cornell on the Westerly-Norwich highway near the junction of the Anguilla road about two miles from Westerly. It was just before daylight when Mr. Cornell was aroused by the barking of his dog. After putting on a few clothes he went to the back door of his house when he discovered flames rising from the rear of a shack which was used as a tool house. Besides the tools in the shack there was a stove and materials left over from the dance hall which was built between the shack and the highway and about forty feet distant, the dance hall being a large frame building.

Shavings were piled up in the rear of the shack with other inflammable material which had been ignited by parties whom Mr. Cornell was unable to identify at that time. He rushed back to his house to procure buckets of water with which he successfully extinguished the blaze. In his trip to the house he also discovered that cracking had been stuck under the floor of the garage which was situated between the shack and the house. It also had been lighted and was burning. An automobile was stored in the garage. One bucket of water was sufficient to put out the garage fire and then his efforts were directed to the shack so that when the fire was extinguished the planking on the rear was all charred and blackened from the ground to the roof. Fortunately at the time there was no wind blowing or the dance hall would have undoubtedly been burned. No chance had been held in the hall by Mr. Cornell since last fall, so that it is difficult to account for anyone being on the premises. A year ago someone entered the shack and starting a fire in the stove burned some of the building material in the place. Mr. Cornell had attributed this at the time to the work of boys. Reports were made Thursday in Stonington law enforcement officials who are making an investigation of the attempted incendiarism.

GIVE TESTIMONY IN AUTO COLLISION SUIT

Trial of the suit of Henry Marx against Alex Lopato for $500 damages to the Marx automobile sustained in a collision at Taftville on the night of Oct. 28 on Norwich avenue, near Hunter's avenue, Taftville, was begun in common pleas court here Thursday morning before Judge C. B. Waller and a jury.

John J. Keenan, who was driving the Marx machine, Officer Patrick T. Murphy, who visited the scene of the accident, William J. Barry, who was riding in the back seat of the Marx machine, and Mrs. Gussie Fries Adams, who was riding on the front seat, were witnesses. Court adjourned at 3 o'clock to continue the trial next Tuesday morning.

The witnesses who were in the Marx car testified that they were driving toward the city from Taftville and that they saw the Lopato car on the left side of the road and that it pulled across and ran into them on the right side of their car.

MECHANIC STREET RAID UNCOVERS MOONSHINE PLANT

Apparatus and supplies that indicated an extensive business in the moonshine line were seized by the police late Thursday night in one of the most successful raids they have made in some time. The articles were seized at 71 Mechanic street, where Louis Gomez was found and was arrested on the charge of violation of the liquor law. He was arrested May 16 at the same place and was fined in the police court that time $200 and costs.

Thursday night the police seized about 40 gallons of fly mash, the coil of a still, a quart bottle of clear moonshine, a rubber water bottle filled with the liquor and a bag of grain. In the room occupied by Gomez at 43 Spring street, two other bottles were found. Gomez was locked up at police headquarters for the night.

ROUNDUP STREAMERS PRESENTED TO NORWICH BOY SCOUT TROOPS

The Norwich Council of Boy Scouts of America was Thursday afternoon presented a beautiful Anniversary Roundup Streamer, the gift of the President of the United States, Warren G. Harding, as a reward for 100 per cent. membership attendance and a 25 per cent. increase in membership this spring. The presentation took place on the court house steps, Union square about 4.45 o'clock and was made by Arthur L. Peale, president of the local scout council, by Nathan A. Gibbs, national scout representative. The streamer is suitably inscribed in gilt. Mayor Milo R. Waters presented individual streamers, also the gift of President Harding, to Troops 1, United Congregational church, 3, Taftville Congregational church, 4, Sacred Heart church, Taftville, 6, Trinity M. E. church, 12, Park Congregational church and Troop 1 of Plainfield.

Several days ago Mr. Peale received from President Harding a personal letter notifying him that the local council had met the specified conditions and had been awarded the Anniversary Roundup Streamer. The letter follows.

THE WHITE HOUSE.
Washington, May 31, 1923.

Dear Mr. Peale: I am pleased to learn that your council has met the specified conditions and is entitled to the award of the Anniversary Roundup Streamer, which I take great pleasure in presenting, with additional streamers for qualified troops. Please extend to each member of the local council, and others associated with you in the work, my hearty congratulations and good wishes. I desire especially to convey appreciation to the scoutmasters and to the boys of those troops which have earned the troop award.

It is most stimulating to realize that through the Boy Scouts of America over 120,000 men are now enrolled for definite volunter service, and that at present there are over 440,000 boy members of this splendid organization. Certainly it can be truly said that the men who are in any way supporting this movement, and especially those who are serving as active leaders, are helping in almost practical fashion to produce for the nation its greatest need—men of character trained for citizenship.

I am keenly anxious to do all in my power to extend the influence of the Scout Programme, because America must avail itself of every resource for producing that type of American Citizenship which will not be content with acceptance of the privileges of citizenship without active participation in meeting the responsibility of citizenship. In the Boy Scout movement, you not only place emphasis upon service, but you have worked out your programme in such a way that boys actually "learn by doing," and in a natural manner acquire that attitude of mind which brings to them a consciousness that they must be citizens of the participating kind, and not mere on-lookers.

I do most sincerely hope that you will continue your efforts to recruit increased leadership and greater resources, in order that more boys of scout age may have the advantages of this movement, which has earned for itself appraisement as one of the greatest assets our Nation has today.

Sincerely,
WARREN G. HARDING.

Mr. Arthur L. Lewis, President, Local Council, Boy Scouts of America, 21-Shannon Bldg., Norwich Connecticut.

Following the presentation of the streamers the scout troops formed in line and headed by the Scout Bugle and Drum Corps marched through Franklin square, up Franklin street to Rockwell street and back down Broadway to Union square where the parade was dismissed.

At 8 o'clock in the evening the Court of Honor, Henry A. Tirrell, president, held a meeting in the police court room at the court house for the purpose of making the annual presentation of prizes and badges. About 100 Scouts were present at the gathering.

The meeting opened with the assembly, sounded on the bugle after which the Scout salute to the court was given and the scout oath repeated. The address of the evening was given by Max Hanover who is deeply interested in scout work.

Mr. Hanover spoke as follows:

I am very thankful to the Norwich council of Boy Scouts of America for honoring me with an invitation to speak to the Boy Scouts of Norwich. I love to talk to Norwich boys, because they are good boys. They are the sons of the good people of Norwich, and from what I have learned about the people of our city you can all be proud of your fathers. Your fathers are conscious that you are the future men of our city and that you are to take up the noble task of civic activities and civic duties when you come of voting age and to propagate these ideals as you grow older.

Your fathers imbued with the spirit of Americanism have thought well to provide for you—the Boy Scout organization—an American organization which brings out the best that is in the boy. It develops your manhood. It develops your muscles, it teaches you many things necessary to your healthy development. It teaches you respect for your elders and comradeship for your fellow boys and to do a good turn every day. It makes your play orderly and respectable, it teaches you to walk straight and to carry your body as a peerless American ought to carry himself, and I can assure you that it is a great privilege to be a sovereign citizen of these United States of America. But above all, the Boy Scout organization imbues you with patriotism and with love for your noble flag and your noble country, and it prepares you to be the valiant and stalwart defenders of our dear country for which our forefathers laid down their lives in order that we might have liberty and in order that the whole world might benefit by the lesson of true self government. In that sense, you are our future hope, the future hope of your country and the hope of the whole world.

To the United States of America, to our liberty loving and at the same time peace loving people, the whole world is looking for guidance and with a hope that human differences might be settled by peaceful courts of reason and not by devastating and destructive wars.

Our liberties have been conceived amidst great suffering and privation. We paid dearly with the dear blood of our sons for the ideal of a peaceful and industrious unmolested life, and under these noble precepts we have thrived, and have become the greatest nation on earth. We have grown strong enough to command respect and to give to a distracted and war-torn world the hope of peace and security. And if we are to propagate these noble ideals and keep alive the fire of hope for a happier future for mankind we must be strong, we must be resolved we must be ever ready to defend these principles.

Our strength lies in your help. You are the future men of this great American republic, and the Boy Scout organization builds the foundation of your future manhood and of your future joys.

But please do not let all I said frighten you, for there is great fun in being a Boy Scout, and you know it. I can see it by your clean-cut faces and bright eyes. You are a mischievous lot, but healthy and playful mischief.

Boys will be boys, and you can have a lot of fun in getting together and have a lot of boyish interest in discussing scouting. And O, my! how you discuss it! You know all about it and no one can put anything over on you. And yet you deserve great credit for the manner in which you obey your scoutmasters, and I am sure that it is because you appreciate the earnestness of your scoutmasters in discharging their duty and their zeal in giving you the best that is in them.

We hope to see in the very near future that our Boy Scout organization will double in numbers and that the contributions and support given to it by the citizens of our city will triple in volume. It is a good American movement and I am confident that you boys will prove worthy of our hopes and measure up to our aspirations.

It is very gratifying to see so many badges of merit distributed this evening. It is an honor and great satisfaction to be singled out for merit by your elders and by your superiors, and I hope to see more of you get these badges, and I know that you will, because you are all good boys, and I wish you good luck for your future.

Following Mr. Hanover's talk, Scout Executive F. A. Benton presented the pet show prizes as follows:

Ice cream, cakes and punch were served in the dining room after which the 75 or so members present donned each her ancestral Paisley, cashmere stalls, Indian, Chinese or old lace shawl and walked two by two through the winding paths at the back of Pinehurst, led by Mrs. Gale and the retiring regent, Mrs. A. N. H. Vaughn, coming at last to the front and gathering around the flag pole, where Mrs. Helen Eabrickie led in the salute to the flag.

The hostess was assisted in serving refreshments by the following committee: Mrs. Ray D. Judd, chairman, Mrs. George Ashley, Mrs. Charles Stewart, Mrs. Armand J. La Fleur, Mrs. William H. Osborne, Mrs. Harvey M. Bridges, Miss Helen Browning and Mrs. E. Allen Bidwell.

Startling New Facts About High Blood Pressure

The most frequent cause of high blood pressure is chronic nephritis, which is a general poisoning of the body by the absorption of poisons from the intestines. Poor digestion and constipation create toxic poisons that are absorbed into the blood, causing the muscles controlling the arteries to contract, which in turn forces the heart to pump more vigorously to overcome the obstruction.

The pressure within the arteries rises and high blood pressure is present. It should be accepted as a warning which, unheeded, will eventually result in turning a curable condition into an incurable disease.

Nature, as in most ills, gives us ample warning. Dizziness, palpitation of the heart, nervousness, shortness of breath, ringing in the ears, feeling of fullness in the chest, are all symptoms of high blood pressure and should never be neglected.

A well known physician has devoted much of his time to discovering a means of reaching the cause of high blood pressure and only recently, after many thousands of successful clinical tests, his preparation has been put up in convenient tablet form and is dispensed by druggists under the name Bi-o-lin. Bi-o-lin has the same medicinal properties to the human bile which is Nature's great antiseptic. Just a few days' treatment with Bi-o-lin so regulates the bile that it resumes its work of overcoming and eliminating the poisonous wastes that accumulate in the intestines. With these poisons gone, your blood pressure returns to normal.

Bi-o-lin is a mild, pleasant, harmless preparation that has been so remarkable in its results that the American distributors have authorized local druggists to discount it with a guarantee to return the full purchase price if in any rare case the very first bottle does not give wonderful relief.

DANIELSON

Attention of boat fishermen is called to an important change in the law that will be effective when the season for angling for this game fish opens with the first of the month. No bass less than 10 inches in length may be taken, and legally restricted hereafter. This will be found to be a great safety measure for the protection of the bass. Lengthwise the minimum length of bass that could be measured legally was 8 inches. But such bass will be regarded as "short" than ever, and those who may possess them will be liable to arrest. Quite often fish are found when the season opens, or it is believed the fishermen to carry such in their equipment and be certain that they do not retain any bass under the inches in length that may be taken.

Chief John Matchett of the police department gives notice that bicycles are again violating the laws relative to riding on sidewalks, pedestrians with bells on their wheels and without lights at night. The warning is with a view to having them ridden properly equip their machines and keep them off the sidewalks, which are reserved for pedestrians.

"EVERY MAN TO HIS TRADE"

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Somebody having found fault because the only farming experience of a certain writer of agricultural books was a comfortable, abounding ocean, fresh eggs and real milk on a farm house front porch, The Toledo Blade comes to his defense thusly:

"This seems to be a rather late-day to expect firsthand farming knowledge of authorities upon the subject. Horace Greeley wrote more advice to farmers than ten of them could follow in a life time. The gentlemen of the senate farm bloc are not farmers and yet know more about the farmers' needs than entire rural sections. They have as much as confessed it. The fitting characteristic topics dealing with the soil shall be handled in city office buildings, government bureaus and congressional anterooms. It is a tradition followed with the utmost faithfulness."

I don't s'pose any of you will need a diagram of the above with indexes and alphabetics to make clear that it is "wrote sarkastikal," as Josh Billings might have said.

Nevertheless, as "many a true word is uttered in jest," so the Ohio paper's sarcasm merits more consideration than—a mere spin of half-malicious enjoyment. It states in facetious form a fact which practical farmers have long recognized. That is to say, namely and to wit, the fact that quite too large a proportion of the stuff written and printed about farming is city dream-stuff based on little comprehension of farm problems and no knowledge of farm difficulties.

I wish somebody could explain why it is that people who don't know the difference between a turnip and a toadstool should be eager to teach us countrymen how to select mushrooms. Why men who couldn't tell a striped-beetle from a firefly think themselves competent to instruct farmers in the proper way to grow cucumbers. Why others who couldn't recognize a lady-bug from a Leghorn rooster should think themselves qualified to write about the care of hens' teeth.

Why those who happen to have a few millions in stock-gambling or bootlegging or some kindred civic vocation should assume this as commission to lecture farmers on "business methods." Why men who accumulate wealth by merchandising should think their good luck has fitted them to show farmers how to make money by paying $5 wages to raise a $3 crop.

Why those who chance to have attained in any one specialized line seem to take it for granted that they are thereby divinely commissioned to tell others how to succeed in some totally unlike line.

These are mysteries in that mysterious conglomeration which we call "human nature" and smile over, when we don't get mad at them. I don't expected them ever to be explained till the Coming of Wisdom.

Which won't be for a very, very long time, yet.

I once made a careful table of the various instructions regarding the care of work horses printed during a year in various publications ostensibly agricultural. It was long ago, and I've quite forgotten many of the details. The outstanding fact which remains fixed in my memory was that, if I had followed all these dogmatic directions precisely as given, I should have been unable to get more than two hours' work a day from my team. The remaining ten hours would have been occupied in valet-de-chambre attentions to them.

Of course, no one writer's course of treatment involved all this time. I put together and tabulated all the various veterinary instructions I came across during the year. Sometimes they contradicted each other; sometimes they made fun of each other; but always every one was as dogmatic and inflexible as the Ten Commandments.

It's very much so with other factors of the farm problem. We horny-handed, stiff-backed and sore-sinewed hayseeds of the back farms have, as a rule, more advice and instruction flung at us than we could absorb if we were given the years of Methuselah and the digestion of an ostrich which is reputed to live mainly on gravelstones.

Most of this advice and instruction sounds pretty good, too—till we try it out. Occasionally some one of us does, "jest for fun, ye know." Usually the result of a few such fliers into the realms of dreams is to make the experimenters forever after distrustful of all they may see in print.

Common fairness forbids that I should include in this gleam all that is written or printed about farming. Occasionally a non-farmer of acute mind and broad vision makes public some discovery or suggests some new method which can be and sometimes is worked over into practical value. Even more rarely some actual farmer contributes a bit of experience which serves either as warning or guide post to others.

But these are only cases in a big desert. The Ohio paper seems to have the facts behind it when it intimates that city office buildings, government bureaus and congressional ante rooms are the main sources of the floods of exhortation and advice and dogmatic instruction regularly let loo on the simple-minded farmer-man.

When the old-time, doctor wasn't sure whether his prescription would cure or kill, he bade the office-boy "try it on the dog." When visionaries and enthusiasts and Utopians evolve out of their befogged imaginations some panacea for economic ills they invariably try it on the farmer, first. (Perhaps that's one reason why so many farmers go insane. Anybody naturally would who tried to swallow all the remedies squirted at him.)

Now don't think I'm making any reflections on the scores and hundreds of investigators, who, in laboratories and on experimental fields, are painfully and slowly searching out the hidden facts about soils and plant-foods and bacterial potencies and insect dangers. The-test-tube will sometimes tell in two minutes what the "practical farmer" would take two years to learn from trying out his soil. A bacterial culture under the microscope will sometimes teach a lesson that otherwise might cost the workhar farmer the loss of a season's time and labor to find-out. The laboratory is no place to learn farming," Greeted. But it's a mighty good place to get "pointers" from. And the farmer who doesn't want and need all the "pointers" he-can get from intelligent friends is a sort of white blackbird.

It's not his intelligent and sincerely helpful investigators that I have in mind but his "fool friends" which term includes practically all politicians and far too large a proportion of the so-called "business" element.

You and I have been talking at each other for a good many years. I think you'll bear witness for me that I have very seldom, during those years, undertaken to tell my grandmother how to scale eggs, or my fellow-farmers how to farm. Two or three times, usually in response to individual requests, I have told the story of special triumph or failure of my own, and debated the possible reasons for such triumph. But ordinarily, we've kept away from details and dogmatisings. I've tried to suggest ideas and ideals rather than work out formulas and compound panaceas.

Of course, this method doesn't suit all tastes. It isn't helpful in all cases. But, being myself, a practical working farmer, dependent for my living on what my farm can be made to give me, I long ago learned that, while our main problem is about the same, everywhere, the details of that problem are different on almost every farm. Nay, on almost every separate field of every farm.

When it's a question of what to plant on the South Meadow, or how to fertilize the corn on the Home Lot, or where to make a bed for cotton seed of the barn, I'm there with both feet. You see, I've summered and wintered this farm for many long years, and I actually know something about its capacities and its needs and its whims. That very fact makes me chary of attempting to tell any other farmer what to do with or on his farm. For what's meat to one man may be poison to another. I've known men who couldn't eat strawberries. I've know farms which have been soured into sullenness by too much barn-yard manure, too freely applied. But most of us like strawberries. And a good many of us know how to use barnyard manure without abusing it.

"Every man to his trade," is an old saying. The tailor can usually make a better coat than the blacksmith, and the carpenter build a better house than the minister. "Let the shoemaker stick to his last." The fact that a socker-going politician has attained office doesn't necessarily qualify him to raise either wheat or cabbages. Nor to give advice to those who do. And that same Josh Billings once put it: "It is better not to know everything than to know so much that ain't so."

Yes, I noticed that my big-hearted and loyal friend, G. Warran Davis, wants to entice me into the field of local city politics. Brother Davis is as full of ideas as I sometimes find myself of words. He's a friend for any newspaper scribbler to be proud of. I value his commendation, even when I must sorrowfully admit that it isn't fully deserved. So long as I can interest him and my other readers in matters concerning the farm—matters of which I really know a little something—so long shall I feel that I am not wholly wasting paper and ink.

But city affairs? No, no, not for Joseph!

What do I, a muddy-booted hayseed off in the hills, know about city needs or city economies? And why should I attempt to cast light on a matter concerning which I am necessarily myself wholly in the dark? The very fact that I so strenuously object to city amateurs trying to tell me how to farm emphatically forbids me to try telling them how to run the city. I am, as you see, perfectly willing to take my own medicine. I'm not willing to do unto others what I don't want others to do unto me.

John Farmer may, perhaps, now and then, be of some trifling help to a perplexed and discouraged fellow farmer. For he's been through that mill himself. But John Farmer as a sort of city adviser would be a fish out of water, floundering ridiculously about on the banks of his own colossal ignorance.

Don't you think yourself, G. W., that it's wiser for me to keep my mouth shut, when opening it would only be a give-away?

THE FARMER.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

A Call at the Barnyard.

Across the Sunny Meadow grass
The little breezes love to pass;
They tickle all the cattails till
They almost fall into the rill.
And every now and then they tell
Old Mrs. Cow to ring her bell.
Now, before I commence this

"Don't tell that to Peter Possum."

story, I'll explain right away that the reason I used "rill" is because the Babbling Brook doesn't rhyme with "bell."

"Ha, ha!" laughed Little Jack Rabbit as Mrs. Cow shook her head till her bell made so much noise that her little calf came running toward her, "I heard what the little breezes said!"

Then Mrs. Cow gave a long "Moo!" which meant something I'm sure, for after that the little rabbit hopped away and by and by, he came to the barnyard where Cocky Doodles sang his cock-a-doodle song every morning to wake Mr. Sun who goes to sleep in the west and gets up every morning in the east. I wonder how he does it, don't you? I guess you and I would feel very queer if some morning after going to sleep in our own bed we should wake up in another!

"Hello!" said Little Henny Jenny, the white hen, as Little Jack Rabbit hopped through the Old Rail Fence, "where have you been all this time?"

"Oh, lots of places!" he replied. "Uncle Lucky and I have been automobiling and the Old Red Rooster has sprained his left leg and the Old Brown Horse has a new collar and Grandmother Magpie has gone to visit in Birdville."

"I saw Teddy Turtle," said Ducky Waddles who came by just then. "He's very proud of Mrs. Turtle has laid some eggs in a hole in the ground and has covered them up with dirt and he says pretty soon there will be some little turtles."

"Ha, ha!" laughed the little rabbit, "don't tell that to Peter Possum. He loves turtle eggs."

Ducky Waddles promised he wouldn't and after that the little rabbit hopped away, although the Weathercock on the Big Red Barn asked him to stay a little longer.

"No, I won't," answered Little Jack Rabbit, "I'm afraid Old Sic'em will wake up and he might chase me."

But even if that old dog had, the little rabbit could have gotten away easily for Old Sic'em had the rheumatism.

Well, after a while, not so very long, Little Jack Rabbit saw Professor Crow sitting on a tree.

"Wait a minute," said that wise old bird, "I want to read you something from my little Black Book," and the old gentleman crow turned to page 23 1-2—after he had put on his spectacles of course for he couldn't see very well without them.

Then, clearing his throat, he said, "Caw, caw!" two or three times and looked at the little rabbit, but what he read out of his book I'll tell you in the next story, for there is no more room in this one for another word.

DIVERSIFIED LINES ON FARM AT LEBANON

After a trial of specialized farming in which most of his time was employed in milking cows and caring for his dairy herd, Rush Foster of Lebanon has decided that the best system is that of diversified farming, in which several sources of income can be depended upon.

As a result of that decision he has decided to cut the size of his dairy herd to 12 or 15 purebred Jersey cows and to stress production of apples, eggs, and pork along with his dairy products. The plan is working out splendidly, the rich milk from his Jersey cows going through the cream separator and the skimmilk being fed to calves, chickens and pigs.

The presence of a creamery at Lebanon makes the marketing of his cream an easy problem. Except in the vicinity of large cities, it is almost impossible to sell the product of Jersey or Guernsey cows for the special price which its exceptional richness warrants when as whole milk. The problem on the Foster farm is not how to dispose of the skimmilk but to get enough of it to supply the farm needs. A purebred Berkshire sow regularly produces litters of nine to ten pigs, which sell at good prices either as breeding stock or as pork after fattening largely on skimmilk. From 500 to 600 hens White Leghorns, Rhode Island Reds and White Plymouth Rocks, are kept for egg production. About 2,000 baby chicks are being raised for sale this year. As Mr. Foster expects to maintain his dairy herd from calves of his own raising, this entails an additional demand for skimmilk.

Apples form an increasingly important phase of Mr. Foster's farm production. He belongs to the Goshen Spray Ring, a co-operative organization of farmers who have bought a high-powered spray machine and spraying materials co-operatively, enabling them to materially reduce their costs of spraying. Five sprayings are being used, as frequent spraying insure sounder fruit, and therefore better prices. Mr. Foster says his apples sell for good prices and that the demand is greater than the supply.

Although Mr. Foster expects to reduce the size of his dairy herd from about twenty milking cows to twelve or fifteen, he is working hard to improve the quality of his herd. His present herd bull is a grandson of the noted Oxford Lad and is himself a remarkably fine animal. With several purebred cows in his herd capable of 40 to 45 pounds of milk daily, an excellent mark for the Jersey breed, he has every opportunity to build up a strong herd on his farm.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Mrs. Blake—Husbands are strange creatures.

Professor (explaining the results obtained from the inflection of the voice)—Did I ever tell you the story of the actor who could read a menu so as to make his audience weep?

Student (strangely moved)—He must have read the prices.—Everybody's Magazine.

Neighbor Woman—Do your mother wants to borrow my clothes wringer, does she?

Tenement Child—Yes, 'cause forever put kitty's tail in our 'n spoiled it all to pieces, 'n muvver says you're a horrid old women if you don't; but don't tell her I said so, 'n I think you are anyway, so there—whose's your wringer?—Harvard Lampoon.

Judge—You are charged with running down a policeman. What have you to say for yourself?

Motorist—I didn't know he was an officer, your honor; I thought he was just a pedestrian.—New York Sun.

GREEN THINGS GROWING

O, the green things growing, the green things growing,
The faint sweet smell of the green things growing!
I should like to live, whether I smile or grieve,
Just to watch the happy life of my green things growing.

O, the fluttering and the pattering of those green things growing!
How they talk, each to each, when none of us is knowing;
In the wonderful white of the weird moonlight
Or the dim dreamy dawn when the cocks are crowing.

I love, I love them so—my green things growing!
And I think that they love me, without false showing;
For by many a tender touch, they comfort me so much,
With the soft mute comfort of green things growing.

And in the rich store of their blossoms glowing
Ten for one I take they're on me bestowing;
Oh, I should like to see, if God's will it may be,
Many, many a summer of green things growing!

But if I must be gathered for the angel's sowing,
Sleep out of sight awhile, like the green things growing,
Though dust to dust return, I think I'll scarcely mourn,
If I may change into green things growing.

Have You Piles?

There You Have Something to Learn

Thousands who have piles have not as yet learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was first to find the remedy. His prescription is HEM-ROID, a tablet medicine, taken internally, that is now sold by druggists generally. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in 1,000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 98 per cent. and then decided it should be sold under a rigid money-back guarantee.

Don't waste any more time with local applications. Get a package of HEM-ROID today. Use it according to directions and if you are not entirely satisfied with the results your money will be refunded without question. Sold by druggists everywhere.

BODY OF KAMINISKI CHILD FOUND FLOATING IN THE THAMES RIVER

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, June 14—The body of the four years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kaminiski, who was taken away from her home at No. 171 North Bank street three weeks ago when the mother leaped into the Thames river and carrying the child with her to carry out the parent's plan to destroy her life and that of her child, was found floating in the Thames river this morning by John McCaskey, watchman at the Central Vermont railroad pier. The body of the child was badly mutilated where fish had attacked its features and hands and this afternoon it was buried beside the mother, whose body was found Monday night and interred in St. Mary's cemetery, Tuesday afternoon.

This morning at 5 o'clock when Watchman McCaskey was making rounds on the pier he observed the body of the child floating close to the dock and securing a rope he made it fast and notified the police. Medical Examiner Harold H. Heyer was summoned and after viewing the remains ordered it transferred to an undertaking establishment.

Sullivan, of No. 72 School street, Norwich, employed by the railroad as yard brakeman at Fort Neck, was not arraigned in the police court this morning, Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin, dismissing the case against the accused.

Sullivan who was removed to Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital for treatment for knife wounds inflicted by Clust when the two men engaged in a fight, was able to go to his home this morning.

Lewis J. Webb, formerly a member of the state police force, but in recent years the proprietor of the Wayside Inn at Noank, was in the police court here this forenoon for the transportation of alcoholic liquors through New London. He represented that he was disappointed in not being represented by counsel and asked for a continuance of the case till tomorrow. That was granted. Then he was arraigned on a second charge—the operation of an automobile without having in his possession a license to run the car. This was continued till tomorrow also. He was ordered to furnish a bail bond of $1000 on the first charge and $50 on the second. He secured Frank Saunders, a local barber to qualify as surety.

Before Mr. Webb could get a bondsman on the cases he spent a couple of hours in a cell. Then he was arraigned before United States Commissioner Matthewson for violation of the federal statutes in transporting liquor and on that charge was held in $3,000. He then secured Frank [illegible] and the latter became the surety.

A. Frank Green, an auto salesman who has been engaged at Norwich and New London, was charged with non-support in the police court today. The case did not get to a trial because his attorney from Norwich requested a continuance, and the case went over till Saturday. Mrs. Green alleges that her husband has not contributed to her support, but instead that he has been an expense to her, and that he has neglected her in every way since the 1st of January last. The couple have one child, a daughter of about seven years.

The school year in New London closed today with exercises in the several schools. The Chapman technical school having its graduation exercises this evening. This is the school where the hand and the eyes are trained as well as the mind, and the exhibition of the work of the pupils showed that they had made good use of their privileges and had accomplished wonderful things. The girls are trained in dress making and millinery, cooking and other accomplishments which will come to their aid as they go out from school not to enter again for studies, and the boys receive the foundation of useful trades if they will apply themselves to them. The grammar schools graduated about 275 pupils whether they go farther in their studies or go out into the world to make their mark. Frederick Edgerton, secretary of the board of school visitors, presented the diplomas and Mrs. J. N. Kelley handed the prizes the scholars won to them. Williams Memorial Institute graduated some 70 girls, many of them to go to Connecticut college. The graded schools graduated the usual number of pupils. Altogether the year was a satisfactory one to the management of them.

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Corcoran of Willetts avenue were in New York today, being in attendance at the graduating class of Fordham college of which Mr. Corcoran's son, Russell T. Corcoran, is a member.

William Dineen, a youth of 18 years and residing at No. 9 Pearl street, is missing from home, but his parents do not entertain fears as to the young man's whereabouts for they are known to be in New London although he persists in remaining away from home. The police were informed tonight that the youth has been loitering about the government pier on Water street and requested that they use their influence in compelling him to return home.

Charles Kleinman of No. 117 Bayonet street, complained to the police this evening that an automobile, bearing Connecticut registration, No. 43-245, collided with the former's automobile at the corner of Williams and Main street. Kleinmann requested the arrest of the driver of the colliding machine for evading responsibility.

Frank Farina, aged 28 years, son of Mrs. Lucy and the late Salvatore Farina, died this afternoon at his home, No. 44 Prest street. Mr. Farina besides his mother, is survived by two brothers and fourais ters.

Mr Farine was born in, Italy, but removed to this country when a young boy and had resided in New London ever since. He was employed for several years as fireman at the plant of the Brainerd & Armstrong company. Mr. Farina's health became impaired about six months ago and in April he was forced to submit to an operation. Since that time his health gradually declined.

Mouse thieves availed themselves of the opportunity afforded them to operate unmolested this afternoon while housewives absented themselves from home to witness the big flag day parade conducted by New London lodge, No. 360, Beneyolent and Protective Order of Elks. The thieves visited the home of Thomas H. Troland of No. 167 Jefferson avenue and while Mrs. Troland accompanied friends to State street to watch the passing of the procession. The plunder obtained was not sufficient value to warrant the thief taking the chance he did.

Entrance to the house was gained by going to the rear door and forcing open a screen door. With this accomplished the thief smashed one of the lights of glass in the inside door through which he thrust his hand and unlocked it as the key was left in the lock. Once inside the place, the crook conducted a careful, but hasty search for plunder and as nothing was taken except money it is believed that the thief did not desire to steal anything that would lead to his being captured through his endeavor to convert any of the plunder into cash. A pocketbook containing less than $10 was found on a kitchen table and this was taken as was a quantity of coins that had been deposited in a small savings bank. Mrs. Troland returned home about 5:30 and discovered the burglary. She immediately communicated with the police and Motorcycle Officer John Cavanaugh was assigned to the case. The officer was unable to obtain any clues that would lead to the apprehension of the thief other than he was probably a young man and attired in a light tweed suit, for a neighbor observed a fellow answering that description at the rear entrance of the Troland residence during the late afternoon.

Robert Moore and family, annual residents during the summer at Pequot where Mr. Moore owns one of the largest mansions in the fashionable colony and who are now at their winter home in New Orleans will arrive in New London the latter part of this week or early next week.

New London celebrated Flag day with a good deal more enthusiasm today than it has ever before manifested. There was a commendable procession this afternoon at four o'clock in which the participants were military and civic organizations with music and a drum corps. The procession started at the Hartlett school and finished a short line of march at the home of the Elks on Washington street where there was a flag raising and in the armory adjoining where the ritualistic work of the Elks was exemplified. The display of flags was quite general along the line of march and at the soldiers' and sailors' monument, the city providing $250 for the decorations. The celebration was under the auspices of the Elks.

CONTINO BOUND OVER TO SUPERIOR COURT

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, June 14—Joseph Contino, a little storekeeper on Shaw St., was charged with manslaughter this morning in the police court. He was represented by counsel and demurred to the complaint. Probable cause was found and he was held for the September term of the superior court in $2,000 bail, Frank Polalabba becoming the surety on the bond.

Contino was a participant in a ride with men, women and children on Sunday evening, the 20th of May, and driving along Pequot avenue ran into a telephone pole at the curb near the Pequot laundry. John Longo, a passenger in the car, was thrown out and sustained injuries that caused his death later at the Lawrence hospital. Longo was at that time prosecuted for operating a car while he was under the influence of liquor and was found guilty and fined $100. He paid that fine. He told the court at the time that he was arranging for a christening and that the party in the car with him were all participants in the arrangements. He said he had drank a couple of glasses of wine but nothing more. Neither he nor anyone who heard him believed that two glasses of wine would effect him so that he would be incapable of operating an auto, but the fact remained that he was incapable and he was fined as stated.

INTERESTING TRACK MEET BETWEEN MYSTIC SCHOOLS

(Special to The Bulletin)

Mystic, June 14.—The second annual track meet between the Academy and the Broadway schools brought forth some interesting latent talent which was surprising to the spectators. Broadway won 100 1-2 to 32 1-2.

Two new features of this year's meet were the chariot races among the smaller boys and the physical and military drill. Both the boys and the girls' chariot races were exceptionally close. Five boys for horses, three for the chariot and one driver, composed one team. The girls chariot teams were similarly made up. The physical and military drill was one of the finest sights of the afternoon. Both schools lined up in mass formation while Mr. Lanza, director of the community house lead the boys and girls in military and calisthenics drills. The judges decided that the points should be divided between the two schools because there was very little difference.

John Sylvia of Academy was high point scorer for the meet as for his school. His total number of points amounted to 18. Arnold of Broadway was a close second with 16 points, while Gray of the Academy and Radicioni of Broadway, each tied for third place with 13 points to their credit.

Orrin H. Sanford who is donating the cup this year will present it to the Broadway school on graduation day. First, second and third place badges will also be presented on that day.

How Many Women Peel Their Faces At Homes

Any woman nowadays may quickly rejuvenate her complexion at home by a safe and painless peeling process. It has been found that ordinary mercolized wax, applied like cold cream at night, causes the thin veil of lifeless, sallow or blotchy cuticle to gently flake off in tiny particles, revealing the fresh, vigorous and beautiful young skin underneath. The wax peels off only the unsightly outer film. The process defies detection and unveils a clear, white, lovely complexion which is, of course, a perfectly natural one. Many thousands of women now use mercolized wax, which may be obtained at any drug store. Naturally the process also removes all such surface blemishes as freckles, pimples, tan, liver spots. It makes the face look years younger.

STONINGTON

The second day of the 151st anniversary of the Stonington Union Baptist association, was held at the First Baptist church Thursday. The morning program was opened with a devotional service by Rev. George Atha, followed by a report of the officers and various committees. The Groton Heights church, at Groton, is to have the silver loving cup, having held this cup for the last four years. The colored quartette rendered several selections which were thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience. Rev. John W. Payne gave the benediction which closed the morning program. The Womap's Relief Corps served dinner.

The afternoon session was opened by Rev. Charles S. Nightingale, who led the devotional service, and the Jubilee singers, from Shaw University sang selections. The address of the afternoon was by William A. Hill, D. D., who made a stirring address on The Doors of Hope. The speaker spoke of the opportunities open to all, and the chance given to God's people, if they would listen to him, and of the life everlasting. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Everett P. Mathewson, and with the organ prelude, and the closing hymn, the meeting came to a close, after a most successful two days convention here. The many visitors from all over the county, enjoyed the opportunity to view the scenes of the many historic places of Stonington. In the two days session about 250 people were here to attend the meetings, and persons were cared for in the homes over Wednesday evening.

The Wequetequock Community club has chosen the members for the entertainment and refreshment committee, Mr. and Mrs. Newell Smith, Mrs. Louis Conrad, Miss Lucy Crowley, Benjamin A. Smith. The basketry class meets each Tuesday, and Miss Crowley, is the instructor.

Thursday evening Miss Gladys Bachman of Boston, gave a most delightful concert in Community house, being accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Carrington. The program was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number of musicians, as well as by the large number that composed the audience. Miss Bachman showed fine technique, and talent and her tones were rich and mellow. This afforded the community a rare treat. Many from Mystic and Westerly attended the concert.

The yacht Josephine II, from New York, bound for City Hill, L. I., was in the harbor preparing to leave Thursday for Long Island, having received supplies here.

BETTER HEALTH FOR WOMEN

Any woman who will stop and consider the result of a questionnaire recently sent out by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., will be all fairness admit the value of the old-fashioned root and herb medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Many thousand replies were received, and 21 out of every 100 women stated they had been benefited or restored to health by its use. This means better health for American women. It surely will pay any woman who suffers from any ailment or weakness peculiar to her sex to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

Day's total sales 784,200 shares.

Twenty industrials averaged 93.46, net loss .08. High 1923, 96.63; low, 92.71.

MARKET WAS DULL.

New York, June 14.—Conflicting price movements characterized the desultory trading in today's stock market, most of the shares being displayed a heavy tone throughout the session, with little or no public support, and operators for the advance showing no disposition to move their investments to higher ground. Speculators for the decline had little difficulty in depressing prices nearly all sections of the list.

Another flock of low records for the year was established during the day, United States Steel touching 91 1-4 and then rallied feebly for a net loss of 1 point on the day. Other stocks to sell at new low prices for the year were Sinclair, Coalden, Pacific and Texas Oils, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Phillips Petroleum, Marine preferred, Kelly-Springfield, Brown Shoe, Nash Motors, Wilson Packing, Consolidated Textile and Ohio Body, the last losses averaging around a point.

Railroad shares offered better resistance to selling pressure than the industrials. Failure to attract a public following in the recent series of favorable dividend developments, however caused some liquidation by tired holders of long stock. New York Central forfeited 1 1-4 points of its four point gain of yesterday and some of the other high priced shares also lost ground.

Reports that flush production in the southern California oil fields shows signs of having reached its peak failed to stem the liquidation on oil shares which suffered the hardest losses. California Petroleum dropped 4 points, the old stock having been stricken from the list. Pierce Oil preferred jumped 6 points on announcement of a Virginia court decision in the preferred stockholders favor.

Declaration of a quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the new Underwood Typewriter stock marked the realization of another Old Wall Street's dividend hopes. The old stock paid $3.50 quarterly before it was split up on a 4-to-1 basis, the new rate being equivalent to 32 quarterly on the old. Activity and recent strength in Moon Motors is based on the expectation that directors will raise the annual dividend rate from $2 to $4 and declare an extra cash dividend of 25 cents at their meeting, June 18.

Call money opened at 4 1-2 per cent. but advanced to 5 before the close. Time money business is quiet with plenty of money available for the shorter maturities at 4 3-4 and bankers asking 5 for the longer dates.

Foreign exchange trading was quiet with few important changes in rates. Demand sterling held around $4.61 and French francs around 6.35 cents. German marks touched a new low at .0065.

COTTON.

New York, June 14.—Spot cotton quiet, middling 28.46.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 14.—Notwithstanding that wheat averaged higher in price today, the market declined at the last owing chiefly to lack of sustained general buying and to almost complete absence of fresh export business. The close was heavy, 1-4 to 1c net lower with July $1.10 7-8 to $1.11 and December $1.06 7-8 to $1.09. Corn finished at 1-4 off to 3-8 gain; oats at 1-8 decline to a shade advance, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents down.

Except for a brief interval soon after the opening, bulls had the advantage in the wheat market until the last hour of trading. An upturn in Liverpool quotations, together with unfavorable reports of crop conditions in the southwest, as well as complaints of dry weather in the northwest led temporarily to increased buying and to a moderate upturn in values. It finally became apparent, however, that speculative demand in particular was of insufficient volume to support the market in the face of profit taking sales. Then a reaction took place.

Only 160,000 bushels of wheat were reported as having been newly purchased for shipment to Europe. In this connection, significance was attached to messages from France saying that talk of crop damage there by cold wet weather had been exaggerated. Announcement of enlarged shipments from India tended further to exercise a bearish influence, and so, too, did advices indicating less pessimism as to the crop outlook in Italy and Great Britain.

Corn and oats followed wheat, but in the late trading held up better against sales to realize profits. Another substantial weekly decrease of the stock of corn here was predicted.

In the provision market, commission house selling was more than an offset for an advance in hog values.

BOND MARKET.

New York, June 14.—After an early period of reaction bond prices in the trading on the New York Stock Exchange today became steadier with the result that net changes on the day were small.

Foreign government bonds were quite active and generally improved. The new Austrian 7s continued in demand with prices fairly firm around 91 3-4 or nearly a point higher than final figures yesterday. Dutch East Indies 6 1-2s advanced 1 1-4 points.

United States government bonds declined in the early transactions but regained some of their losses and closed close to yesterday's final quotations.

Railroad mortgages moved irregularly within a narrow range. A gain of one point by American Waterworks 6s was the only outstanding change among industrial liens.

Public sales (par value) were $10,427,000.

Public offerings will be made tomorrow of $9,930,000 Chicago and North Western Railway Company one of 15-year 5 per cent. equipment trust certificates at prices to yield 5.40 per cent.

ANDOVER

The men's club held a meeting at the town hall on Monday evening. Rev. Mr. Goodsell, who has been in California, the past winter gave a very interesting talk on the beauty of that place and other topics.

Rev. Mr. Goodsell occupied the pulpit last Sunday.

Mrs. Shepard and children of New Haven are visiting at her sisters, Mrs. Ralph Bass.

The graduation exercises of the Andover grammar school were held in the town hall Tuesday evening in charge of supervision of schools, A. Wilson Greer. There were three graduates, Holden P. Wright, Everett M. Allen and Edward L. Gatchell, who received diplomas. The two teachers of the school, Miss Gladys Bradley and Miss Lena Sykes assisted in the exercises.

The schools will close Friday for the summer vacation.

Wonderful for Piles Says Peterson

If you received every week a dozen or more letters like the ones below from people who have suffered torments from piles, wouldn't you feel happier than the man whose life is devoted to money grubbing?

"Gentlemen—I have been suffering with a malady for the past twenty years. During this time I have tried numerous remedies, all of which have failed.

"I am resolved determined to give Peterson's Ointment a trial. The improvement was so decided after using one box that I have continued, and feel the beneficial effects of the fifth box will now entirely dispel.

"This is written with the view of passing along the good word to other sufferers."—Third Ward, Utica, N. Y. Ed. Cashell, 141 Third St. Albany, N. Y.

Harry Lawther, from R. F. D. Eleanor Thomas, Jr., of Hemlock, N. Y. He writes: "I had the feeling piles also high blood pressure. I saw Peterson's ad in the paper, I used one box and a half of Peterson's Ointment for itching piles and the piles disappeared, also the high blood pressure."

It soothes a burn as all druggists.

NORWICH TOWN

Troop, No. 20, Boy Scouts of America, Frederic H. Wyant, scout master, will hold a meeting this (Friday) evening in the First Congregational chapel.

The scout committee with the scout master, held a special meeting Wednesday evening in the chapel, when the welfare of the scouts was generally discussed.

It was decided to hold three entertainments if possible in the future to aid in furthering the good work of this troop, which was only organized a few weeks ago, since which the boys have shown much interest and have never filed to respond when called upon, under the guidance of their faithful and energetic leader.

This alone has been proven in the forest fires they have participated in; and several of the boys did good work in calling at various homes in Norwich Town, Wednesday afternoon collecting bundles and conveying them to the chapel for Near East bundle day which fell on Thursday. In this call the following scouts responded: Peter Manning, John Dodge, Walter Haun and Charles Spicer.

During scout inspection at the State Armory a few weeks ago, of the 20 troops in Norwich, the Norwich Town troop ranked fourth, which was an excellent showing for a troop that was organized so recently.

At the meeting on Wednesday evening, the committee was most enthusiastic in its support of the scout master in formulating prospective plans for the interests of the troop.

Besides Scoutmaster Wyant, those present comprising the scout committee were: Thomas H. Bachelor, chairman; Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey; Harold D. Larrabee, also Henry T. Frazier.

The Dorcas Home Missionary society of the First Methodist Episcopal church was entertained Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. George Manning, of Yantic, following out a custom which has prevailed for a number of years, it being the closing meeting of the season.

The president, Mrs. James B. Aldrich presided over the meeting and read the Scripture lesson. Prayer was offered by the church pastor, Rev. Mr. Aldrich.

A very interesting patriotic program in observance of Flag Day was given which included sketches about the different flags, singing and readings.

Mrs. William E. Manning delighted with a reading entitled The Whistling Regiment, and for an encore, What Is An Anthem? During the business session this being the annual meeting the following were reelected to office: President, Mrs. James B. Aldrich; vice president, Mrs. Albert G. Miner; secretary, Mrs. Stanton W. Brown; treasurer, Mrs. George Manning.

At the close, Mrs. Manning served delicious ice-cream and cake.

There were eight members and six visitors present, who before leaving visited the grounds of Mrs. Manning's home and enjoyed her beautiful flowers. The singing of America closed a very pleasant afternoon for those present.

Rev. A. N. Foster, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd (Universalist) will be the officiating clergyman at the Sheltering Arms service, Sunday afternoon. He will be accompanied by his church choir.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Strong of Town street, motored to Middletown on Thursday. This (Friday) afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Strong will visit Colchester and attend the fair to be given at the First Congregational church there.

CITY SETTLES SUIT FOR BURNAP'S SALARY

Edwin L. Burnap's suit against the city of Norwich for his salary for a year during which he was illegally ousted from his position as superintendent of the water department in July, 1918, was settled without trial in the superior court here Thursday. The case had been assigned for trial but Attorney John H. Barnes for Mr. Burnap and Corporation Counsel W. H. Shields for the city reached a settlement without trial by the city agreeing to pay $1,900, which is the full amount of the claim with interest for three years.

This ends a long litigation in the case which followed the water board's action by ousting Mr. Burnap by abolishing the office of superintendent. He brought suit which was heard before Judge Reed as referee, who ordered him restored to his position. The city took an appeal to the supreme court but lost its case there, when the superior court found no error in Judge Reed's decision. Thereupon Mr. Burnap pushed his case to collect the salary claimed.

"Select" because:

a. The Company's products are patented and trade-marked. The "Fiskeware" brick and "Tapestry" brick are universally known to architects and builders.

b. The company's products are lifted out of the competitive class of brick, into the quality group. The demand comes from a wide territory, for high-grade buildings of all types.

c. Competition is therefore not of the destructive type. With building permits for March, 1923, breaking all records, the Company expects a continuation of this unusual business.

d. The past history of the Company, its efficient management, present element and future prospects, make this a conservative investment.

SUIT AGAINST ENDORSERS OF NOTE FOR $6,000

Before Judge George E. Hinman in the superior court here Thursday afternoon, the trial was started in the case of Guiseppi Contino against John Turello and Thomas Ragonese, all of New London, to collect a note for $6,000.

The plaintiff claims that on May 4 1921 Giosue Duca and Augustine Di Keto made a note to him for $6,000, payable in one year, and that it was indorsed in blank by the defendants before the makers delivered it to the plaintiff. It has not been paid and he asks $8,000 damages.

The defendant's answer is that the note was signed by them only as accommodation endorsers and without receiving value therefrom; also that the note was accepted by the plaintiff in the sum of $6,000 whereas the amount loaned was only $4,950 and that to evade and in violation of the provisions of sections 4793 and 4799 of the general statutes.

The plaintiff was the only witness Thursday, giving his testimony through Ralph Harris, an Italian interpreter.

Attorney Frank L. McGuire appeared for the plaintiff and P. Z. Hankey for the defendants.

Chapman sues for $50,000 damages and to have a large tract of real estate at Sound View, Old Lyme, reconveyed to him and for a certain contract and certificates of stock in the Coast Line Realty Co. cancelled and set aside.

ELKS' FLAG DAY SPEAKER CALLS FOR PATRIOTIC CITIZENSHIP IDEALS

A call for a patriotic citizenship in America, which should pay its debt to the past by doing something for the future in the present, was emphasized by Philip Troup, editor of the New Haven Union, who made the address Thursday evening at the Flag Day exercises conducted by Norwich lodge of Elks, No. 430. He is an optimist on America, he said, and nothing but ourselves can prevent us from being the greatest nation and doing the greatest things in all history, but we shall be no exception to the rule that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

The exercises were held at the rear of the Elks' home on Main street, beginning at 7 o'clock with a finely rendered concert by Swahn's band, which played from a stage erected at the rear of the building.

Mayor Milo R. Waters and members of the common council were guests of the lodge by invitation and were seated with the officers of the lodge on the platform as Exalted Ruler Arthur F. Campbell opened the speaking part of the programme with a brief statement of the significance of the observance of Flag Day by the Elks, who are distinctly a patriotic order.

Mrs. Robert Townsend, for whom Hugh Kinder was accompanist, was heard in a solo, The Flag That Makes Us One (Coerne), singing very effectively in a sweet voice that carried well over her audience outdoors, and was greeted with a burst of applause.

The History of the Flag was given by Jeremiah A. Desmond and was followed by the baritone solo, Flag of Freedom, by Hugh Kinder who was in splendid voice and sang with patriotic feeling which his audience recognized with applause. Miss Cecile Stevens was the accompanist.

For the Flag Day address, Exalted Ruler Campbell presented Mr. Troup, who introduced his subject by saying that it seemed as if the American people at the present time do not like to listen to serious discourses. It is a question whether we are not becoming an amusement loving rather than a serious minded people. Rome fell when its citizens deserted the forum and flocked to the coliseum and the amphitheatre and it is written in history that nations have been destroyed by weakness from within rather than by foes from without.

The country is ours and we can make our government exactly what we want to make it. The flag of which we are so proud will symbolize exactly what we are. As the poet has expressed the voice of the flag, "Remember what ye owe to me, I am your bade of liberty, and I no greater thing can be than your deeds make me."

Speaking of participation in politics, which he said are the means and method by which we rule the state, Mr. Troup declared that any one who keeps aloof cannot be a real patriotic citizen today and he was glad that the women are voting in politics. We have got to have more thought and consideration to the problem that confronts us today and upon which our destiny and the destiny of the world depends. In everything that is done to make better citizens, the better will America be defended. Patriotism means an enlightened citizenship and on this Flag Day we should dedicate ourselves to pay the debt that we owe the past to the upbuilding of the country that we want to pass on to our children and our children's children.

The exercises closed with the singing of America with accompaniment by the orchestra.

FATHER BELLEROSE COMPLETES 25 YEARS IN PRIESTHOOD

On Thursday Rev. E. O. Bellerose, pastor of the Sacred Heart church at Taftville, observed the 25th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. The event was observed by a special high mass at 9 o'clock, attended by all the school children registered at the Sacred Heart school. Father Bellerose is deeply loved and revered not only by the people of his parish but by all the residents of the town, regardless of creed.

Father Bellerose is the son of Frederick and Ceserie (Andair) Bellerose, both his parents having been born at St. Ceasire, province of Quebec, Canada. In 1880 they came to the United States and located at Grosvenordale, where Mr. Bellerose soon established himself as a general blacksmith, becoming successful in his chosen line.

Father Bellerose was born in North Grosvenordale on Dec. 7, 1873. He received his early education in the parochial schools of that town, then for his classical education went to the College of St. Hyacinthe, province of Quebec, Canada, from which institution he was graduated in January, 1893, with the degree of bachelor of letters. He studied philosophy from 1893 to 1895 at St. John's seminary in Boston. Thereafter he entered St. Mary's seminary at Baltimore, Md., where he was ordained a priest of the Roman Catholic church on June 14, 1898, with the degree of S. T. L.

In that year Father Bellerose was appointed assistant pastor of St. Patrick's church in Norwich. He was most devoted in his work in this parish and won the deepest regard of the people. After four years he was appointed assistant pastor of the Sacred Heart church in Taftville, again serving most acceptably, and giving great promise of the future. In 1906 he was appointed pastor of the church at Wauregan, where he remained until 1910, and here in 1908 he built a parochial school. In 1910 he was appointed to the church of St. Mary in Baltic, where he served for four years, building in 1912 a new church for that parish.

In 1915 the bishop of Hartford appointed Father Bellerose pastor of the Sacred Heart church at Taftville, and the parish is still under his charge. Here he built a new church and since his appointment to this field Father Bellerose has built up the church both materially and spiritually. His assiduous and unselfish devotion to duty is a noble example, and the people of the village have learned to love and honor him. He is always cognizant of his responsibility to the community at large and his most earnest endeavor is to make his church a living force for progress.

Father Bellerose is an influential member of Ponemah council, No. 14, K. of C., and is a fourth degree knight in this order. He is also a member of St. Mary's alumni of Baltimore, Md., and was a member of the committee that organized the Taftville chapter, American Red Cross.

$10,000 ALIMONY IN NEW LONDON DIVORCE

Divorces with $10,000 in alimony by stipulation was granted by Judge George E. Hinman in the superior court here Thursday afternoon to Elizabeth Dickson Bailey of New London from Ernest A. Bailey of the same place. The couple was married Oct. 15, 1919 and the allegations into the complaint were intolerable cruelty since Oct. 1, 1922 and adultery at New London between Oct. 1, 1921 and Oct. 1, 1923 with Mary Tabor. The divorce was granted on the latter ground as alleged. Witnesses for the petitioner were Lulu M. Smith, Ellen P. Auld and Katherine C. Cully. An exhibit in the case was a certified death certificate from Fargo, North Dakota, which showed the death there on Nov. 1, 1922 in childbirth of Mary E. PARAMOUNT PROBLEMS OF PROHIBITION PERPLEXITIES

Canadian Officials Proclaim Inability to Assist the United States in Checking the Flow of Liquor Into Michigan, as Shipping of Liquor is Legal Under Dominion and Provincial Laws—87 Cases of Liquor Thrown Overboard From the Steamer George Washington Just Outside the Three Mile Limit—Committee For Law Enforcement Requests Gov. Smith to Reconvene Legislature to Pass a Prohibition Enforcement Measure That Would "Put New York in Line With Other Law-Abiding States".

Windsor, Ont., June 15.—Canadian officials today informed E. C. Yellowley, chief of American prohibition enforcement agents, after a brief conference, that they could give little assistance to the United States in checking the flow of liquor into Michigan, because shipping of liquor was legal under dominion and provincial laws.

NO SPECIAL SESSION OF CONGRESS ON SHIP LIQUOR

Washington, June 15.—Speculation as to the possibility that a special session of congress might be called to deal with the ship liquor situation through amendment of the Volstead act was set at rest definitely today at the White House. It was said that President Harding had no such plan in mind.

There were nothing to indicate, however that administration officials are attempting as yet to formulate plans based upon the assumption that the American reciprocal treaty proposed will be accepted abroad.

It is understood that state department suggestions have favored a rather simple form of declaration upon each of the points in the proposed treaties. It remains to be seen whether any of the European powers would be satisfied with this method, even if they were prepared to reach an agreement granting concessions on both sides for the specific purposes sought. Undoubtedly no maritime power would commit itself to any language that it regarded as in the least ambiguous in setting up the rigid limitations under which alone an extension of the right of search could be permitted.

WOULD HAVE NEW YORK LEGISLATURE RECONVENED

New York, June 15.—The [illegible] committee of one hundred for law enforcement, claiming to represent 10,000,000 women, today telegraphed Governor Smith, asking him to reconvene the legislature to pass a prohibition enforcement measure that would "put New York in line with other law-abiding states."

The committee, which suggested that all women pray that Governor Smith might "see his duty," also adopted a resolution calling for greater activity against the rum fleet and more severe penalties for bootleggers.

The meeting was not open to the press, but a statement issued at its close stated that a campaign for greater enforcement of the Volstead act would end on election eve of 1924 with "grand marches of allegiance" in all large cities.

Miss Mary Anderson, head of the women's bureau of the department of labor in Washington, declared that the committee was not discouraged in regard to prohibition enforcement. A long period of agitation must be gone through, she said, but added that there was no doubt of ultimate success.

An illustration of the progress already made under the Volstead act, Miss Anderson, who comes from Chicago, said that five years ago the alleys of that city were full of women rushing beer cans, while today the some women are taking care of their children, and leading infinitely more happy lives.

Mrs. Edwin Franklin White, deputy attorney general of Indiana, was elected chairman of the committee; Mrs. A. Henry W. Peabody, of Boston, chairman of the executive committee; and Mrs. Frank Gaylor Cook, also of Boston, treasurer.

WISCONSIN HOUSE REPEALS PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

Madison, Wis., June 15 (By the A. P.)—The Tucker bill providing for repeal of the Severson prohibition enforcement law in Wisconsin was finally passed by the assembly today 49 to 35. This measure now goes to the "dry senate," where indefinite postponement is anticipated by both those opposing prohibition enforcement and those favoring.

87 CASES OF LIQUOR JETTISONED JUST OUTSIDE THREE MILE LIMIT

New York, June 15.—When the steamship George Washington arrived today from Europe, an officer stated that 87 cases of liquor had been thrown overboard just outside the three mile limit, in accordance with the treasury department ruling prohibiting the bringing of liquor into American ports. Officials of the United States line made a vigorous denial, stating that none of their ships carried liquor except as required by law for medicinal [illegible]

HOW MOVIES WERE UNDER CONTROL OF CORPORATION

New York, June 15.—Disclosure of a $5,000 "consolidation fund" gift by Adolph Zukor, president of the famous Players-Lasky Corporation, to a New [illegible] widow who has been forced out of business by one of the subsidiaries of his concern, was made today at the federal trade commission's investigation of charges that the corporation and six other companies constitute a trust.

This evidence was given by Sidney Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who said that the Black New England Film Enterprise, allied with Zukor's corporation, had sought through intimidation to force small independent exhibitors either to buy their product or close down.

Among the numerous complaints reaching his office, Cohen said, was one from Mrs. Pauline Dodge, a widow of Morrisville, Vt., who said she had been forced by Black to relinquish her lease of a theatre. Investigation, he said, showed that Black had used unfair tactics, and after a vigorous complaint, Zukor sent $5,000.

Houghton, Stamford, Conn.

On Sunday Professor James R. Angell will deliver his second baccalaureate sermon, saying at that time his farewell to the graduating class. A meeting of the friends of Yale in China will be held in the evening and will be addressed by D. Brewer Eddy, '98, associate secretary, home department of the American Board of Foreign Missions, and Brownell Gage '98, head of the academic department of Yale in China.

Monday and Tuesday will be given over to ameting of the alumni advisory board, and the election of a member of the corporation to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of John V. Farwell, '79, Chicago and to other alumni activities. Commencement day will be Wednesday.

NO LEGITIMATE DEALINGS IN LOW CLASS SECURITIES

New York, June 15.—William S. Silkworth, president of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, testified today before Referee Coffin in the bankruptcy hearing of S. S. Ruskay and Company, that no broker dealing exclusively in low class securities could do business legitimately.

"He simply has to bucket," he said.

Silkworth gave this testimony when questioned as to why it was sometimes necessary for funds to be raised to assist brokerage houses.

Mr. Silkworth stated that more than 90 per cent of those who trade in Wall street lose money. As a result, he said, more than 90 per cent of the money deposited with brokers by persons who trade, but do not invest, is never called for, and a brokerage house or a bucket shop can operate safely in ordinary circumstances with only a sufficient daily cash reserve to meet the fay day to day demands.

COLLEGE MEN REGISTER FOR Y. M. C. A. CONFERENCES

Lake Geneva, Wis., June 15.—Nearly 800 college men from a dozen midwestern states registered today for the fortieth annual ten days' Y. M. C. A. conference which is being held here. The total registration is expected to exceed 1,000.

Officials said the objects of the conference are fourfold: To present the claims of Jesus Christ on the college man, to present the campus and world needs for the works of God, to help each man determine his life work, and to increase the efficiency of Christian services in colleges by a detailed study of association methods.

Woman's love for dry goods has broken up almost as many homes as a man's love for wet goods.

Two Daring Payroll Robberies in New York

Also Theft of Truck Laden With Silk Across River in New Jersey.

New York, June 15.—Two daring payroll robberies in New York and the theft of a richly laden silk truck across the river in New Jersey, after its crew had been kidnapped, tonight occupied the minds of police in the metropolitan area.

The day's spectacular crimes started when six armed men fell on a cashier of the Pullman company and his bodyguard at Long Island City, felled the cashier, F. R. McGuire, with a blow from a clubbed pistol, and escaped with a $22,000 payroll.

An hour later, Joseph McGreevey, chauffeur for the Lyons Silk Dyeing company ont Passaic, driving a truckload of silk to New York, was stopped near Secaucus, compelled, with his helper, Hans Rath, to enter a taxicab from which five bandits had alighted, and driven guarded by two of the thieves. The other three bandits escaped from the truckload of silk.

One of the bandits, together with McGreevey and Rath, was wounded when they fled after a Weehawken policeman had stopped the taxicab.

This afternoon, Miss Jean Greenburg, cashier for Abraham Melnick, mirror manufacturer, was robbed of a $382 payroll in the Lower East Side, as she walked from a bank to the firm's offices. She pursued the thief, who had snatched the envelope from beneath her arm, and her screams attracted a policeman, who halted the fugitive with a shot into the air. Miss Greenberg got her money back and the fugitive was locked up, listed as Charles Greenstein.

Resolutions having to do with radicalism, educational matters and the Ku Klux Klan were eliminated and did not come before the convention.

New York, June 15.—Marked improvement in the condition of Miss Anna Eilin, of Spring Valley, N. Y., was reported tonight from the ward in Bellevue hospital to which she was removed after having been exposed to X-rays of 250,000 voltage for 56 hours in an effort to effect a cure for abdominal cancer.

Dr. I. Seth Hirsch, director of the Bellevue X-ray laboratory, said he was highly pleased with the result of his experiment, which, he asserted, was the first anti-cancer atempt in which a patient had been subjected to so high a voltage for so long a time. Effectiveness of the experiment, he added, could not be determined in less than several weeks.

$400,000,000 DAMAGE BY FOREST FIRES IN NEW BRUNSWICK

Fredericton, N. B., June 15.—Lumbermen estimated today that forest fires in New Brunswick have caused not less than $4,000,000 damage. The flames have swept over an area of 250 square miles during the past two weeks.

The damage estimate was based upon an average of $16 an acre on approximately 160,000 acres. In addition to this, which includes only the value of the timber on the land, many mills, houses, stables and various other buildings as well as several bridges have been destroyed.

VERDICT FOR MRS. CROKER IN WILL CONTEST CASE

Dublin, June 15.—(By The A. P.)—The prolonged trial of the Croker will contest case came to an end today with a verdict in favor of Mrs. Richard Croker on all the points contested by the children of her late husband.

The announcement of the jury evoked a noisy demonstration in the courtroom, there being cheering and handclapping on the part of the auditors which brought censure from the presiding judge. The sympathy of the populace for Mrs. Croker again was evidenced by loud cheering as she left the courtroom.

Chief Justice Maloney ruled that the verdict carried with it the assessment of the costs of the trial against Richard Croker, Jr., and also against Mrs. Ethel C. White, daughter of the late Mr. Croker, as far as they were increased by her intervention in the suit.

It was considered that in his summing up the judge strongly favored Mrs. Croker's side of the case. In the final passages of his charge he referred to the weakness of the case as based on the charge of bigamy against Mrs. Croker with one Guy Marone. Marone, he declared, was a living man but had "faded away," although the newspapers had contained full announcements of the late Richard Croker's marriage to Bula Edmondson. No announcement has been bade of the lodgment of objections by counsel for the plaintiff to the judge's charge to the jury. Such lodgment usually is preliminary to a motion for a new trial of a couse on the ground of misdirection.

It had been admitted that when Mr. Croker died he had divested himself of all his property. Plaintiff's counsel in explaining this contended that the object of his client Richard Croker, Jr., was merely to vindicate his character.

GOVT RECEIVES INTEREST ON FOREIGN LOANS

Washington, June 15.—The treasury today received the first regular [illegible]-annual payments to be made by any foreign governments on principal and interest on loans made by the United States during the war. Great Britain and Finland, the former the largest debtor and the latter among the smallest, began the reduction of their obligations under recently negotiated settlements which aoffrd them sixty-two years to complete re-payment.

Great Britain's remittance, made in Liberty bonds purchased in the open market, amounted to $60,000,000. The Finnish payment, in cash, was $135,000.

NEGRO JAIL BREAKER CAPTURED IN WATERBURY

Waterbury, June 15.—Robert Mcry, alias "Doc" McCorry, 30, a negro, alleged automobile thief and jail breaker from the Florence county jail of South Carolina, was arrested here this afternoon. ARE CONTINUING EFFORTS TO "CLEAN UP" WALL STREET

Stock Exchange and Curb Market Have Adopted Resolutions Providing for the Expulsion or Suspension of Members Who Refuse to Disclose Their Business Records in Court —Are Considering Depriving the Consolidated Stock Exchange of Ticker Service on Quotations.

New York, June 15.—The New York stock exchange and the New York ourb market today took further steps in the many-sided campaign to "clean-up" Wall street, when they adopted resolutions providing for the expulsion or suspension of members who refuse on constitutional grounds to testify or disclose their business records in any civil or criminal procedure on the ground that to testify or disclose the records might "tend to degrade or incriminate" them.

It was on this plea that Edward M. Fuller and William F. McGee, New York's most notorious bucketers, stood during the long weeks that the authorities spent at referee's hearings, "flashing" for evidence against them and a reputed ring of "higher-ups" said to control most of the bucketshops where lambs are fleeced.

At the same time, Chairman H. K. Pomeroy of the stock exchange law committee, announced that the exchange was considering depriving the consolidated stock exchange, in which most of the recently failed brokerage houses, including E. M. Fuller and company held membership, of its ticker service on quotations. This, it was declared, would seriously handicap the Consolidated and leave it "trading in the dark." The Consolidated obtained an injunction 14 years ago to prevent the big board from withholding its quotations. Any effort to deprive it of the quotations now would mean a reopening of that old court fight.

Meanwhile, Fuller, who is believed to be in a better position than any man in New York to tell the authorities the "inside story" of bucketshopping, with details as to higher-ups and their system of operation, lay in Ludlow street jail with shattered nerves—too ill to indicate whether he has decided to make a clean breast in an effort to win clemency when he comes up for sentence for bucketing to which he has pleaded guilty. The authorities have little hope of obtaining any information from McGee, who pleaded guilty with Fuller. But from Fuller they are hoping to learn much.

The two men were to have been sentenced today, but action was postponed until Tuesday, owing to Fuller's condition—or at least that was the reason announced. A referee's hearing at which it was hoped Fuller would "come clean" was postponed until Monday.

United States Attorney Hayward, who recently examined Fuller at a secret night session, continued silent today as to the cause of the examination or the results he obtained from it. One report was that Fuller had been offered a chance to purge himself of contempt of the federal courts by making a clean breast of all he knows about Wall street.

WAITER LOST $60,000 TIPS TO STOCK SALESMEN

New York, June 15.—"Little Joe" Jacobs, who said he had saved $60,000 in his 18 year career as a waiter by hoarding the tips he collected in 6,670 consecutive 17-hour working days without a vacation or holiday, today applied to Magistrate Oberwager for a summons for Smith Wiegand, a stock salesman and one of his most liberal patrons.

Wiegand endeared himself to everyone about the restaurant where "Little Joe" worked by his magnificent tips and his fraternal air. Then, "Little Joe" told the court, he "let him in" on some good things in Wall street, in which Joe invested the whole $60,000.

Recently, when he tried to collect either money or stocks, he said, he was able to collect only promises.

FINAL STAGE OF GOV'T CASE IN THE MORSE TRIAL

Washington, June 15.—The government's case against Charles W. Morse, his three sons and four others charged with conspiracy to defraud the government on war-time ship contracts entered today upon its final phase. This has to do with the purchase and operation by Morse concerns of steamers built for the government at the Morse ship yards in Connecticut and Virginia.

Counsel for the government expect to rest by the end of next week or during the week following. How long the defense will be in submitting its evidence is undetermined, but it may not consume more than two weeks. It is prepared to call Attorney General Daugherty, William G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury Charles M. Schwab, former director general of the emergency fleet corporation and others of national prominence, also it will offer the affidavit of John Barton Payne, former chairman of the shipping board.

The single session of the court today was taken up with the reading of documentary evidence having to do with the acquisition and operation by the Morses of ships built for the government. These were read into the record a resolution of the directors of the United States Transport Company under which the law firm of McAdoo, Cotton and Franklin, of which the former treasury secretary was the senior member, was to have received something like $750,000 for negotiating contracts for the hauling of coal by Transport Company ships to France and Italy.

The French contracts called for the transportation of 444,000 tons at freight rates ranging from $21.50 to $23 a ton, and McAdoo, Cotton and Franklin were to receive $1 a ton on this contract. The Italian contract was for the use of six ships for one year and the law firm was to receive 75 cents a ton on all coal thus transported. How much McAdoo, Cotton and Franklin received did not appear from the evidence, but it is understood that only a portion of the coal was delivered to France and Italy.

SAYS RUSSIA IS COMING BACK AGRICULTURALLY

Moscow, June 15.—(By the A. P.)—That Russia is coming back agriculturally was the principal impression gained by U. S. Senator Brookhart of Iowa during his visit here, he declared today before leaving for Odessa on his way to Constantinople. The country is also being rejuvenated industrially, he judged after inspecting the well-equipped and well-operated cotton factories in Moscow.

"It is proof of the soviets' good faith," he said. "That, even when foreign nations have to feed some of the famine-stricken, they do not seize what grain the pleasants have managed to save and which is now going out of Russia as exports by the cooperatives. We have recognized lots worse Russian governments than this one."

FIVE CENTS AN HOUR WAGE RAISE FOR TROLLEYMEN

New Haven, June 15.—The Connecticut Company announced tonight that it would grant an increase of five cents an hour to its motormen and conductors in accordance with the result of a vote taken yesterday throughout the state in which the men authorized their representatives to sign a wage scale based on that increase. About 2,600 men are affected.

The referendum held yesterday resulted in a four to one vote by the men that they accept an increase of five cents an hour instead of permitting the question of wages to go to a board of arbitration. The offer of four cents an hour increase, made by the company previously, had been refused in an earlier referendum.

The company's statement tonight follows:

"The committee representing the men met Mr. J. K. Punderford, vice president and general manager, this afternoon and stated that by a majority vote the men had authorized the committee to sign up a wage scale for a year provided the company would grant a five cent an hour increase.

"Mr. Punderford stated that for a long term of years the company had always made its final proposition in its original offer but as the committee now had power to sign an agreement and to close the matter without further discussion, and in the hope that the company's action in granting the additional cent per hour would be appreciated and encourage the men to better efforts on behalf of the public and the company, it would grant the increase requested."

The new working agreement between the men and the company was signed last week and the granting of the increase requested by the men closes the negotiations concerning the annual contract which have been going on for the past two weeks.

STAMBOULISKY KILLED DURING ATTEMPT AT RESCUE

Sofia, Bulgaria, June 15.—(By the A. P.)—Alexander Stamboulisky, premier of Bulgaria from the time the peasant government was formed under his leadership in 1918 until he was overthrown last week by the Bulgarian army, was killed this morning in the village of Vetren, near his native town of Slavovitza. He was shot in the course of an attempt by a party of peasants to rescue him from guards who had captured him yesterday after a three days' pursuit.

Stamboulisky was brought from the village of Golak, where he was captured. He announced that he had important documents at his Slavovitza home and was permitted to set fer for Slavovitza in an automobile surrounded by guards. On the outskirts of the village a party of peasants blocked the road.

Under the fire of the peasants the guards abandoned Stamboulisky and the peasants proceeded to escort him toward the village. En route a band of soldiers attacked the peasants with rifle fire. It was during the short stiff fighting which followed that Stamboulisky was shot—virtually on the threshold of his birthplace.

Raised Biscuits

1½ lbs. (5 cups) John Alden Flour,
1 cake yeast,
1½ level teaspoons salt,
¼ cup sugar,
¼ cup shortening,
1½ cups milk or water.

Dissolve the yeast and sugar in the liquid. The liquid should not be cold nor hot, but about room temperature (80°) when the yeast is added. To get the best results the mixture should be about 80° throughout the process. When the yeast is dissolved, add the salt, one half the flour, the melted fat and then the rest of the flour. Knead for about five minutes. Put in a greased bowl and grease the top. Cover, and leave in a warm place or in a pan of warm water until it has risen to double its bulk. This will take two or three hours, according to temperature. Knead again and let it rise until it is 1½ times its original size.

Shape into round balls with the hands. Brush over the top with melted butter. Allow them to rise once more in a greased pan. This time they should double in bulk. Bake in a hot oven (425° F).

Rupert Hughes' Greatest Picture Coming to Broadway Theatre.

Rupert Hughes has never been more dramatic in the picturing of a story than in his newest Goldwyn film, Souls for Sale, which is coming to the Broadway theatre tomorrow for four days, although his hand has by no means lost its cunning in the depiction of the comedy and the little realistic touches of ordinary life which make the whole world kin.

While Souls for Sale is basically a story of motion picture players and the making of photoplays, it tells one of those stories of every-day people and their reactions to life and to each other which have given Mr. Hughes his standing and his reputation both as novelist and as motion picture author-director.

Mr. Hughes was given a cast of players which is second to none which has ever appeared in any Goldwyn picture. Chief interest will, perhaps, center in Eleanor Boardman who portrays the leading role. In the brief space of a year, this actress has risen from film extra to star. Her beauty and magnetic charm have had but little to do with this sudden rise to fame. It was her excellent work in "Cinema," The Strangers' Banquet and Vanity Fair which won for her the leading role in Souls for Sale and a long term contract with Goldwyn. Five other important roles in the film are acted by capable and experienced players, Mae Busch, Barbara La Marr, Frank Mayo, Richard Dix, and Lew Cody. There is a score more acters in the cast, majority of whom are known to the film fans.

The production is on a big scale, rising to the spectacular climax in the burning of the great circus. The photography by John Mescall is far beyond the ordinary and is a feast of delight to the eye.

Larry Semon has prepared another of his sensational comedies which have proven so popular of late. This time he represents the counter jumper and the things he does in the trading past are sure to keep the average audience in laughter for two reels. The picture is called The Counter Jumper. This attraction and a news concludes the program.

Big Sparks Circus Coming Soon.

An unparalleled aggregation of startling, beautiful, educating, amusing features is the Sparks Circus, which is coming to Norwich on Saturday, June 23. From year to year the great canvases of this modernized circus have grown bigger and bigger, the trains longer and longer until today all double length, all steel cars ranging as high as 6 feet in length are required to transport this great aggregation. There are a wonderful menagerie, a gorgeously dressed, spectacle, trained elephants, lions, tigers, leopards, polar bears, llamas and ostriches, marvelous riders, beautiful girls, handsome men, amazing clowns and the finest horses in the world; in fact a vast concourse of men and women, of trained animals and equipment unrivalled in their lines, guaranteed to give the most daring, interesting, artistic, startling performance ever seen here under canvas. And as a special feature the Sparks circus is this season presenting the famous Sparks Rotarian Horses—16 in number and recognized throughout the entire horse world of the universe as the world's greatest educated equine display. These horses are a recent importation from Spellinghen, Germany, and are making their first American appearance with the Sparks circus—which, by the way, will appeal to old and young; to the boy and girl who believe in animal worship; to the woman who has an eye for the artistic; to the man who won't allow his heart to grow old; in fact to everyone the Sparks circus is the fulfillment of a dream, for it is the very last word in Circus glory.

Seats can be secured circus day at John F. Mirch, 16 Broadway, same price as at show grounds. The Sparks circus will exhibit on the fair grounds.

FRANKIE BUSCH WINS FROM KETCHELL IN CHARITY BOUT AT DANIELSON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Danielson, June 15.—A lot of things not on the card featured the boxing exhibition at the town hall Friday evening. Three of the bouts were of such brevity as to surprise the big crowd. Two bouts ended with knockouts, and another, that between Steve Ketchell of Providence and Frankie Busch of Norwich, was terminated in the second round when Referee Jack Conway of Hartford disqualified Ketchell and raised Buschs arm as the winner. This created such a turmoil that Boxing Commissioner Murphy of Hartford later explained to the crowd that Ketchell had used insulting remarks to the referee. This explanation did not go well with the crowd, however, for they were of the opinion that Busch had fouled Ketchell three times by hitting low, the first time in the first round when he doubled Ketchell up with a blow in the groin. It is not probable that Busch intentionally fouled Ketchell but the crowd saw what happened and were not surprised that Ketchell became angry and evidently lost his head to the extent of using abusive language to the referee when he did not get the protection to which he felt he was entitled. Stopping of this bout was a great disappointment to the crowd, as it was sensationally fast and easily the best of the evening while it lasted. The referee was subjected to a storm of hissing and booing, but his decision stood.

The star bout of the evening, between Sammy Leonard of Fitchburg and Bobby Mayes of New Bedford, scheduled to go 12 rounds, ended in the seventh when Leonards seconds tossed a sponge into the ring. Mayes had the best of this bout all the way with longer reach giving him a decided advantage over Leonard, who put up a game battle.

In the semi-final between K. O. Dinsdale of North Scituate vs. Bobby Kelly of Waterbury, Kelly put Dinsdale down for the count after one minute and forty seconds in the first round. Kelly, an old timer, knew altogether too much for Dinsdale.

In the preliminary Young Bernier of Danielson lasted through a part of a second round of what was scheduled to be a six round go with Tony Bruso of Norwich. Bruso weighed 126 against Berniers 120 and outclassed the Danielson fighter, who was less experienced. Bernier took the count in the second round.

The bouts were for the benefit of the nurses' home fund of the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam and will net several hundred dollars. A collection taken up among the crowd for the fund brought $100.91. It was announced that the most generous gifts came from Alex Pasnik of Norwich, who tossed $11 into the hat, and $10 from Frank Barber of Danielson.

REDS MAKE IT EIGHT IN A ROW

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 15—The Reds extended their winning streak to eight consecutive games today by taking the third straight from the champion Giants 3 to 0. Luque pitched in great form registering his second shutout against the champions this season and winning his eighth game out of nine starts. Roush won the game in the fifth on his three-bagger and a fine piece of base running in scoring on an out at first. It was McQuillan's second defeat here in three days, who has been out of the game for a month with a broken hand, pitched the last two innings and was hit hard in the eighth. The start of the game was delayed for more than an hour by rain and the contest was decided on a muddy field with both teams playing excellent ball. The score:

SMITH HAS SIGNED ON THE PHILLIES

Philadelphia, June 15—Sherrod Smith former Brooklyn southpaw, held the Philadelphia team helpless today and enabled Cleveland to even the series. The score was 4 to 1.

The home team was blanked until the final inning when Hauser tripled and scored on an infield out. In the sixth, after two were out, the visitors pounded Harris for three runs which were coupled with two passes and resulted in three runs being scored.

The defeat sends the Athletics further away from the Yankees and leaves Cleveland but one game from second place. Score:

TWO WORLD'S RECORDS EQUALLED AT INSURANCE MEET

Newark, N. J., June 15.—Two world's records were equalled at the annual Prudential Insurance company field and track meet at Weequahic park this afternoon. Carl Christiersen, Newark A. C., ran the 100 yard hurdles in 13 1-5, equalling the record made by Herbert Myers, Rutgers, early this season.

Miss Babe Wolbert of the Prudential covered the 70 yard dash in 8 4-5 seconds, equalling the time made by Miss Marion McCartie at an indoor meet in New York last winter.

BIG CROWD EXPECTED AT GAME SUNDAY

That Sunday will be the banner event of the baseball season is manifest by the keen interest that is being taken in the Submarine Base-Norwich game at the Fairgrounds Sunday afternoon. Outside of the Taftville-Kacey series last season, there has not been a game here that has interested the baseball public the way the coming conflict has, and a record crowd is expected at the game on Sunday.

Both teams are evenly matched with the odds being in favor of the sailors as they have been working together all season. The local club as it takes the field on Sunday will be much stronger than a week ago and with Chipple Gaw in the box will be fully able to take care of the Flotilla team.

Chipple is capable of pitching a whale of a game, as was demonstrated last year against Taftville, and he promises to show all his stuff here on Sunday. Murphy will do the backstop work, which will round a real battery.

The Base will work Davis against Gaw as their best bet and the sailors are coming up strong to back their team.

DODGERS BEAT CUBS IN EXTRA INNING GAME

Chicago, June 15—Chicago's defense broke down behind Alexander, and Brooklyn after tying the count in the 9th inning, continued the attack in the 11th and won 9 to 7. Three errors by Friberg and Grantham and four singles netted three runs. The score:

YANKS TAKE EASY GAME FROM BROWNS

New York, June 15—Herb Pennock easily held the St. Louis Browns in check today and the New York Yankees scored an easy victory in the third game of the series, 10 to 0. Nine runs were scored off Van Gilder in the first two innings, six in the second with the aid of but two hits. Catcher Collins of the Browns was accidentally spiked over the right eye in the first inning by Ward, who was trying to stretch his triple into a homer after clearing the bases. Collins was rendered unconscious and obliged to retire. Earlier in the week, St. Louis' first string backstop, Severeid, was forced out of the lineup after being hit by a ball pitched by Walter Johnson of Washington. The score:

SNOVER PITCHES GOOD BALL AND PITTSFIELD WINS

Springfield, Mass., June 15—Springfield lost its third straight game when Pittsfield won by a six to two score here today. Springfield's only runs came on homers by Walter Simpson, giving him 13 for the season, and the lead in the Eastern league. Snover was steady and effective throughout. HAGEN LOSES BRITISH GOLF TITLE AFTER HARD BATTLE WITH HAVERS

Troon, June 15—(By the A. P.)—Arthur Gladstone Havers, a young English professional who has played golf ever since he was old enough to hold a club, today won the British open championship of 1923 by a margin of one stroke over Walter Hagen, who came from the United States to defend the title he captured one year ago at Sandwich.

Through the sound and sturdy efforts of Havers Great Britain has won back its own cup from the Americans, who had held it for two successive years. Playing every round of the 72 holes with remarkable steadiness Havers amassed a grand total of only 295 strokes, five less than Hagen made to win the trophy last year. Hagen ended his 72-hole battle today with 296 strokes recorded on his card.

Third place, as well as second place went to an American, MacDonald Smith of San Francisco having a score of 297, including a 69 this morning that broke the record for the Troon curse. Joe Kirkwood, the Australian who now makes his home in the United States, came in fourth with 298 strokes, he also getting a 69 during the day. Johnny Farrell, of New York, was in eighth position with a card of 306. George Aulbach, the other American, was down the line with a 320.

The scores of the eight leaders for the 72-holes were as follows:

A. G. Havers	73	73	73	76	—295
Walter Hagen	76	71	74	75	—296
MacDonald Smith	80	78	69	75	—297
Joe Kirkwood	72	79	69	78	—298
T. R. Fernie	73	78	74	75	—300
C. A. Wiloombe	70	76	74	82	—302
George Duncan	79	75	74	74	—302
Johnny Farrell	79	78	75	79	—306

Between 10,000 and 15,000 spectators, many of them from lands over the seas, watched the last two rounds of the competition. Fully two thirds of them kept their eyes on Hagen in the last hour of his gallant struggle to overtake Havers, who was leading him by two strokes when they went out after lunch for the last eighteen holes.

BIG AQUATIC MEET AT ASHLAND JULY 4

Hal Chase of the Ashland club of Jewett City is arranging a big water meet for July 4, to be held in the Ashland reservoir. This stream is particularly adapted for a meet of this kind, as there are natural grandstands to handle a big crowd of people and is easily accessible by automobile.

In the past two years the water meets as staged here have proven very popular with both old and young, over a thousand people being on hand to witness the events last year.

On the strength of the enthusiasm shown in the past, Hal is going to promote the biggest event of its kind ever staged in the state. Six racing shells have been added to the club's equipment since last year and the crews are working out daily, with the result that some real good oarsmen are being developed. In the swimming races, some of the best aquatic stars in this part of the state have already entered. The diving events, always a big number, will be even better this year as the new raft now under construction will afford better facilities for this particular part of the program. With the entries already received for this event the fans are assured of some real thrills, as some of the entries are capable of competing in any company, and with the addition of the 14-foot tower they will be given a chance to pull off some hair-raising acrobatic diving.

As a special added attraction the Mathiew twins, without doubt the best aquatic attraction in the state, have been secured to give an exhibition.

These girls have competed in the principal water meets held in New England for the past few years, and the lovers of water sports are indeed fortunate that their services were obtainable for this meet as they are always in big demand. They include in their act swimming and diving with hands and feet shackled, and fancy diving stunts that are out of the ordinary. They will be accompanied by their instructor, Frank De Weicor, who will also give an exhibition. Mr. De Weicor is swimming instructor for the Ormond hotel at Ormond, Fla.

A band will furnish the music during the program and there will be a fireworks display in the evening.

Entries for the events close on July 1st, and the prizes which will be given will be on exhibit in one of the Jewett City busines men's windows.

MISS STERLING EASILY HOLDS HER GOLF TITLE

Rye, N. Y., June 15—Miss Alexa Stirling, of North Hempstead, former national champion, successfully defended her metropolitan women's golf title today, overwhelming Mrs. G. M. Heckscher, of Piping Rock, by a score of 11 up and 9 to go in the 36-hole final match at the Westchester-Biltmore Country club.

Miss Stirling played the most brilliant golf she has displayed since surrendering her national crown two years ago to Marion Hollins. She was seven up on Mrs. Heckscher after the morning round of 18 holes, scoring a fine 80, but flashed her most spectacular form in the afternoon round, ending the match on the 37th green after negotiating the outgoing nine holes in par figures, 36. She lost the first two holes of the afternoon session to her opponent but took six out of the next seven to clinch the contest.

Miss Stirling's concluding shot was a 50-foot putt on the 350-yard 9th hole, which she sank for a birdie three. In the morning round she missed by six inches an "ace" on the 150-yard fourth, sinking her short putt for another birdie. In the face of such golf, her opponent was outclassed from the start and never was able to threaten the former Atlantic girl's lead.

FLYWEIGHTS IN GREAT CONDITION FOR BOUT

New York, June 15.—Declaring themselves as fit as the proverbial fiddle, Jimmy Wilde, of England, and Pancho Villa, of the Philippines who will meet Monday night at the Polo Grounds in a 15-round match for Wilde's crown as world's flyweight king, wound up their training siege today. Both plan only light exercises from now until the fight to keep in trim. Wilde tipped the beam today at 110 and Villa at 109, well under the 112-pound flyweight limit.

Villa will enter the battle with the hopes of all Filipinos pinned on him. Today he received a larger number of cablegrams from prominent island officials and residents, including one signed by President Quezon of the Philippine senate and by President Roxas of the assembly. Another was from his bride, whom he married but a few days before embarking on a ring career in the United States last year.

"SERGEANT MURPHY" ARRIVES IN THIS COUNTRY

New York, June 15.—Stephen Sanford, Jr., of Amsterdam, N. Y., whose 13 year old horse, "Sergeant Murphy," won the great National steeplechase at Liverpool last March, arrived today on the Mauretania with the victory prize of 9,700 pounds sterling and the trophy cup presented him with the personal congratulations of the King of England and the Prince of Wales.

"Sergeant Murphy," purchased for 3,500 pounds sterling while Sanford was a student of Cambridge, and now valued at $100,000 by his owner, was the first American-owned horse for 34 years to win premier honors at the Great National.

FIRPO-HIBBARD BOUT TO BE ONLY EXHIBITION

Mexico City, June 15.—The promoters of the bout between Luis Angel Firpo, Argentine heavyweight, and Jimm Hibbard of Buffalo, to be staged here Sunday, announced tonight that, because of the agitation against the contest, it would be held merely as an exhibition match.

Firpo arrived today from Havana and declared himself in good condition. The reported poor showing of Hibbard in his workouts here is responsible for the agitation against the fight.

Ashland Baseball Club Reorganizes.

At a meeting of the ball players who formerly played with the well known Ashland club of Jewett City, it was decided to reorganize and finish the season with a team of local players. Bill Liberty, who has been doing the catching for the past few years and who is regarded as the best backstop in this section, was the choice of the players for team manager, and he already has a team of likely looking youngsters lined up, and enough of the vets of the old team to make what looks like a strong combination.

Spike Liberty will do the pitching and when right he is the best twirler in eastern Connecticut.

The team tackles the J. B. Martin team of Taftville on the latter's grounds this coming Sunday, and is looking for the scalps of Baltic, Plainfield, Sterling and their old friends from Taftville.

Hal Chase was chosen as business manager and all communications should be addressed to him at Jewett City.

Baltic vs. Sterling.

Sterling will play Baltic Sunday, June 17th, at Sterling. As Baltic has strengthened its lineup considerably a good game is expected, and also a capacity crowd, as many wish to see the team that played such a brand of ball last Sunday.

MORIN TO PITCH AGAINST HARTFORD CLUB TODAY

The Taftville A. A. will play against the Hartford Greys on the Providence Street grounds on Saturday. The battery for the local team will be Morin and Belair, and for the Greys, Meyers, Maloney and Cleary. The Greys have been going strong so far this season but Manager Troland says he will put a halt in their stride.

ST. PATRICK'S TEAM WINS FROM ST. THOMAS FRESHMEN

The baseball team of St. Patrick's school went out of their class on Friday and won a hard fought game from the freshman team of St. Thomas Seminary at Hartford, by a score of 10 to 8. The local boys staged a thrilling ninth in rally which netted five runs noaing out the freshies by one run.

Couture who pitched for the local team had good control at all times although hard hit in the early innings. Marks featured in the field and at bat. The Saints are tied in the grammar school league and with this victory for encouragement should be able to come through with the pennant.

The boys were taken to Hartford in the automobiles of Frank A. Slak and James McGreevy. After the game the boys enjoyed a baked bean supper as guests of the seminary.

TILDEN MEETS ALONZO IN FINALS TODAY

Hartford, Conn., June 15.—William T. Tilden, of Philadelphia, national champion, and Manuel Alonzo, former champion of Spain, will meet tomorrow afternoon for the New England tennis championship in the final round of the tournament on the courts of the Hartford Golf Club. Tilden won his semi-final match with Frank T. Anderson, Columbia University captain, this afternoon, 6-2, 8-6, but Alonzo was forced into an extra set by H. H. Hyde, local player, who captured the second set, 7-5. His playing left him exhausted, however, and Alonzo won the third set easily. The score were 6-1, 5-7, 6-0. Hyde, in the tournament last year, won a set from Tilden in a semi-final round match.

Tilden and Alonzo and Hyde and Wiley will meet in the doubles finals.

POOR WATER CONDITIONS INTERFERE WITH PRACTICE

Gales Ferry, Conn., June 15—Poor water conditions this evening interfered somewhat with the practice of the Yale crews in training here. The varsity went three miles upstream and back stopping only long enough to turn. The combination crew went four miles downstream at a stroke of 24 and rowed back with the stroke lifted to 26.

The junior varsity went downstream half a mile and practiced starts, going upstream two miles later. The freshmen also practiced starts and then rowed about three miles.

CHILDREN IN STREETS.

When the motor vehicles department directs special attention to the three fatal automobile accidents in Hartford, all in one week, where children were the victims and urges the importance of keeping the children out of the streets there is certainly excellent reason for such action.

The streets are not as safe as they were in the days when the parents of the children of today were running about them, and whether it ought to be so or not the need of safeguarding the lives of the youngsters cannot be overlooked.

There are grave responsibilities which rest upon the automobilists in this respect. But it does not hold that the auto drivers are to blame in all instances. There are times when they are entirely blameless as the three Hartford cases show.

Highly dangerous is the practice which many children indulge in of jumping onto the back of auto trucks. Most every city has had cases where lives were crushed out through inside steps or by running in front of machines as they came from in back of another. The responsibility of treating children or older persons under such conditions can readily be seen. Every driver fears such a situation.

Much the same is the situation where children in playing dodge out into the street regardless of what may be coming, or of their duties as well as children in undertaking to cross the street from in back of a standing car, without taking the time to see whether others are coming.

There are highway dangers for children that are real. Till the proper efforts are made to prevent them it can be expected that there will be more deaths before there are fewer. It is none too soon for this to be thoroughly realized and to make the necessary effort to improve the street dangers upon the minds of the children that they may exert a greater effort in their own behalf for their protection.

FIGHTING BUCKETEERS.

What must be regarded as a satisfactory beginning in the prosecution of the bucketshop operators in New York city are those pleas of guilty which have been made by the heads of a former brokerage firm in that city, with the indications that they will aid the authorities in bringing to light the whole system under which such operations are carried on and those engaged therein.

Fleecing the investing public, as even those who are engaged in speculation, seems to be regarded by some as entirely legitimate. They endeavor to cover up their tracks and by one method or another get away with large sums of money, it being estimated that in the past two years that losses running up to $100,000,000 have been experienced in the past two years from the failure of bucketshops.

That the members of the firm now under prosecution were caught so securely that there was no way of twisting out of it is indicated by the pleas of guilty and the willingness to aid the prosecution in unearthing other cases. The disclosures have been of the utmost importance and the significance of the situation in the case against Fuller and McGee is that they are not the only ones against whom similar cases are pending.

It is plainly evident that even though these men have admitted their guilt that the bucketing situation cannot be ignored until more failures show up. It is a time to make the most of the advantage which the authorities have obtained. The others who are equally deep in the mire, whether they have managed to elude detection or not, should be brought into the light, and the fact set forth once and for all time that bucketshop activities are not being winked at and that the public is going to get the protection to which it is entitled. A start that gives promise of the desired results seems to have been made in this instance and it is time to see it through. The bucketeers cannot complain if they are treated as mercilessly as those they have bled.

THE NATION'S HOMICIDES.

One might suspect that the city of Memphis would dread the appearance of the annual report concerning homicides because of the fact that it stands and has stood the record for ahead of all others in the number of murders. It has shown some improvement but there are twice as many there in the course of the year than in any other city and more than ten times as many in proportion to population as in the city of New York. It is a record that does not reflect any credit upon Memphis when there is a murder record of 67.6 to each 100,000 of population, Southern cities averaging higher than northern ones for Nashville shows by the last figures 26.7 and New Orleans 21, while Boston has a rate of but 1.5 and New York 2.2 for each 100,000.

Naturally there should be a search for a method of bringing about a decided reduction in the number of for most would accomplish it is quite uncertain and yet it is being persistently urged that there should be federal legislation that would further restrict the possession of firearms. Basis for this is furnished by the fact that statistics show that five out of every seven murders in the last dozen years have been caused by firearms. Such an effort always brings the retort that it is folly to deny the householder the right to have a gun to defend his home while gunmen experience no diculty in getting all the firearms they require. That situation is of course due to the attempt of some states to enforce laws against revolvers while other states do not, and it is possible even to get by mail what cannot be purchased in the stores.

Murders are probably committed by revolvers because it is the easiest and quickest way, and yet it is not only the means used for ending life but the crime itself that calls for careful study. Perhaps if each and everyone who took the life of another was made to pay the penalty attached to such an act there would be a different homicide record in the country, and especially some sections of it.

STOWAWAYS AND DESERTERS.

Frequently of late have there been stories concerning stowaways who have attempted to get into the country or who have temporarily succeeded in getting a foot on shore. How eager some have been to enter the country is revealed by the great sacrifices they have made, one party of five having been suffocated or roasted to death because of the location in which they had secreted themselves.

The chances of the stowaways getting ashore from the ship on which they come are, however, much less than those taken by members of the crews of foreign vessels who sign and carry out their duties aboard ship until they reach a port in this country. Large numbers of such men have unquestionably entered without any obstruction whatever and without complying with the laws of the country.

Being members of the crews of foreign ships they are allowed to land. Ellis Island has nothing to do with them. Once ashore they are foot free. They have attained what they aimed at and as long as they can manage to escape detection they are at liberty to go where they please, even though they may be the worst of undesirables.

It is one of the situations that calls for careful consideration when it comes to the enforcement of our immigration laws. It is one of the loopholes which these unwilling to face Ellis Island or who object to be restrained because of the quota or other regulations have been quick to discover and make use of it. It seriously handicaps the ships from which they desert but it is a matter that is far more serious to this country in view of its immigration restrictions, the need of keeping out those who cannot meet requirements and the importance of proper enforcement.

FOREST FIRE LOSSES.

When forest fires cloud the atmosphere of cities hundreds of miles away, and when settlement after settlement is wiped out by the progress of the flames an impressive picture is given of the ravages of such fires and the destruction that is caused when no adequate means of controlling them are at hand.

Maine has been suffering heavy losses. Stores along the northern boundary in the middle west have likewise been feeling the harsh effects of visitations by fire. It is fortunate that a considerable part of the territory that has been burned over in Maine has been land where the woodchoppers had been and where little but second growth was destroyed, aside from the villages. It is not to be imagined that what has been consumed was worthless. Much valuable timber has been completely destroyed and it will require years to replace it. Villages that may never be rebuilt are gone. Dry conditions provided plenty of fodder for the flames.

What has taken place in Maine, and what occurs each spring and fall in too many of the wooded sections, discloses the need of all possible protection against the destructive forest fires. Once they get started under the right conditions there is no telling where they will end. Invariably there is an inadequate force and slight means of checking such fires.

The most valuable protection against fires of all kinds lies in prevention. It is impossible to neglect fire fighting apparatus and methods. They are invaluable in time of need but too much stress cannot be laid upon those slight efforts that can be made in behalf of prevention that will at times save great losses of life and property. Forest fire prevention because of the many possible causes is nevertheless no small problem.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

According to a usage which is now generally followed by our churches last Sunday, being the Second Sunday of June, was devoted to the Children's day exercises. One of the beautiful parts of this service is the large number of young parents who bring their little ones up to the altar to be formally dedicated to the service of God and His church. While most of the little ones will not have any distinct recollection of the service in years to come, surely their parents can never forget it and the solemn obligation to which it commits them. This alone would seem to justify Children's day. But it is also a day to be remembered by the older little tots who take part. Their little mannerisms and the rapid way in which they shoot through their short committed verses is a touch of humanism that is most delightful. The service is calculated to make them feel that they are a part of the institution, and may they never have any other feeling.

It is not the savage alone but those who claim—and very justly—some degree of civilization and culture who stand in awe of a severe thunder shower. And, strangely enough, we are most afraid of that part of it which is perfectly harmless, or, at least, which is the least harmful. We jump and grow pale in the face, i. e., some of us do, when the terrific crash comes, when it seems as though the house was going to crumble over our heads. But it is the beautiful, purple-tinted, noiseless flash of light that does the damage. As a general thing, the noisy things of life are not the most to be dreaded and avoided, because they herald their coming. It is the little germ so small as to require a microscope to detect it, that floats so silently in the air as to baffle both eye and ear, that is what we need to dread. The tornado and the rattlesnake tells us when they are near, but malaria and scarlet fever do not.

Is it, or is it not, socially important "that 90 per cent. of our leaders are college graduates?" This statement is made by one of our prominent sociologists. Considered as a fact in itself, I don't believe that it makes one iota's difference whether our leaders are largely provided from the ranks of college graduates, or from the non-graduates, provided they have the mental and moral equipment to be leaders of the right sort. But if it is a true finding of sociology that only university men do furnish the great majority of our leaders, then the following statement cannot be ignored: "If all those sections of the people (college graduates) continue to commit class suicide, intelligence and morality of a high order will rapidly become extinct." Statistics are certainly showing that this class averages 2.2 children per family. As this is 50 per cent. below normal, have we not a right to ask What of the future?

As these words are written the Shriners are returning from their limelight experiences at the national capital. No word better describes the sum total of their convention activities than the word "enthusiasm," from President Harding down to the obscurist layman. The mercury (according to all accounts) contributed its proportionate share of activity. Very likely the Shriner's mystic inheritance from the Orient, especially Arabia, the hottest spot on the globe, helped them wonderfully in standing up under the torrid heat. In many ways this convention was unparalleled, even in Washington, in the area of the country represented and in numbers attending. Pennsylvania avenue made a record in decorative splendor, and that is going some, and doubtless the men themselves impressed the capital with their beautiful uniforms. May it ever be a pleasing memory.

Nature is always at home in bringing sharp contrasts closely together at short notice and without much advertisement. The royal lily, the most luxuriant of flowers, grows rank and strong right on the edge of the barren desert. So also the delicate edelweiss grows out of the Alpine crags in the reign of eternal ice and snow. Do we not see just the same thing weatherwise when, within the space of 24 hours, we jump from ulsters into Palm Beach suits—and sometimes back again? To the rank and file of us this seems quite freakish and outside the pale of law, but quite the reverse, it is as much under the domination of law and order as the rotations of the planets in their orbits. Outwardly it seems as though something had gotten out of control, but as a matter of fact nature in all its branches is guided by a hand that never makes any mistakes.

Last week reference was made to June 15 as the day marking Franklin's discovery that electricity was identified with lightning. Important as that discovery was, it belongs to another June 15 to record a vastly more significant event as relating to human liberty. It was on this date in the year 1215 that the people of England extorted from King John and his barons at Runnymede the bill of rights which sounded for the first time that rulership by representation that marks our modern democracy. It is hardly too much to say that this bill of rights was the birth hour of political liberty. It was certainly the beginning of constitutional history in England. In the latter part of Elizabeth's reign the Puritans would not have been so bold had they not been in possession of this precious document that will be known to the end of time as Magna Charta: The Great Charter of English civil liberty.

At this season of the year there is need of repeating a very old exercise—so ancient that one may call it an "old chestnut." Still it is something imperatively demanded in every city, town and hamlet in the United States, to say nothing of the rest of the world. It is a warning to the lads about going in swimming. We shall very soon begin to read about such and such a lad being drowned in this pond or that river, and this will be a daily record until cold weather. Are you going to be one of the number? Very likely if you get into deep water and are unable to swim. The very first thing to do along this line is to learn to swim; which is not a very difficult performance. You would better take lessons of some good instructor who thoroughly knows his business. Even then don't do any foolish stunts until you have perfect confidence in your swimming power. Never go to the limit in the trial of your strength. Never go into the water when heated.

The Presbyterian general assembly just held at Indianapolis, has claimed the attention of the country for several reasons; Mr. Bryan, its most distinguished delegate, failed to capture the moderatorship and to impose his gag law upon the whole church, which would end all independent interpretation of the Westminster confession. But Dr. Hayes, the retiring moderator, delivered a great speech, appealing for better support for ministers. He proved from statistics that ministers on the average are not so well paid as alien ditch diggers." This is an economic and moral crime. The average minister generally receives more than the garbage collector, one-half the wage of a carpenter, one-third the wage of a stone mason." He goes on to show that out of 170,000 active clergymen in the United States, only 1,671 paid an income tax in excess of $2,000 last year. Is it strange that young men refuse such treatment?

INTRODUCING NEW ENGLAND TO THE TOURIST.

It is the beginning of the vacation season. The tide of travel is already flowing, to reach flood proportions later in the summer. The tourist agencies and the publicity bureaus are already busy answering inquiries. Together with the passenger departments of the railroads and steamship companies they are distributing the pamphlets that tell the story of New England's varied attractions for those places in which they earn their livelihood writes F. S. Fassett in the Boston Transcript. But what of the chance to make better known New England's opportunities for the investor, the business man and the year-round resident? Is there here a neglected opportunity.

Hundreds of thousands of people from other parts of the country will travel about New England during the coming months. The visitors will include all sorts and conditions of men. Among them will be capitalists keen to back large enterprises. There will be greater number of men of small means, who travel by flivver and hunt for camping places at night instead of riding in limousines from one high-priced resort to another. There are the thousands who ride on the railroad trains instead of over the highways. But among all classes of the travellers are men whose interest in New England commerce and industry and in New England as a place of permanent residence, could that interest be aroused, would result in new partners for New England enterprises, new customers for New England products, and new and desirable members of many New England communities.

Advertising New England Products

Consider the summer visitors as customers. They should take to their homes a new appreciation of New England products as the result of organized effort to call to their attention what New England has to offer to the rest of the country. It was a Maine man who said that the visit to Florida was not allowed to forget that Florida had oranges to sell, while the visitor to Maine seldom heard of a Maine apple. The summer visitors are properly to be regarded as prospective customers for New England products. The question concerns the way in which the trade may be established and fostered. As in all selling under modern conditions it is largely a problem of finding the right kind of advertising.

Here, then, is an undertaking calling for the hand of the expert. It would be unfortunate were there offensive appeals to those who come here for a vacation. Their chief and immediate concern is with the things necessary to make their vacations successful. They do not want to listen to the "boosters" telling of business opportunities in New England towns and cities. They have little time and little inclination to read advertising matter about New England products. Yet there are ways in which all these things may be made known. There is, for example, no harm in sending along a booklet giving lists of summer hotels and boarding houses a pamphlet telling something of the resources of a state, or the kinds of business done in a city. Something of that sort presumably is done now. There might be much more of it.

Sea Food for the Multitude

The fisheries suggest an industry in which the summer visitor might be made an all-the-year-round customer. The fish dinner at the shore resort is one of its chief attractions. There is opportunity to make known to the visitors that under modern conditions fish may be transported to distant markets and sold while still fresh. This fact is so well known to the experts that there has already been much discussion of ways in which to extend the business. The advertising man might profitably consider means of convincing the summer visitor that the fish for which he shows so much fondness at the shore resort may be obtained in his home far removed from the coast.

There is here much more sensible undertaking than some of those in which the government has spent so much money. Who remembers now the campaign conducted about ten years ago to induce the American public to eat dogfish, masquerading

Sarah Todd, Wife of John Jacob Astor.

The advent of Sarah Todd, socially prominent, beautiful, clever, charming, in the life of John Jacob Astor founder of that great New York family, did much to establish the young Hollander as one of the important men of early New York.

John Jacob Astor's marriage had all element of business. It came about through a business transaction. Miss Todd, accompanied by her mother, came to Astor, whose reputation as a fur dealer was rapidly growing. She wished a coat of the finest quality and style and wanted him to sell her the pelts. Young Astor was struck by the knowledge and common sense of the young maid. She seemed to know almost as much about furs as he did. They talked for some time about the various aspects of the business, trapping, trading, preparing. There seems little enough of romance in these matters, yet there was enough to sow the seeds of love. Her knowledge of and interest in furs, her ability to judge them completely won his fancy.

Their marriage, which took place in 1785, brought the young fur trader into close contact with the best Dutch New York society. His mother-in-law, a Brevoort before her marriage, a combination. The marriage was significant a member of New York's exclusive early successful from the beginning, and one of New York's and America's first families was thus founded. Writing of the union a biographer says:

"The marriage was a business partnership as well as a marital, and proved a success in every way. Sarah was a worker, with all the good old Dutch qualities of patience, persistence industry and economy. She was the only partner in whom he ever had implicit faith."

A Little Talk on Thrift

Attitude Toward Little Things.

At this time of the year our various educational institutions are sending their graduates forth into the more practical experiences of life. Perhaps no single aspect of their educational equipment will serve them to greater advantage than such lessons as they may have received during their school and college days along the lines of self-discipline.

Whatever may be the equipment of any young person, eventual success can only come through self-mastery.

It is on this point that one of the greatest benefits of thrift is based. The amount of money one sets aside or even the amount of time gained through the elimination of wasted moments are secondary in importance to the benefits which thrift practices bring in the development of character.

The young man or young woman entering the practical experiences of life today will find that success or failure depend a great deal on their attitude toward the little things. The processes of self discipline work through a series of small conquests. It is not difficult to conquer the trivial temptations of one's daily routine, and the repetition of these victories brings one eventually onto the broad highway of successful attainment.

Above everything else make thrift a habit; not a miserly manner, but along the lines of progress. Herein lies one of the secrets of life, and wise is he who learns these lessons in the days of his youth.

Although it may require a great effort to accomplish a certain undertaking today, the same accomplishment will be much easier tomorrow and soon the task becmes a customary part of one's daily existence.

No greater personal asset exists than the habit of thrift. This truth can be taken to heart by all of us, especially by those who find themselves at this time face to face with the great realities and responsibilities of practical life.—American Society For Thrift.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

THE INDWELLING CHRIST

Howbeit, when He, the Spirit of truth is come, He will guide you into all truth, for He shall not speak of Himself, but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall He speak; and He will show you things to come, He shall glorify me; for He shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you. John 16:12-14.

The twelve apostles had every chance to become well acquainted with Christ during His life on earth. They were with Him in private, they saw the work that He did and they listened very frequently to His teachings. One would have supposed then, that before His death they might have understood a great deal about Him and about the spirit of His teachings. One would have supposed that after such constant and thorough training they might have been prepared to undertake the work that fell upon them by reason of His departure from the world. But it was not so. Up to the time of the crucifixion, and even after Christ had again appeared to them after Christ had risen, they seem to have had very vague ideas with regard to the purport of Christs teachings and of His life and death. They indeed thought Him as the Messiah, but at the same time it was quite evident that they had a very imperfect conception of Christ as the Redeemer and Saviour of the world. Very imperfectly do we find they grasp the fact that His kingdom was a kingdom to be set up in the hearts of men.

How did it come that men who apparently had such opportunities of learning about Christ should indeed know so little? The answer is that their companionship had been with Jesus, the son of Man, rather than with Christ the Son of God. The "indwelling Christ" was not yet even A conception in their minds; still less a reality in their lives. The very fact of the physical presence of Jesus served for the time being to obscure the divine Christ.

And now we may infer that these men who with such opportunities had learned so little of Christ's true kingdom up to the final separation from them by his ascension (Heaven) became of course [illegible]

Stories That Recall Others

Wondered About Flags.

Extracts from a conversation overheard on a street car Memorial Day.

"Nice weather for the games today. I hope the Athletics win both of them."

"Yes, that team is certainly playing good ball this year."

Interrogator, looking out of window: "Well, I guess there's no chance of rain today. Say, I wonder what all these people have those flags out on their front porches today for."

Something Else.

Old Jones was busy in his back yard with saw and hatchet while his wife nursed a bad cold in the house, when a neighbor came to the fence.

"Good morning, Mr. Jones," she said. "How is Mrs. Jones this morning?"

"Just about the same," old Jones replied. "She didn't sleep very well last night."

"That's too bad," the neighbor sympathized; and then as a raucous cough came from the house, she added solicitously:

"I suppose that's her coughing, ain't it?"

"It ain't her coffin, it's a new bathhouse."

"No," old Jones answered absentmindedly, his eyes still on his work.

STILL HOLDING BONES IN TIBBETTS MYSTERY

The quart or more of small fragments of bones which were found last Sunday in the ashes of a bonfire in a Lebanon cow pasture have so far failed to add anything to a solution of the mysterious disappearance of William Tibbetts, the eccentric Fitchville farmer.

The bones have been in the possession of Dr. N. B. Lewis ever since they were turned over to him by Elijah Abel in two paper bags in which Mr. Abel, the Bozrah health officer, placed them after he scraped them from the ashes of the bonfire.

Among the 50 or more small pieces there are scarcely more than three or four that are over two inches long, and the greater number are fragments of about an inch in length, all so thoroughly burned that they are brittle enough to fall apart at the slightest blow. This makes it a difficult matter to say whether they are human bones. Although Dr. Lewis thinks that the shape of several of the pieces shows a pelvic socket and something of the skull.

The authority may have the bones looked at by other medical experts to get their views on whether they are from a human skeleton. If the opinion of the medical experts makes it sufficiently certain that these are fragments of human bones, the authorities will have a further incentive to push the probe to find out if possible where they came from.

SPOILED HIS CHANCE FOR DRIVERS' LICENSE

If the motor police patrol hadn't been parked outside headquarters Friday afternoon when one man had to make a stop there after taking his examination with State Policeman Sterling for an operator's license, the applicant would be driving today. Officer Sterling told him he needed a little more practice before he could have a driver's license.

SAILOR LOSES LEG IN UPSET OF MOTORCYCLE ON MONTVILLE ROAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, June 15.—August Comier, a sailor stationed at the Submarine Base, is a patient at Home Memorial hospital suffering from a crushed left leg which was amputated shortly after his admission to the institution. Miss Josephine Bosson of 17 Federal street is under treatment at Lawrence-Memorial Association hospital as the result of injuries sustained tonight on the Montville road by being thrown from a motorcycle.

Miss Bosson and Comier were bound from Norwich to New London and when south of the old Witch Hazel mill they were crowded off the road by an automobile headed for Norwich. The motorcycle overturned, throwing Miss Bosson off and Comier was caught beneath the machine.

A passing automobile brought Miss Bosson to the Lawrence-Memorial hospital and a short time later another automobile headed for New London found Comier lying alongside the road. His leg was terribly lacerated about the knee and a telephone message was sent to the Home Memorial hospital for the ambulance. He was brought to the institution about a half hour after the accident occurred and an effort was made to save the leg, but because of the crushing of the bone amputation was necessary and the leg was removed near the knee about midnight.

The state police were notified and State Policeman Shea left the Groton barracks and went to the scene of the accident to conduct an investigation. He reported later that he had learned there were two automobiles between which the motorcycle was caught and turned over.

The automobile involved in the accident was the Ford roadster of Louis Covey of 42 Freeman avenue of this city, according to a telephone message to police headquarters by Mr. Covey shortly after the accident. He said that his machine had turned over and that he had with him in the car two Norwich men named Goldblatt and Sullivan, but that none of the occupants of the car were hurt.

OFFICIAL RULES FOR CIVILIAN FLAG USAGE

Washington, June 15.—The code covering proper civilian usage of the American flag and conduct in its presence was adopted at the concluding session today of the conference of national organizations called by the American Legion, and a permanent committee was authorized to disseminate it throughout the country.

Resolutions adopted recommended that each of the more than sixty organizations represented promote the study of the words and music of the Star Spangled Banner and its teaching in all schools and in juvenile organizations, as suggested to the conference yesterday by President Harding. State legislatures also were asked to enact uniform laws requiring display of the flag in and over all schools, parks and playgrounds, and over other public buildings.

Another resolution was adopted demanding that all persons employed in a public capacity, national, state and municipal, whose compensation is paid from public funds be required to pledge allegiance and support to the constitution and respect for the flag of the United States." Opposition was recorded to proposals to change the official dimensions of the flag.

A proposal included in the report of the code committee that the proper salute to the flag by a woman be the military salute employed by soldiers in uniform was amended to read that her right hand should be placed over her heart in paying respect to the emblem.

The code covers fifteen rules for display of the flag and a list of fifteen "things to avoid," in addition to setting forth the proper use of bunting, the salutes and pledges to the flag, suggestions for state legislation and a recommendation that the "Star Spangled Banner be universally recognized as the national anthem.

A section of the code dealing with the salute to the flag reads:

"During the ceremony of hoisting or lowering the flag or when the flag is passing in parade or review, all persons present should stand at attention facing the flag. Men's head dress should be removed with the right hand and held at the left shoulder. Those present in uniform should salute with the right hand salute. Women should stand at attention, facing the flag or as the flag is passing in parade should salute, by placing the right hand over the heart. If the national anthem is played and no flag is present all stand at attention when uncovered and salute at the first note of the anthem retaining the position until the last note of the air is played. If in civilian dress and covered men should uncover and stand at attention, facing the music. Women stand at attention and salute."

PATRICK J. MAHONEY WINS K.C. GRADUATE SCHOLARSHIP

During the recent commencement exercises at the Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C., the Right Rev. Thomas J. Shahan, president, announces that Patrick James Mahoney of this city was a winner in the national competition held annually for Knights of Columbus graduate scholarships at the university. The scholarship is a very desirable one, since it provides board, lodging and tuition for a period of four years' graduate research at the university.

Mr. Mahoney is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Mahoney of Falls avenue and is a graduate of St. Patrick's parochial school and the Norwich Free Academy. In 1919 he matriculated at the School of Science at the Catholic University, and at the recent commencement he received the degree A. B. in science.

During his undergraduate career he served as secretary of his class and was chairman both of the commencement week committee and the senior ball committee. He was also one of the editors of the Cardinal, the year book of the class of 1923. In scholarship he maintained an excellent record during his college course.

Fraternally he is a member of Washington Council, K. of C. Last Tuesday he was honored by election to the vice presidency of the Lay Alumni association of Catholic University.

It is interesting to note that five years ago a similar scholarship was won by Mr. Mahoney's brother, Dr. Lemuel H. Mahoney, head of the history department of Canterbury school, New Milford, Conn.

CONNECTICUT HAS MORE THAN 200 MILLIONAIRES

Two people in Connecticut had net incomes exceeding a quarter million dollars in the 12 months up to the first of last year, according to figures made public yesterday at the office of United States Internal Revenue Collector Robert O. Eaton. The aggregate of their net incomes was $532,793 and jointly they paid $307,561 to the government on account of the income tax.

Two Hundred Millionaires.

While there were 21 incomes in the United States exceeding one million dollars, Collector Eaton's report showed that none of these was in Connecticut. It indicated, however, that about a dozen more Connecticut people had entered the millionaire class during the calendar year covered, 1921, than there were in the previous year. As far as can be ascertained by applying to the official figures a key furnished by revenue experts, 209 individuals of this state began last year as the possessors of property valued at one million dollars or more. The figure is probably not exact, but it is as near to it as can be determined by information given to the government in the personal income tax returns. By the same method of computation it was estimated that the end of the World war left 349 people of Connecticut in the millionaire class.

Thirty-one Possess $2,000,000.

Twenty-one persons had property apparently exceeding two million dollars in value at the beginning of 1921 and decreases in their possessions during the year which caused them to fall short of that mark at the opening of 1922. The close of 1920 found 46 people in the $2,000,000 class in Connecticut. There are now 21, of whom 19 barely come within that figure.

The business depression showed its deadly effect on the incomes of capitalists in the federal tax returns filed up to March 15, 1921, which returns failed to reveal any dent in the aggregate incomes of people of moderate means, apparently took several months to hit the latter class with force. The statement now issued by Collector Eaton discloses that, while 68,516 Connecticut people reported net incomes from $1,000 to $2,000, aggregating $93,-823,024 in 1920, 54,818 people in that class reported net incomes of $78,659,-224 in 1921. The government received over one-quarter million dollars less in taxes from Connecticut people of this class on account of the decrease in 1921 earnings.

$86 Each Paid to U. S.

The net income of all Connecticut people who filed federal tax returns for 1921 was shown to be $343,017,-188 by figures given out at the revenue collector's office a week ago. This was a reduction from the aggregate net income for the previous year of $103,730,522, enough to pay all the expenses of running the state government of Connecticut for nearly eight years. The average person in Connecticut liable to the federal income tax paid $86 direct last year toward meeting the expenses of the United States government. The total collected in this state was $16,634,945, which was about one-third of the amount raised by the state by taxation.

The falling off in this state in 1921 was greater than the average drop for the country at large. While the number of income tax returns filed throughout the United States was 2.23 per cent. less, the decrease in Connecticut was 16.52 per cent.

One person in the state who had an income exceeding $300,000 in 1920, fell below about a quarter million dollars and such persons paid the government more on account of the income tax in 1921 than all of the 54,-818 people who paid on incomes between $1,000 and $2,000.

AUTO LANDS ON PORCH OF FOREST ST. HOUSE

An automobile driven by Louise Davis, son of Peter Davis, landed on the porch of a house on Forest street near the corner of West Main street Friday afternoon about 1 o'clock when the driver lost control.

The porch is below the street level so that the front end of the car had to be raised with planks before it could be pulled back into the highway. The railing and some of the flooring of the porch were broken by the car's plunge from the street and a collection of potted plants was nearly ruined. The house belongs to J. Tempchin.

HITS ANOTHER MACHINE LEARNING TO DRIVE

While she was learning to drive an automobile under instruction of her husband early Friday night, Mrs. Arthur Brodeur of Hunters avenue ran into the rear end of the car of Carlisle Avery of Hamilton avenue which was parked on the right side of Hunter's avenue near the corner of Norwich avenue. The Avery car had its gasoline tank jammed and broken, but Avery was able to get it to a garage before the gasoline had all leaked out. He will have it looked over to see if there is any other damage.

Thought He Saw Burglars.

About 2.15 o'clock this (Saturday) morning Captain Dennis J. Twomey received a telephone message from William B. Disco that two men were trying the windows of Disco Brothers store, in the new Disco building on Main street. Captain Twomey rushed the patrol wagon and a squad of officers to the building.

The police quickly surrounded the building. Investigation revealed the fact that the two men were Sergeant Allen C. Matthews and Officer William Ryan, who in line of duty, were trying the windows to make sure they were securely locked.

Mr. Disco happened to go to the side entrance just at that time and not recognizing the officers hurried to a nearly telephone to send in the alarm.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

It was made known Friday that the Connecticut Mills are to close on June 30 and will not resume operations until July 9. This shut down of a full working week will be due to the fact that business has fallen off very material in the tire fabric industry and because there is practically no demand for this class of material at the present time. Vice President Obadiah Butler of the company said Friday afternoon . . . there is a prospect that business may improve following the issuing on or about July 1 of the government's report on the cotton crop. The slowing up of activities in the tire fabric field is paralleled in other fields of textile activity, as indicated by mills in Rhode Island and Massachusetts curtailing production to some extent of late. Lack of buying activity due to extreme high prices is held chiefly accountable.

In these days that mark the closing of a school year it is of very special interest that Charles Henry Koesmaier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Koesmaier of Attawaugan, has been awarded a certificate of merit and second prize of 5 for an essay he submitted in a state-wide contest for grammar school pupils—this contest under the auspices of the Colonial Dames. Master Koesmaier's subject was Leading General of the Revolution and he treated it so clearly and entertainingly that it was selected from many hundreds for its merit as a historical paper. The prize was accompanied by a letter of commendation from a member of the essay committee. Master Koesmaier also received this week a library certificate from the Connecticut State library committee in recognition of the fact that he had read six books by standard authors, outside of the regular school reading course. He is thirteen years of age and was graduated from the Attawaugan school this week.

The funeral of Rosario Aubin, 12, who lost his life by drowning while bathing in the Quinebaug river Tuesday afternoon, was held from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Omer Aubin on the West Side Friday morning, with funeral services at St. James' church at nine o'clock. Rev. J. E. Shelley, M. S., was celebrant of the high mass of requiem, which was attended by the several hundred pupils of St. James' school, where Rosario was a pupil in the fifth grade. The sanctuary was filled with altar boys, who were fellow pupils of the dead boy. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery, where Rev. John Roux, M. S., conducted the committal service. The bearers Alcide Lemieux, Silvio Bernier, Theodore Lagasse and Oliver Bessette.

Dashing out from the side walk at Main street near Center about 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, John Kohler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kohler, was struck and knocked down by an automobile driven by Adam Lambert of East Weymouth, Mass. Mr. Lambert took the boy in his automobile to the office of Dr. George M. Burroughs and an examination showed that he was not seriously injured. Some bruises and a skinned knee seem to measure the extent of his hurts. Mr. Lambert proceeded when assured the little boy was not dangerously hurt.

The interest that boxing holds for the public is little less than amazing when consideration is given to the capacity attendance that gathered from every section of eastern Connecticut Friday evening to witness the card of bouts staged in the town hall. The fact that it was a benefit performance helped some to increase the attendance, but nevertheless the majority there were what might be termed regular customers, coming here for every boxing event arranged. Attendance was attracted even from Rhode Island and Massachusetts border towns.

The Salvation Army, with headquarters for this territory in Putnam, is now engaged in a drive to raise $300 in Danielson. Soliciting in Danielson without a permit from the state board of charities is one of the things the police do not allow, and in keeping that rule in force Chief John McFarland had a conference Friday with a solicitor without authority to collect in this state. PUTNAM

Arthur Fournier and George Breault, young men who borrowed Wilfred Blanchette's car and drove away with it, as told in this column Friday morning, were before Judge M. H. Gelmaker in the city court Friday morning and, after a hearing, were bound over under bonds of $500 each to await trial at the next term of the superior court having criminal jurisdiction. In default of bail, they were committed to the county jail at Brooklyn. At the hearing Attorney Arthur S. Macdonald was counsel for Breault, while Fournier was not represented.

The story of the car as it was unfolded in court is to the effect that the young men did not intend to steal it and were on their way home with it after a joy ride that took them first to Webster, from which point they intended to return direct to Putnam, then on to Worcester and to Springfield and Troy, N. Y. They were in Springfield on the return trip when they were apprehended by an officer for violation of a traffic regulation, and investigation of their case established that they were not the owners of the car they were driving.

Breault's story was that Fournier invited him to go for a ride while they were downtown together late at night; that they went to the Blanchette garage, which Fournier unlocked with a key he took from his pocket, obtained the car and drove away. Breault did not consider this procedure unusual because he had seen Fournier driving the Blanchette car and knew that he had been out alone with it.

While at Springfield their funds ran low, so they journeyed over to Troy, where Breault has a brother, and obtained a loan with which to buy gasoline and meet other expenses incident to their getting back to Putnam.

The court considered the explanation inadequate in view of the fact that opening the garage constituted an instance of breaking and entering, aside from the seriousness of going away with a car on such a long journey without knowledge of its owner.

Abraham Levine, long a well known resident of this city, died suddenly at his home here during Thursday night, and the news of his death Friday morning came as a great surprise to all who knew him, especially as he was up and about during Thursday and exchanged greetings with many. Mr. Levine had a severe attack of indigestion about two weeks ago, and for a time then his life was despaired of, but he rallied and had so far recovered as to be up and about, although not his usual robust self. He seemed quite well during Thursday, however, but must have had another severe attack during the night, as his daughter discovered the body lying on the floor of his room about 8 o'clock Friday morning.

Mr. Levine was known throughout all of eastern Connecticut as a dealer in second hand furniture and as a specialist in antiques which he purchased at auction and private sales throughout eastern Connecticut. His death is a hard blow for Mrs. Levine, who was reported Friday as seriously ill.

The funeral services were held Friday, with burial in the Hebrew cemetery at Norwich, a motor cortege conveying the body from this city to the place of burial.

Will Be The Slogan In The Membership Campaign of The Norwich Building and Loan Campaign.

HOME OF WILLIAM E. HARTIE, Convent Avenue

The Norwich Building and Loan Association Will Conduct An Active Membership Campaign, For One Week, Beginning Tuesday, June 19th, and Ending Monday, June 25th.

Arrangements for the opening of the membership campaign of the Norwich Building and Loan association, which is scheduled to begin on Tuesday, June 19th, and continue for one week, are practically completed, and present indications are that it will be one of the most successful campaign for members, or, as they are most frequently called, "shareholders," in the history of the association.

For several weeks past the officers of the association, assisted by the general committee of fifteen, have been hard at work perfecting the plans for the campaign, and at a final meeting of the general committee and the members of the association which is to be held next Monday evening the complete program for the proposed membership campaign will be announced.

Association a Community Asset.

Inasmuch as the Norwich Building and Loan association is performing a great public service in encouraging home ownership and is generally recognized as a community asset of great value to the city, The Bulletin feels that its readers will be glad to learn about the plan and purposes of the organization and what it can do to help its members and the community in general.

President is Interviewed.

A representative of The Bulletin called upon E. O. Rodier, president of the Norwich Building and Loan association, at his office in the Thayer building to get some information as to how the building and loan association proposed to solve the vexatious housing problems. Although Mr. Rodier is a very busy man, yet he was quite willing to give any information that could be considered of public interest about the organization of which he is president, and to the upbuilding of which he has devoted much of his time and abilities for several years. In rate of dividends and to the same consideration in all matters as any other member.

"Building and loan association are in their very nature co-operative and have a two-fold purpose—to encourage the saving of money and to promote the ownership of homes. They encourage thrift and economy and make better citizens, and enable many persons to own homes who would not otherwise be able to do so. The advantages of a well managed building and loan association to a town cannot be overestimated. Home building should be encouraged, and there is no better way to increase the number of home owners than through membership in the building and loan association. In other states these institutions have played a large part in the upbuilding of towns and cities. It is an almost invariable rule that a man with a home is a valuable citizen, and perhaps when the time comes that a great majority of citizens own their own homes the good government millenium will have been reached."

What About Safety?

"What about the safety of the money which the shareholders pay into the association?" said the writer. "How are the funds safeguarded?" To this Mr. Rodier replied: "The safety and solidity of any financial institution is in the character of its assets. A building and loan association has mainly but two kinds of assets. One kind is real estate mortgages on property usually worth double the amount of the loan; the other kind consists of share loans amply protected by a good margin on the value of the share. The Norwich Building and Loan association was incorporated under the laws of the state of Connecticut in April, 1915. Many safeguards have been thrown around the borrower and investor in this state. All building and loan associations and similar institutions are under the supervision of the state banking department. Every association is examined thoroughly at least once a year by the bank commissioner, and if every detail of the business is not being conducted along sound lines, the necessary changes must be made.

"The man or woman who has small sums to deposit regularly is able to secure a much higher rate of interest from a building and loan association than from a savings bank. The Norwich Building and Loan association has earned 5 1-2 per cent. for its shareholders for several years past, and our splendid laws make the investment as safe as any form the human mind has been able to devise.

Borrower and Investor.

"I find," said Mr. Rodier, "that there exists a wrong impression among people who do not fully understand the building and loan plan as to the relation the borrower stands to the investor. Nine out of ten persons will tell you that a building and loan association is a good thing for the investor but bad for the borrower. The question arises, how can an association pay its investors 5 and 6 per cent. dividends unless they come from the borrower? They do not seem to realize that every borrower is an investor also, and receives the same dividends on the share he carries in connection with his loan as the person who deposits money as an investment.

"The income of a building association comes largely from loans, it is true. The building and loan actuary will show you that this profit is augmented largely by reloaning the payments made monthly by the borrower, together with the monthly interest he pays on his loan. Under such conditions the interest is compounded every month. It is a great benefit to a borrower to be permitted to reduce his loan by regularly monthly payments and in addition receive dividends on those payments. Some people forget that the building and loan association is strictly mutual and that borrowers and investors are treated exactly alike.

Moral Risk of Loans.

"A leading financier was once asked the question:" Is it not commercial credit based principally upon money of property? He replied, "No sir; the first thing is character. "Naturally character must be backed up by security, but without character a man is up against an almost insurmountable obstacle."

"Credit extended by a building and loan association is, to a certain extent based upon the theory that character is the basis of credit. This is especially true when money is furnished for the purpose of building a home. It is a principle of good business and followed by all ordinary loan companies, not to lend more than 50 per cent. of the actual cash value of the property offered as security. A building and loan association may go further than this; if the prospective borrower is of good character, and is the owner of a vacant lot, it will furnish him with the full amount necessary to build his home. The laws of the state allows building and loan associations to lend up to 80 per cent. of the appraised value (note the term, "appraised value") of the property. The association can well afford to do this if the person is of good character, for the monthly payments on shares carried in connection with the loan are constantly reducing the principle and increasing the margin of security."

NORWICH MAYORS ENDORSE WORK OF ASSOCIATION.

MAYOR WATERS ENTHUSIASTIC MEMBER

Mayor Waters stated that he is a firm believer in the Norwich Building and Loan association as a means of improving the housing conditions in Norwich.

"I consider," said the mayor, "that as a public-spirited citizen of Norwich I am assisting in promoting the growth and prosperity of the city by my membership in the Building and Loan association." The purposes of the association are most commendable. Its steady growth since its inception a few years ago, is logical because the plan of operation opens the way for the machanic and the clerk and any person working for a daily wage to more easily own a home by taking into consideration his future earning power and to own that home at an earlier period in life than would be possible under any other plan."

"As mayor of Norwich I am interested in a prosperous and contented citizenry and I realize that a big factor in bringing about such a condition is home ownership. Nearly all home owners are 100 per cent. Americans and they are interested in the community in which they live. Their taxes pay the bills. They have a stake in the progress of their town. They have, in their home an anchor to windward and it is my opinion that home ownership is the greatest enemy to Bolshevism and social and industrial unrest there is. It will stabilize labor. The average man who has built up a competence by hard work doesn't listen to idle dreams of communism and other isms and doctrines when he knows that these will take away the thing that is the monument of his life work."

"I feel that the Norwich Building and Loan association is doing a good work in the community and I respectfully urge the people of the city to assist in this work by becoming members of the association."

HON. T. C. MURPHY APPROVES

Hon. T. C. Murphy, former mayor of Norwich, and one of the oldest members of the Norwich Building and Loan association, when asked, by a Bulletin representative, for his opinion of the civic value of the association said:

"Norwich, like every other municipality has many urgent problems to solve. That is a natural sequence of growth and progress. But the problem that, to my mind, exceeds all others in importance is the need of better housing facilities. It is natural for a city to strive to increase the number and the size of its industrial organizations. That means greater prosperity for the community. It is useless, however, to expect industrial expansion unless we are in a position to furnish comfortable homes to the people already within our borders. While I recognized this fact, in a general way, for some years past, yet the seriousness of the situation did not impress me until I was forced to give this matter serious consideration during my two terms as mayor. Since that time the situation has become more serious. Not only in Norwich but elsewhere throughout the country there is a demand for more homes. From every community the cry is the same and there is urgent need for some agency that will make it easier for the earnest home seeker to build or buy his or her own home. That agency exists in the form of the Norwich Building and Loan association. It is purely a local organization, managed by Norwich men, who without thought of financial compensation give freely of their knowledge and experience to the affairs of the association. It includes on its membership roll the names of men and women who have worked hard for the best interests of the city and I firmly believe that all the citizens of Norwich should get behind the association and endeavor to promote, in every way possible, its development as a community asset."

VIEWS OF FORMER MAYOR LEROU

Former Mayor Lerou, who is one of the oldest members of the association, is enthusiastic in his appraisal of the value of the association as a community asset.

When asked, "Is the Norwich Building and Loan association performing a needed service in the community?" former mayor Lerou said: "During my term as mayor of Norwich I was greatly impressed with the work of the Norwich Building and Loan association as a means of increasing home ownership and thereby making Norwich a better city to live in."

"The home owner is a contented resident in any community. He has become a part of the community and is vitally interested in it. He gets a special joy and satisfaction out of life that is only known to the man who owns a piece of property. Norwich can be and should be "a city of homes". It will then be a city of contentment and a good place to live in."

As I understand the plans of the committee it is not the intention to have an intensive drive for members such as a house to house canvass but rather to conduct a campaign with the idea of interesting those who realize the advantages of membership in a well managed building and loan association which provides a safe investment for those citizens who see the tremendous possibilities of this cooperative association as a civic asset as well as to appeal to those prospective home seekers who see in this movement an opportunity to secure their own homes by making use of the loan privileges which this association offers."

"The citizens of Norwich can perform a very useful public service by joining the Norwich Building and Loan association during the proposed membership campaign."

HOME OF ERASTUS W. CARTER, West Thames Street

How The Plan Works.

"Let us suppose, for instance, that a member wants a $4,000 house and has $1,000 and the association furnishes the balance, which is $3,000. The borrower takes out 15 shares, which when matured will equal the amount of the loan. His payments will be as follows.

$15.00 monthly dues on 15 shares say for 12 years	$2160 00
$15.00 monthly interest on $3000 say for 12 years	$2160 00
Subscription fee on 15 shares at 50 cents	7 50
Legal services in connection with taking over real estate	15 00
Total	$4342 50
Less loan	3000 00

$1342.50, therefore, is the total interest paid in twelve years, an average of $111.87 a year, equal to 3 and 70 one hundredths per cent. a year simple interest, as against the regular 6 per cent. usually charged borrowers. And at the end of that time (shares will mature approximately in twelve years) the borrower will be given a quit claim deed by the association and become the owner of his own home, free from incumbrance.

"A $4,000 loan is the largest negotiated. All real estate loans are secured by first mortgage. The association does not accept second mortgages for security."

How to Become a Member.

"To become a member a person has only to sign an application form, and pay a fifty cents membership fee for each share subscribed to."

"Dues are paid at the rate of $1.00 per share per month. 25 shares or $25. a month is the maximum that can be taken by one person in one series. A person may have one to twenty-five shares in a series."

"For safety, convenience, and sound business principles the business of the association is conducted on the series plan. Twice each year, January and July the association may issue new series. That is, taken in any particular series will mature, or reach their full value, when that particular series has earned enough by interest, in addition to the monthly dues paid, to equal the sum of $200.00 per share. This period of time is usually 12 years. The shares having reached their full value of $200.00 must be withdrawn. Reinvestment of the whole or part of the matured shares is permissable.

"When the shares, with dues and earnings, have reached the value of $200.00 they will have matured, and the association will pay the member the full amount of matured value of all shares held."

Single Payment Shares.

"The Norwich Building and Loan association will also issue single payment shares. These shares are for the convenience of the persons who, realizing the value of the association as a community asset, as well as its soundness from an investment standpoint, desire to become shareholders without being bothered with monthly payments. Single payment shares are issued upon the payment of $110.00 a share (matured value $200.00) and mature at the same time that the monthly payment shares do, of the same series, and at the same time."

Withdrawals and Share Loans.

"If change of circumstances or other contigencies make it advisable or necessary for a shareholder to discontinue payments, he may withdraw his money from the association, at any time, upon thirty days notice in writing to the secretary."

"It is not, however, necessary to withdraw from membership or to surrender in order to obtain money. A member may borrow on the accumulated value of pledged shares at the current rate of interest, and allow his share to continue their earnings."

Shares Act as Sinking Fund

"The question is sometimes asked why the interest does not decrease as time goes on and money is paid in on the shares. The answer is that the money paid on the shares is not credited directly on the mortgage but is treated just the same as payments made by members who have no mortgage loan. The association receives from the borrower these payments on shares each month, credits dividends on them regularly, and when the payments and dividends have made a fund large enough to equal the mortgage, which they will at the end of about twelve years, then both the shares and the mortgage are canceled and the property is clear."

"The arrangement is, in principle, the same that a city or town makes when it issues bonds. The city or town pays interest on the bonds without change until they are due, but at the same time it each year pays money into a sinking fund that takes care of the bonds when they mature. Your shares are really a sinking fund that eventually provides the money to take up your mortgage."

HOME OF STERLING AVERILL, 81 Yorrington Avenue

Public-spirited Citizens of Norwich Will Give Their Services Freely, to Build Up the Membership of the Norwich Building and Loan Association, As a Valuable Asset to the City.

Own Home While Paying

"When you place your mortgage with the building and loan association it cannot be called or disturbed as long as you make the regular payments, but, on the other hand, you can if you wish, pay up the loan and cancel the mortgage at any time. If you follow the regular course, in about twelve years your shares will mature and the mortgage be canceled. You will then own the place crear of dept, and besides this, will have had the privilege of living for twelve years in your own home."

Mr. Rodier Becomes Reminiscent

"If the Bulletin wants information for its readers as to what the Norwich Building and Loan association can do for the man of average means, who desires to stabilize his job, his home and his future by accumulating a stake in the community, I feel," said Mr. Rodier, "that the facts that I have given should prove conclusively that this association is able and willing to render a great public service to the community which it serves."

About that time Mr. Rodier became reminiscent and proceeded to enumerate the number of homes that had been acquired, either built or bought, through the agency of the Norwich Building and Loan association and the satisfaction which the owners had frequently expressed with the opportunity which the association had given them to pay rent to themselves instead of to the other fellow.

"Another feature of the building and loan association," said Mr. Rodier, "which I think is deserving of consideration, is the fact that the money which the association receives from its shareholders, either in the form of monthly dues or in interest or loans, is all used here. It goes out again in the form of wages to mechanics or to local builders for materials for construction work, thereby doing a double duty in providing homes for its members and work and business for the citizens of Norwich."

How Earnings Are Apportioned

"A question that is sometimes asked is "how are the earnings apportioned?" In answer to that I would say that the rate of semi-annual apportionment to savers depends upon the earnings. We believe the rate is of secondary importance, for the reason that the first consideration in the conduct of all properly managed institutions is safety. These facts concern all members and prospective members, whether borrowers or investors, because safety—that is, security—is the first consideration in the conduct of this business; and in order to get the best security, we must loan our funds at a reasonable rate of interest."

"The officers and managers of this association believe that the interests of the saver who leaves his savings with us, and the interests of the borrower, to whom we loan these savings are coordinate and interdependent. The saver is entitled to reasonable earnings on his funds, but the borrower also has his rights and if he offers high-class security for a loan is entitled to such a loan at a reasonable rate of interest."

Officers of Association

The present board of officers of the association are: President, E. O. Rodier; first vice president, Daniel T. Shea; second vice president, W. E. Manning; secretary, John R. Tarrant; assistant secretary, W. S. Elliot; treasurer, John E. Vaughn; assistant treasurer, Charles I. Smith; attorney, Charles V. James.

Directors, H. M. Lerou, John M. Lee, L. M. Crandall, Robert McNeely, G. H. Moles, George S. Powers, Bernard W. Ryan, John J. O'Rourke, Earle M. Wood, A. Clayton, E. J. Graham, J. A. Ferguson.

Auditors, C. D. Foster, F. H. Topliff, G. A. Finn.

The by-laws of the association provide that those that have the handling of money shall be under bonds of a surety company and the present officers are so bonded.

Has Assets of $107,000

There are 575 members of the association, with assets of $107,000. The association is carrying 45 mortgage loans which means that there are 45 homes in Norwich that have been built or bought through the agency of the building and loan association. That in itself is something worth while. On this page are shown some of the homes that were built by this plan. They have been selected at random from the list of building and loan homes, and illustrate better, perhaps, than anything else, what the association is doing for its shareholders.

The Membership Committee

The committee in charge of the membership campaign, which starts, Tuesday, June 19th, is as follows: E. O. Rodier, John M. Lee, L. M. Lerou, Herman Steiner, Earle M. Wood, John J. O'Rourke, F. H. Topliff, James J. Brady, Edward Crooks, H. J. Randall, William C. Noyes, Albert Clay-

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

Bothering Danny Fox

As the old crow spared his little black book in the story before this, to page 23 1-2, he read:

"Little brown rabbits have all the same habits."

"Ha, ha!" laughed Little Jack Rabbit, "you are a very wise bird, Professor Crow," and then the little bunny boy hopped along until he came to a wooded hill where Danny Fox had his den. Now, as it was a very long time since the little rabbit had seen the old robber fox, he was just a little bit curious to know what had been the trouble, for trouble there must have been, otherwise, Danny Fox would have been around to steal a chicken nowand then from the barnyard.

"Don't bother me! grumbled the old robber.

So the little rabbit hopped along very carefully until by and by he came to a big tree, quite close to the pile of rocks under which the fox family had their den. Danny Fox with Mrs. Fox and Slyboots and Bumbtail, their two little sons.

"I don't see anyone about," thought the little bunny hopping over to another tree and peeping around. Then, Oh, my, how his heart went pitter-patter! Right in front of him, not forty hops at Danny Fox on a three-legged stool, smoking a corncob pipe.

"Oh, dear!" sighed the little rabbit, I didn't mean to get so close."

But seeing that Danny Fox's left foot was bandaged up in a piece of white cloth, he know that the old robber couldn't run very well and maybe not at all, so he called out: "Hello, Danny Fox. What's the matter with your foot?"

"Don't bother me," grumbled the old robber, not even looking around. Maybe he didn't want to see a nice fat little rabbit when he couldn't even catch him for supper.

Just then Peter Possum came by and began to laugh.

"Old Man Robber, Danny Fox, Caught his foot in a steel trap box."

"Keep quiet, will you?" snapped Danny Fox.

"Ho, ho, ha, ha;" laughed Little Jack Rabbit. "So, the big farmer almost caught you, did he?"

This made the old fox so angry that he jumped up and ran toward the little rabbit on three legs.

"Who's laughing now" cried Danny Fox and Little Jack Rabbit hopped away and Peter Possum climbed a tree, "you're very brave when you think there's no danger!"

Pretty soon, the old robber turned back and sitting down on his stool, lifted up his wounded foot, and while he was doing this, Old Mother Magpie came by and as she was always poking into other people's business, she was curious to know what had happened to his foot.

"If I told you," snapped Danny Fox, "everybody in the Shady Forest and Sunny Meadow would know it so I mustn't say a word!"

And in the next story I'll tell you some more about Little Jack Rabbit and his friends.

In its invitation to the people of Norwich to become members of the building and loan association, the committee thus sums up its advantages: "membership in the building and loan association is a constructive effort on the part of the citizens of Norwich to encourage home ownership; it is an incentive to saving; it means thrift, increases self-respect and eventually gives the man or woman a responsible place in the community."

GALES FERRY

The Ladies' Aid society of the M. E. church held an all-day session in the vestry of the church on Thursday with members of the Long Cove auxiliary of the society as guests. Work was on aprons, children's frocks, and boudoir caps. At 1 o'clock dinner was served of baked beans, salad, rolls, pickles, with cake and coffee. Following dinner, a business meeting with the annual election of officers by ballot was held, Mrs. Henry W. Hurlbutt, the retiring president, presiding after two years of most efficient service. Mrs. C. H. Bartlett read the scripture lesson, followed by the Lord's prayer in unison. Roll call and minutes of the last meeting, with financial statement of the year, were read by the secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Dudley C. Perkins. The by-laws of the society were read by Mrs. Charles Litwhiler, president of the Long Cove auxiliary. Mrs. W. D. Woodward acted as teller for the voting, and the result follows: President, Miss Alice Satterlee; vice president, Mrs. Nelson Parker; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Dudley C. Perkins; directresses, Miss Sarah T. Latimer, Susan Mathewson, Mrs. Bertha M. Hoyt, Mrs. Fanny A. Molthrop, Mrs. Harmon L. Perkins, Mrs. Billings F. S. Crandall. Long Cove auxiliary president, Mrs. Charles M. Litwhiler.

The June meeting and the annual election of officers of the Woman's Home Missionary society was held at the vestry of the M. E. church Tuesday afternoon, closely following the election of the Ladies' Aid society. The president, Mrs. W. D. Woodward, presided. The meeting opened with singing the hymn Watchman, Tell Us of the Night, Mrs. Rufus W. Hurlbutt at the piano. Devotions conducted by Mrs. Harmon L. Perkins followed, with roll call and minutes of the last meeting by the secretary and treasurer's report, read and approved. The chairman of the nominating committee, Mrs. Courtland E. Coiver, read the list of officers for the society and they were re-elected with but one change, that of the corresponding secretary. They are as follows: President, Mrs. W. D. Woodward; vice president, Mrs. R. Irving Hurlbutt; recording secretary, Mrs. Fanny A. Molthrop; treasurer, Mrs. H. E. Culver; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mosett A. Lawson; auto box secretary, Miss Sarah T. Latimer.

Following the election, Mrs. R. Irving Hurlbutt conducted the enigmas, with the numbers attached to hand-colored cards. Papers were read, one by Mrs. J. A. Hirsh entitled The One Purpose; another, From Hawaii to Hampton, by Mrs. Rufus W. Hurlbutt, and Finding India's Treasures, by Miss Satterlee. At the conclusion of the meeting Mrs. Henry W. Hurlbutt, who arranged the program, served refreshments of sandwiches and cake.

The regular business meeting of the Village Improvement association was held at the Country club house Monday evening. In the absence of the president, D. E. Povey, Rev. Allen S. Bush, vice president, presided. Minutes of the last meeting were read by Secretary Nelson Parker. Walter M. Buckingham, for the board of directors, asked the association to bear the expense of an electric light to be placed at the head of the stairs leading to the railroad station. After some consideration this was unanimously voted. Mrs. Walter M. Buckingham, chairman of the department of education, reported that the looms for weaving rugs were in readiness for weaving, and orders for the use of the looms could be given by communicating with her. A petition was read by the secretary, it presented to him, bearing the signatures of 34 residents and property owners that the name of the street from the Yale quarters running south to the riverside be named Riverside place. It was unanimously voted to do this. Secretary Parker stated he had asked the New Haven railroad for a top dressing for the cinder platform at the station here. Mr. Buckingham and J. Edmund Norman were named a committee to ascertain the expense of weeding and marking the names of the streets.

Orrin S. Bennett and Samuel Lester will complete this week a flight of stairs on the Bluff leading down to the beach—46 feet, with landings, for which they furnished the lumber and labor, for the convenience of the families of four of the cottages, of Judge Alfred Steere and Dr. William Bayles of Brooklyn, N. Y., W. H. B. Dumont and Mrs. H. J. Balsam of Montclair, N. J.

Rev. W. D. Woodward returned Tuesday evening from attending the Norwich District Ministerial association meetings held Monday and Tuesday at Burnside.

The Long Cove school closed last Friday, Miss Evelyn E. Whipple, teacher, with an interesting program. At the close cake, lemonade and fruit were served. WHEN LIFE WAS GAY IN LA BELLE FRANCE

AND COOKING WAS DIFFICULT

Frances in the Middle Ages—and visions of troubadours and fetes, of lilting tunes and dancing feet.

It was a brave time, with every lad a gallant knight and every lass a lady fair, and life a constant song!

We think of itinerant pastimes and enchanted groves; of stately chateaux and crowded market places. It was a vivid, colorful time with romance and adventure riding gloriously over the land.

But flowers droop and fade when autumn comes, and castle walls are not proof against the icy finger of Winter. The French chansons and the twinkling feet would have been silenced and halted without life-giving heat.

The reverse side of the gay French life of the Middle Ages is not so pleasant. Their efforts to capture and bring inside the glow of the Summer sun strike us as pathetic.

Instead of a mid-summer revel on the country-side, think of a mid-winter evening in a home. Those same maids and youths who danced on the green are huddled close to an inadequate stove. Those bending trees and prodigal gardens outside are covered with snow, and now food must be cooked in that same imperfect range.

There it stands in the middle of the room, giving off, reluctantly, a little warmth and taxing the ingenuity of those wonderful old time French chefs.

The stove of these blithe days was only a short step removed from the brazier of Rome. In the Eternal City the brazier was simply a stand with a metal top on which charcoal was burned. Unpleasant and unhealthy gases escaped from the charcoal, as the brazier was carried from room to room, striving desperately to warm the atmosphere.

The French rechaud was modeled after the Roman warming pan. Here it had a fire box, into which the charcoal or fuel was put and lighted. At the bottom were openings for drafts and on top were arrangements for cooking.

But there was no pipe to carry off the smoke and the sparkling eyes of the girls were often dimmed by the fumes and stench.

Those days of torments are gone, and with them the handmaiden sleeves. The days of science and invention supplanted the redoubt with the Sterling Gas Range, a pleased knight of the modern kitchen.

Cooking is no longer drudgery. The Sterling, built scientifically by men and women who know, has turned it into delight—a speedy, clean process which releases the housewife from the kitchen in a minimum of time. The Sterling is the armored knight which comes to the kitchen of every prudent housewife and by its magic power snatches her from the witch, Slavery, and sends her out to the garden and groves.

And it is economical. This Sterling Gas Range with its roomy cooking and oven space, with its "Instant Lighter" which lights any top burner by simply pressing a button, with its automatic oven temperature regulator which keeps the oven at any heat you desire—regardless of fluctuations and gas pressure.

Yes, it is truly a pleased knight which frees the modern housewife from kitchen drudgery, shortens kitchen hours and helps her stay young and happy. Furthermore, any Sterling Dealer will offer such easy terms of payment that this wonderful range will practically pay for itself by the savings it effects.

This case was on Tuesday afternoon, June 5th, for hearing before Acting Justice M. Mrs. Josephine Ella Golding, wife of George Golding of Hope Valley, the first witness called and she testified that on the 30th day of May at about 5 o'clock, without provocation, warning, hauled out and took her directly in the face with his fist, severely bruising her right cheek. At the time of the assault four or five of the children were playing near a brook on the Pilot farm 500 feet from their house in Greenfield, so called, below the Nichols and Langworthy woolen shops. While so playing two of the Haverick children were lined up astride in the same horse and threw water on them and a general shouting. Josephine Ella Golding's daughter, Mrs. Clara Volger, who was at the house at the time started for the children and this resulted in the appearance of Mr. and Mrs. Haverick and both mother and daughter were struck by the defendant and his wife. Mrs. Clara B. Volger was called and said that while front in Woodville, was visiting her mother at the time and added to the previous testimony that Haverick had thrusted his daughter to go upstairs after his arm and that Haverick also struck his fist in her face. George A. Godfrey testified that Mrs. Haverick carried a small stick and that Haverick on a previous occasion had threatened him as he came down stairs. The defense then put on the stand Alice Haverick, 15 year old daughter of Mr. Haverick who denied that any blows had been struck. Abbey LeRoy Stafford, a neighbor, stated that he had witnessed the contrary.

After six o'clock Friday morning residents were awakened from their slumbers by the fire alarm being rung from Box 2. The fire company responded and found the fire to be in a four-tenement house on Trenbeath avenue, one of the tenants having filled the oil stove which leaked down all on the stove; and upon being lighted took fire. The carpet was burned but no damage was done otherwise.

The Radio Club members of the Stonington High school, enjoyed a most delightful dances in the school hall Friday evening. There was a large number of invited guests. This will be the last dance this season.

STORRS EGG LAYING CLOSE IN 32ND WEEK

The thirty-second week of the laying contest at Storrs was a close race. Jules F. Francais' pen of Barred Rocks from Westhampton Beach, L. I., and Hollywood Farm's pen of Leghorns from Hollywood, Wash., tied for first place with 54 eggs each. Leghorns owned by F. M. Johnson of Waldoboro, Maine, were second best for the week with a score of 54 eggs. Two pens of Leghorns entered by Lee A. Grouten from Farmington, Conn., and Pussy Willow Egg farm from East Moriches, L. I., tied for third place with 53 eggs each. Two pens of Barred Rocks owned by Wingate Poultry Yards of Harrington, Delaware, and Jasper E. Guptill of Berwick, Main, and two pens of Leghorns entered by White Springs farm from Geneva, N. Y., and Meadowedg farm from Cedarhurst, L. I., all tied for fourth place with 53 eggs each. The total lay for all pens was 3838 eggs or a yield of nearly 55 per cent.

The season for weeding out nonproducers is now at hand. Intelligent culling works a twofold advantage; it reduces the grain bill and at the same time has the effect of raising the average yield per hen. During July there is no doubt but that in many flocks from 5 to 10 per cent. of the birds can be culled without adversely affecting the egg yield. This means, of course, a little less money for grain, a little less labor a little more room in the houses during the summer, and yet the same number of eggs. Well informed poultrymen continually exercise this nice discrimination between layers and loafers. It not only enables them to produce current eggs at a lower cost per dozen but it means also better breeding in next year's flock. It tends to develop a race of hens with larger laying proclivities.

The four leading pens in each of the principal breeds are as follows:

Plymouth Rocks

Davidson Bros (White) Upton, Mass. 1231
Jules F. Francais (Barred) Westhampton Beach, L. I. 1193

CALIFORNIA MAN CAN COLLECT FOR ONIONS

Judgment in favor of Isadore Cohen of Los Angeles, Cal., against the New London Fruit and Produce Co., was handed down Friday by Judge George E. Hinman in the superior court before whom the suit was recently tried. He finds that the defendants were not justified in refusing to accept and pay for a carload of onions which were shipped to New London in June, 1920. He gives judgment for $1,058.63, plus interest from June 14, 1920, a total of $1,186.66.

In his memorandum of decision Judge Hinman says that he finds the onions were of the required grade, at least when shipped, and that upon the plaintiff's final refusal to accept the shipment, the plaintiffs used due diligence to obtain the best available price for the carload. Plaintiff's damage is the difference between the proceeds of sale and the contract price, less the advance payment.

ACADEMY CLASS OF 1913 TO HOLD 10TH REUNION

At least one of the Academy classes is to hold a reunion this year as plans have been completed for the 10th reunion of the class of 1913, which will be held next Monday evening with a banquet at the Wauregan House at 6.30 standard time. It is expected that about 25 or 30 members of the 75 who were in the class will be able to attend.

AFTER WINTER.

It's a lovely world this morning with the blue skies overhead,
And the graceful tulips nodding all around us, white and red.
It's a kindly world this morning with the orchards dressed in bloom
And the breezes stealing from them all their delicate perfume.

Skies have worn the garb of sorrow,
And the winds have chilled us through,
We have braved the snows of winter and our faith has faltered, too;
But the sun shines out this morning and the world is fair to see,
And there glows a touch of beauty on the humblest maple tree.

Once my little yard was ugly, bleak and desolate and bare,
And the elm tree at my doorway seemed a symbol of despair;
But today it glows with color and the tree in green is dressed,
And a pair of merry robins in its branches have their nest.

Through the wintertime of sorrow
every man of us must go,
There must come to all of us a season, when the clouds are hanging
low;
But there is no death to beauty and there is no death to peace,
Life shall bring us lovely mornings
When the winter storms shall cease.

WHEN DADDY SHAVES.

There's awful doin's at our house, and all our games must stop,
When Sunday comes, and daddy gits his razor and his strop.
We hafts keep so awful still, as quiet as the grave!
You bet it is a soleman time, when daddy starts to shave.

Ma allus says: "Now all you boys, go out doors and play,
And don't you make a bit o' noise till daddy's gone away!"
You bet we're sharp enuff to see we gotta all behave,
Er else they'll something happen
quick, when daddy starts to shave.

Now we can hear pa sharpin' up his razor mighty quick;
We hear it goin' up and down, "clickclick! click-click! click-click!
Gracious! how he'll rave!
And if it doesn't sharpen good, my
I tell you what—its somethin' fierce,
when daddy starts to shave.

Now when he gits the razor sharp, he paints his face all white,
With somethin' in a china cup, till he looks like a fright.
And then he picks the razor up, and scrapes away so brave—
But we know things will happen soon,
when daddy starts to shave.

Sometimes the razor makes a slip, and cuts pa on the face,
And gee! the awful things he'll say is simply a disgrace!
Yes, every time he cuts his chin, well,
you should hear him rave,
The Ten Commandants all gits broke,
when daddy starts to shave.

ANSWERS AND INQUIRIES

FELIX: Your name has been added to the Social Corner list.

FINDS LETTERS HELPFUL.

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Corner: What helpful letters in every paper! I was glad to have the directions for a crocheted rug as I intend to make one some day, when I get my rags colored and ready; I sold a bag of some I couldn't cut in strips to use in a rug, and had to look twice to see if the man gave me anything. I don't sell many or rather give them to the rag man for the cent pp to the needy and the rest are made into useful rugs and patches. I think it is interesting to hear from the historical places, and events that happened years ago. I like to see, too, pictures of places as they were a number of years ago or descriptions of them. There were some pictures of Springfield last year that were taken many years ago, when the Main street was only a common road with horse cars passing along and an ordinary white house where now are large blocks and many modern modes of travel.

The Bible is the message of God to man. Tim. 3: 14-17.

When in trouble or sorrow read John 14: 1-3; Heb. 13:6,7; Psa. 46. When you worry read, Matt: 6: 19-34.

Answers to last week's questions: 1: Elisheba. Exodus 6:23. No. 2, Nazaritas. Num. 6. 1. No. 3, Elisha, the Shunamite widow and her two sons. 2d Kings 4:1. No. 4, Solomon. 1, Kings 10:23.

Question No. 1: Who was first guilty of theft, aside from Eve? 2. Of what old man do we read who felt none of the infirmities of age? No. 3. Name two persons that saved their lives by hiding in a well. No. 4. Who prayed "Give me neither poverty or riches?" SPRY BIRD.

CRETIA WRITES FROM ROCHESTER.

Dear Members of the Social Corner: I hoped to tell you the rest of my wonderful trip last year to Luray Cavern of Virginia, going over Bull Run battle field and to Gettysburg, but last of February had the grip and I am still suffering from its effects as to nervousness. I came here to Rochester as my son came after me and the doctor thought a change might be beneficial. It has been, but I do not gain as I wish. My eyes bothered me some but are better.

My name was mentioned by "Hope Eckwood" May 5 and as I've enjoyed the Social Corner very much indeed it would have given me pleasure to have been present at Franklin hall on May 5th, but I came here last of April so was nearly four hundred miles away from you. A kind neighbor at home wrote me of being present as guest of "Remember Me," and how well she enjoyed the dinner and sisters of members present.

Rochester is a beautiful, city with wide level streets and V. says there is no place he has ever been in where the working man lives in as good homes as here and all seem to take pride in beautifying their property.

Went to Grand View beach, twelve miles away on Lake Ontario, and the trees of peach, pear, apple and sour cherry were in bloom were a pleasing sight, such as I never saw before. The sour cherries are pitted and dried on trays in the drying houses on the owners' farms. All orchards here are ploughed and cultivated—soil is rich and free from stones.

Went last Sunday, June 3, to Mennonite, Indian mission, the dividing water of Rochester comes from, but did not see one hemlock tree there.

Have a building with open sides with four tables, size of those in Franklin hall and benches for each, painted dark green, with concrete floor. Just outside are four brick ovens with tan covers for broiling steaks and frankfurters. The day was rainy the first part but cleared and on return trip went to Canneasus lake which is very pretty. There are many cottages there and some now occupied.

V. leaves for Albany tonight (June 6), for two days.

My regards to all Social Corner members, known or unknown. All here wish to be warmly remembered to some of our dear friends who are outside the corner but know they read and appreciate the letters.

Yours truly,

CRETIA.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Dear Corner Sisters and Friends: Powdered boric is very good for perspiring feet.

If pet kittens have fits put a pinch of common table salt in their mouths and shut them up in a dark closet.

I took an old crepe de chine waist—past mending—and made a camisole and four handkerchiefs. A georgette crepe waist makes a pretty morning cap and an old white waist can be readily converted into a corset cover by removing the sleeves and cutting out the neck.

From flour sacks letters can be eliminated by pouring kerosene oil on the letters, roll up the sacks, let them stand at least 24 hours, then wash in luke warm suds, put in cold water with washing soda and let boil.

If you happen to leave the tea where it boils and the tea is bitter, just put a little cold water and the unpleasant taste will not be noticed.

When napkins are dry do not sprinkle them, but dip and wring out every third napkin in clear warm water. I place each wet napkin between two dry ones and fold and roll the three napkins tightly together. In twenty minutes they will be ready to iron, all equally damp from hem to center. Next fold each napkin right side out, with hems together and iron until dry.

Use dark green mosquito netting in place of white to cover the baby in the carriage. The netting should be fastened down with thumb tacks or run an elastic around the edge so it will be held taut and the baby cannot reach it. The green netting overcomes the sun's glare and is too beneficial to the child's eye to be discarded.

When washing woodwork take a piece of tin about ten inches long to protect the wall paper from the wet cloth.

When putting away colored, or cut steel ornaments, cover them with a coating of oil. They can be washed in soapsuds and polished with fine emery paper when wanted again and will have the appearance of new trimming.

Art muslin curtains should never be washed in warm water. Make a lather with hot water and let it cool, if the water is green add a little vinegar; if lilac or pink, a little ammonia. Salt will set the color of black and white.

KITTY LOU.

ANOTHER BIRTHDAY.

Dear Members of the Social Corner: I, too, have had a birthday this month. Perhaps you would like to know how I spent it. Quite early in the morning a friend came to spend the day with me, then a little later the mail came, and then, oh joy! Cards and letters from friends and in the evening my son and his wife and sister came. We had ice cream and cake and altogether it was a very pleasant day for me. When I was a child I looked forward to my birthday with as great pleasure as I did for the houidays. I am glad my birthday is in June. I wish to thank the sisters who sent me cards. It was my intention to send Cady and Jennie one too, but when I looked for my cards found I was out of birthday cards. I live too far from stores to run down street and get a supply so will have to wait for my shopping day.

Mothers: Now it is almost vacation time for the children. Give them a treat to a picnic lunch in some favorite place of theirs, a nice shady tree on the lawn if you do not have the time to take them elsewhere. Sometimes I used to go to their playhouse with them. They enjoyed it. Give them some of their favorite sandwiches with other goodies and they will look forward for another picnic soon.

Best wishes to all,

SUNSET.

SOME RECIPES.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I am sending a few recipes.

Rhubarb Compote: Six dried figs cut in pieces, one cup cold water, six cups sliced rhubarb, three cups chopped raisins, three oranges, one and one-half cups sugar, three bananas, one and one-half cups walnuts. Soak figs over night in cold water. Add rhubarb and raisins and cook until thick—about 45 minutes—add orange pulp, sugar and bananas and cook ten minutes, stirring often, add walnuts and cook five minutes. Pour into sterilized glasses and seal with parafine. This will make about six glasses.

Salmon Loaf: A salmon loaf solves the meat question for summer supper use. One cup cracker crumbs, two cups salmon, two cups thick white sauce, two tablespons lemon juice, one-half teaspon salt, one-fourth teaspoon cayenne pepper and two eggs. The seasoning is added to white sauce and the cracker crumbs to the salmon which has been freed of bone and bits of dark skin. Add the eggs slightly beaten. The whole is put into a buttered mold and used with a tomato sauce.

Thanks to the editor for the yellow slip and thanks to sisters that remembered me with birthday cards.

LEAVING THE CITY.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I must stop in the midst of my packing for I am leaving the city for Pleasant View and thank those three Social Corner sisters for my pretty birthday cards. One didn't give me any clue but the verse was fine.

Scottie and Savilla: It was so nice of you to remember my birthday, June 8.

Our last Social Corner meeting was the best we had for some time. Grandma Gray did her part well but hope she will never have to go to that place. The singing, reading and speaking add so much pleasure to our meetings. Hope to be able to be at your picnic June 2.

Will be very busy now for I am to spend the summer at the beach but will try and get the Saturday Bulletin and keep in touch with the Social Corner sisters.

Triplets: Will let you know how those dahlias turn out. Thank you.

Best wishes to all,

SHEBANGKEEN IN THE CITY.

REUNION OF CORNER MEMBERS JUNE 21.

Social Corner Sisters: As the time draws near for our annual reunion picnic it has been suggested I write and tell the sisters first where the picnic is to be since many of the sisters don't know where the Versailles Methodist church is. It is near the trolley and only about a five minute walk and a very pleasant walk. It is about half way between Baltic and Taftville. Usually the conductor on trolley calls out Occum and Versailles at this point.

There will be a large yellow ribbon on the post; so follow the ribbons. Some people think Occum and Versailles are not on the map, but we will show them they are, and just the place for a good time.

Any one who will sing, whistle or recite I will be glad to call on. Bring your own plate, cup, knife, fork and spoon, also salads, sandwiches, cake, pie, etc., as usual, and may every one come with a helpful spirit to have a good time and give others a good time. We hope to have a big delegation from every club.

I have been asked by one of the Sunday school teachers if her class could sell ice cream on the grounds that day. So anybody who desires to buy ice cream can get it at small cost.

Hoping for a pleasant day and a big crowd.

Best wishes to all.

STUDENT.

TESTED RECIPES.

Dear Sisters of the Corner: Many people make cake, etc., from recipes which call for white of eggs only. I have solved the problem how to use the yolk. Drop the egg-yolk in boiling salted water and when thoroughly cooked mix the yolk with salad dressing and use it as a sandwich filling.

A Fluffy Cake Filling—To my standard recipe for boiled icing—One cup of sugar and one-half cup of water—I add, just after the syrup threads, one tablespon of granulated gelatin softened in two tablespoons of cold water, stirring just enough to dissolve the gelatin. Pour this syrup gradually into the beaten white of one egg, beating constantly. If not thick enough to spread, allow to stand in the refrigerator for a few minutes, beat up again and spread over your cake.

Stuffed Eggs: For six hard boiled eggs one cup of finely chopped meat, one tablespoon butter, melted, one-half cup cream, season to taste. Cut the eggs in halves. Carefully take out the yolks, put them through the press or mash them to cream or a smooth paste, with melted butter. Add the meat and seasoning; mix with the cream gradually, as it may not all be needed. When the mixture is of the proper consistency to stuff the eggs, season, fill each half carefully and make it even on the top. Rub a little raw white of the eggs over the pieces, and press them together. Roll in egg and bread crumbs and fry in smoking hot fat. Serve with cream sauce.

There may be good cooks who seemingly never measure anything, but I would request those who try my recipes to please measure.

Pie Crust made with lard: Place in a bowl one and a half cups flour, one-quarter of a cup butter, the same amount of lard and one small teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sugar. With a sharp knife chop the shortening in very thoroughly. Afterwards use enough ice water to hold it together, chopping that all the time. Stand in a cold place a day before using.

Pastry for one pie: Mix one saltspoon baking powder with one heaping cup of flour and one teaspoon of sugar. Rub in (one-quarter) cup lard. Mix quite stiff with cold water. Roll out and put in little pieces of butter about the size of a bean on paste, until you use one-fourth cup; sprinkle with flour, roll over and roll out again. Roll up like a jelly roll, divide in two parts and roll to fill the plats.

PUTTING UP STRAWBERRIES.

Dear Social Corner Members: With the strawberry season at hand there is work for the pickers and the canners and the shortcake makers.

Those who are fond of preserving strawberries will find this a good way to do them.

Rinse the berries in cold water, drain, hull and pick over. Then drop into hot jars which have been "sterilized" as follows: Put empty glass jars into warm water and bring to a boil; let continue to boil for 15 minutes, drain, and keep warm by wrapping in hot towels which have been wrung out of boiling water. When these jars are filled with the fruit, add boiling hot medium-thin syrup made by boiling together three quarts of granulated sugar and two quarts of water for five minutes, (skim syrup while boiling). This syrup should rise to within one-fourth inch of the top of the fruit-filled jar. Adjust new rubbers which you have dipped once into boiling water. Put on glass covers which have been "sterilized" like the jars. And partially seal—that is, put top wire up over cover, but do not press down side wire. Put the jars on a wire rack in the bottom of your wash-boiler. The wash-boiler should contain enough boiling water to rise almost to top of jar. When the water is once more boiling, let it boil for 16 minutes around the jars (this is called "processing"). Then take out the jars, completely seal them (by pressing down the side wires). Invert to cool (out of a draught) and to test for leaks; label and store.

Has any of the sisters a good recipe for preserving gooseberries or for making gooseberry marmalade?

HANDLING GROUCHES.

Dear Corgerites: Grouches are bothersome things. They are unpleasant for everyone, even those carrying them around. When we feel a good sized grouch developing, what do we do? Some of us put it carefully in a hotbed and give it the best conditions for growth. Then, when it gets so sturdy and strong that we feel that we can defy all cheer and comfort therewith, we take it home with us and proceed to share it generously with all around.

One over-developed grouch can be guaranteed to break up the peace of a whole household, from grandfather to the babe in arms. One after another will fall into its spell, and before long there can be a perfect orgy of disagreement and airing of pent-up dissatisfaction. The whole family can be made to wish they were dead or a thousand miles away. More tender feelings can be put to flight than can be gathered together in weeks, more personal ill-feelings developed.

Doesn't just sound attractive? No, it doesn't. And it isn't necessary. But some of us seem to enjoy it, else why do we allow the little lacks and disagreeable details of life to so overpower us?

We can't help it? It's our temperament? Others of our associates or families allow it? Those excuses are things to be proud of, are they not? As we give them, we feel our inward strength, our desire to overcome, our patience, kindness, and other virtues welling up in our hearts, don't we?

No? Then what's wrong. Circumstances of life? Other members of the family? False friends? Annoying associates?

We even ourselves terribly weak don't we, when we declare that all or any of these are so much stronger than we are that we can't conquer our feelings over them? Maybe we could find some tonic at the nearest drug store that would strengthen our inner selves. Or maybe we have power within—if we'd only use it. Haven't we?

Was pained to learn of Mandy's sudden death. She always had some wholesome advice to give and her letters were practical and to the point. She will be missed in the Corner.

WHAT THE SUMMER CALLS FOR.

Dear Sisters. Where is the summer? I hardly dare ask the question for we feel the same way about the winter up to a certain time and then it came rapidly and hard. Perhaps it will be that way with the hot weather.

Great care is needed in the summer so that food will not spoil. Some homemakers manage to get along without refrigerators in the winter, but it is almost an impossibility to do this in the summer, unless one has a very cool cellar or, if living in the country, there is a cool, old-fashioned spring house. The city apartment house dweller usually has a modern refrigerator as a part of the equipment in her flat. Butter, milk, oleomargarine, shortening, eggs, meats, salads and vegetables can not be kept fresh without the aid of ice. It is our best friend in combating food decomposition and for, this reason a necessity in every home. Meats should be placed on a china plate and put in the refrigerator, but never directly upon the ice. Fresh salad materials should be cleaned, wrapped in a muslin bag kept for the purpose and also placed in the ice box. Fruits, vegetables and left-overs need the same cool recetacle for their keeping. Salt and sugar should be kept in closed jars, so that no ants or other insects, that are about in summer can find egress. In fact, all cereals, spices, coffee, tea, baking powder, etc., should be kept in tightly fitted cans or jars. The vinegar bottle should never be left uncorked so as to tempt flies and to lose its strength, and the same may be said of the syrup bottle and other bottles containing various extracts. Even the flour needs special attention in summer. It should be placed in a can with a lid that closes and kept in a cool place. Keeping everything as cool as possible should be the big aim of the homemaker in summer. All canned goods keep better in cool places and fresh fruits soon rot unless there is some cool place in which to keep them. Milk soon sours and butter becomes oil. Keep the ice box well filled. It is the best economy in the end.

Here is a recipe for bean salad which I think will interest many of the members: Mix one can of red kidney beans six small, sweet pickles and one apple, sliced, and cream salad dressing. Garnish with hard boiled eggs, sliced thin.

PUSSY WILLOW.

AN ORIGINAL IDEA.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I have an idea that I wish to pass along. When baking cake and it burns do not feel discouraged but when taken from the oven let cool. Then take an ordinary lemon grater and grate very lightly all around the cake. Then take one of the Fuller gift brushes (of which I think every household has one) and brush thoroughly until all particles are removed. I think you will find this a great help.

Now to the sisters who relished my cake at the June meeting, I am sending the recipe.

Chocolate Cake: Cream one-half cup of buter with one cup of sugar, two well beaten eggs, two-thirds cup of milk, one and three-quarters cups of flour, one teaspoon of cream of tartar, one-half teaspon of soda. Last add one square of chocolate dissolved in a bit of milk and place in the latter one teaspoon of sugar and vanilla. Bake in layers.

Delicious Orange Frosting: Melt two tablespoons of butter, add half cup of powdered sugar and stir well, then stir in one beaten yolk of an egg, the grated rind and juice of one orange and another half cup of sugar. Stir for about fifteen minutes when it will be smooth and creamy.

Trusting all who venture will have excellent results, I remain.

TRUE BLUE.

A SOCIAL CORNER SEEKER.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: After reading the wonderful letters that are written by the Social Corner members, I was wondering if I might be able to join in and have the pleasure of meeting some of them.

Today while at a picnic, I met several of the sisters, and became more anxious than ever to join.

They told me to be a member I must write to the Corner editor, and do my bit to keep up the columns of the Social Corner.

You know by this time I am not very nifty with the pen, but I will do most anything to be one of you and be able to meet more of the sisters, and enjoy the good times with you.

Hoping this meets with your favor and that I may be accepted as a member, I shall always sign

FELIX.

CORNER WELL REPRESENTED.

Dear Corner Folks: A pleasant good morning to all. Two weeks ago I attended the Tibbitts' auction. My, but the Social Corner was well represented that day. I counted fifteen members that I knew and perhaps there were others that I didn't know. I really enjoyed the day with Golden Glow and Snowflake.

U. C. E.: How about those dandelions? Memorial day I had a house full of company. One lady asked where she could get two quarts of dandelion flowers as she wished to make some wine. I suggested your place but as she was then 72 miles from home she decided not to try the trip this time. I recommended your cultivated "dandies" very highly. I could not do otherwise.

Golden Glow: Why not hitch up your automobile, get Snowflake and take a spin out this way and spend the day? Drop me a card letting me know when to expect you. Will be glad to see you any time. Hope you have not forgotten the way? You know you used to come once in a while; suppose you try it again.

CRIMSON RAMBLER.

Dear Social Corners: I have not forgotten how I enjoyed the last meeting in Franklin hall. And such a nice dinner. I have been very busy fixing flower beds, and painting. Hope to get this extra work done soon so I can have a little time to write.

As Jill has moved, I hope I shall meet her at our social gatherings just the same. I am wondering if Neighbor Everready has forgotten us, as I have not seen her name lately.

How is True Blue progressing with her crocheting? She surely had some very pretty edges.

Oil Bearing Sands of Colorado and Wyoming.

Nearly every thick bed of sandstone in the great Cretaceous system of the West seems to contain oil at some locality, but the exact number of these beds, the region in which each produces oil, and the density and the stratigraphic position of each have not yet been fully determined.

A recent brief report issued by the Department of the Interior as Bulletin 751-A of the Geological Survey entitled "Continuity of some oil-bearing sands of Colorado and Wyoming," by W. T. Lee, deals with the correlation of rocks in the lower part of the Cretaceous system in Colorado and Wyoming, and with the bearing of this correlation on the discovery of oil and gas. These beds have heretofore been known by diverse names, and in this report an attempt is made to show their continuity through areas where they have been thus differently named. This identification of the beds furnishes to oil men a better basis for study and drilling. For example, the knowledge that a bed of sandstone which is known in some regions as the Dakota is in others known as the Muddy sand and that it overlies 2 other beds of sandstone that may be oil bearing is of obvious practical value to the oil driller.

MRS. HINCKLEY NERVOUS WRECK

Tells How She Was Restored to Perfect Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Memphis, Tenn.—"Two years ago I was completely run-down and my nerves were a wreck. I could not sweep a room without resting. I could not do my work except a little at a time; and the doctor's medicine did not help me. One day some one threw your little book on to my porch and in it I read several testimonials of women who had been like myself. I went right out and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and before I had taken the whole of that bottle I knew it was helping me. I took six bottles, and then in about three months I took two more. Now I am in perfect health. I do all of my own work and could do more. I can truly say that I know Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gave me my health."—Mrs. O. J. HINCKLEY, 318 Union Ave., Memphis, Tenn.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. This book contains valuable information.

Odd Name for Village.

In Islay, one of the western islands of Scotland there is a village with a name of only two letters, Oa. There are said to be nearly one hundred places in Britain with names of three letters, such as Fox in Shropshire and Jay in Herefordshire.

The Fez in Turkey.

For a hundred years the fez, now going out of use, has been the characteristic Turkish headdress. It took the place of the turban, and the Sultan Mahmud II, who introduced it, was called "the infidel sultan."

POETRY

SUMMER

I am the gladsome summer!
All things rejoice with me well;
The green and azure dragon-flies
Come out with me to dwell.
And the bees are ever humming
Their grateful songs to me.
While the locust and the grasshopper
Chirp loud and merrily.

I am the gladsome summer!
For me their fullest suits
The trees put on, I report
And stock the early fruits.
Here are cherries red as rubies,
Here are currants crystal clear;
And strawberries, and peaches,
And nectarines, are here.

I am the gladsome summer!
Not a song-bird of the grove
But loves my cheerful sunshine,
And tells me of that love:
Not a fish within the river
But renews his silver scales
With fresh delight, whenever
I breathe upon the gales.

I am the gladsome summer!
The friend of children, I;
How, in my sunny revelries,
They love at length to lie!
How, in my shady woodlands,
They love to sport and roam,
And find in every bower
A resting-place, a home!

—Author Unknown.

A MUSICAL IT SERVED.

Upon my mantelpiece they stand,
While all its length between them Nan
He throws a kiss with graceful hand,
She glances back with bashful eyes.

The shiny Shepherdess is fair,
The Shepherd's face denotes a heart
Burning with ardor and despair,
Alas, they stand so far apart!

And yet, perhaps, if they were moved,
And stood together day by day,
Their love had not so constant proved,
Nor would they still have smiled so gay.

He toted the Shepherd might have wooed
The matchless Angel's heart to win;
The Shepherdess his love have missed
And flirted with the Mandarin.

But on my mantelpiece they stand,
While all its length between them Nan:
He throws a kiss with graceful hand
She glances back with bashful eyes.

—Mildred Howells, in Indianapolis News.

What appeared to some as an epoch-making event in the development of airplane and automobile motive power, is the recent successful trip near Copenhagen, Denmark, of an airplane using petroleum as engine fuel. It was observed by experts who witnessed the test, that the plane flew just as well as with gasoline, that there was less vibration and no soot formed nor was there any self-ignition in the engine, which ran 100 less revolutions than normally.—Popular Mechanics.

MANY CASES WILL BE TRIED BEFORE NEW LONDON POLICE COURT TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 16—Clarence Brubaugh, a sailor from the submarine base, is to appear in the police court Saturday morning charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. He drove up Bank street to State late at night without the headlights of the auto being in commission. This attracted the attention of Officer John J. Cavanaugh, and he went to the railway station where the Brubaugh car had stopped, to see that the lights were put into use. Brubaugh got out of the car and then it was apparent that he was intoxicated. He was taken to the police station, where he gave a bond to appear in court the next day. The case was then postponed until Saturday. A. Frank Greene, an auto salesman at Norwich, will appear in court the same day to answer a charge of non-support of his wife. Jacob Biron of New York sold and shipped a bill of goods to Joseph Birnbaum of New London. The latter would not pay for them and sent them back. What his reason was he not known generally, but it is claimed that he bought other goods at a lower price and therefore turned back that which he did buy. Now Biron has brought suit and it is to be heard in the New London city court next Thursday. Attorneys represent both parties, so the case is expected to be a contest.

George H. Holmes, who died recently, in his youth was a baseball enthusiast and was a member of the Star club when they had some lively tussels with the Norwich nine. Ed Hanlon, who later became the owner of the Detroit team, and Mickey Mercer, or correctly speaking, Minnahan, were then members of the Norwich team. Mr. Holmes became a carpenter and a successful contractor after that. Hanlon got into the biggest baseball company in the country and Minnahan is residing somewhere in Groton or Center Groton on a farm, where he works like a horse and has little to show for it. But that is the rest of life. The ways of these three men were as far apart in the evening of life as are the poles.

Julius Hendle, a storekeeper in New London, hired a store in the Capital theatre building at the time that structure was planned at a good big rental and was to occupy it as soon as the structure was completed. Hendle was disappointed, so much so that he sued Charles J. Dorey and Walter T. Murphy for damages which he claimed he had suffered in securing fixtures and stock for the proposed store. He said he was not treated fairly and that he had made arrangements which were expensive to him with the idea that he was to have the store. He brought suit for $20,000 damages and made allegations that he was injured to that extent. Now the suit has been settled without a trial by the payment of the defendants of a sum which will recompense Handle. It is said that the sum paid was about $2,000.

MARKET RALLIED AT CLOSE

New York, June 15—Short covering operations brought about a sharp rally just before the close of today's stock market which had exhibited a reactionary tone throughout most of the session. Closing prices were irregular, most of the usual leader showing only nominal changes on the day. Fifty stocks, including nearly all the active oils, established new low records for the year.

There were no developments in the day's news to account for the selling pressure which was of professional origin and obviously hampered by the continued lack of public interest and the unwillingness of insiders to support that favorites.

Repeated attempts to bring about general liquidation were frustrated by the strength shown by a few individual issues, notably Atchison which closed 2 3-4 points higher. Other strong spots were associated dry goods DuPont, Davison Chemical and Allied Chemical, up 2 to 4 1-2 points.

Pan-American issues made the best recovering in the oil group, each closing about 1 1-2 points above yesterday's final figures. Recent weakness of California Petroleum was attributed to liquidation resulting from the increased margin required on the new stock. Steels, rubbers and motors were heavy most of the day, losses of a point or more being established by Stewart-Warner, Stromberg Carburetor, U. S. Rubber and B. F. Goodrich preferred. Copper shares made no response to the higher prices for export metal.

Erie railroad issues showed moderate strength on reports that first national bank interests were taking a more active part in the financial affairs of the road. Most of the other rails held steady.

Foreign exchange rate showed few important changes. Demand sterling held steady around $4.61 and French francs were quoted around 6.23 cents. German marks rallied slightly to .... 7-8 cents.

Money rates were steady despite the heavy turn-over of funds in connection with income tax, interest and dividend payments. Call money held steady at 4 1-2 per cent. throughout the day. Demand for time money was light with 30 to 90 day loans arranged at 4 3-4 per cent. and the longer maturities at 5. The bulk of the prime names commercial paper business continues at 5 per cent.

BOND MARKET

New York, June 15—After an early period of reaction bond prices on the New York stock exchange today became steady and net changes at the close were very small. Meantime new offerings aggregating more than $100,000,000 found a ready market, two of the issues being sold within half an hour after the books were opened. New offerings for the week totaled nearly $200,000,000, a high record for the year.

United States government bonds held fairly steady in dull trading. The market apparently was not affected by the British interest payment of $63,000,000 in Liberty bonds. Foreign bonds were in slightly better demand, the new Austrian 7s establishing a new top of 98 3-4 but later reacting a little. Serbian 8s, however, sold off a point.

Railroad mortgages displayed little activity and price changes were heavy in the early trading but developed greater strength later and net changes at the close were unimportant for the most part. U. S. Rubber 5s, dropped 1.

Total sales (par value) were $1,-923,000.

New offerings for the day included $50,000,000 Illinois Bell Telephone first and refunding mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, $25,000,000 Standard Oil of California 5 per cent. gold notes, $9,930,000 Chicago & North Western 5 per cent. Equipment Trust certificates and $35,000,000 one to 15-year 4 1-2 per cent. State of Kansas bonus bonds at prices to yield from 4.25 to 4.35 per cent.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, June 15—Higher prices for wheat resulted today from reports of damaging rains in the winter crop belt and from drought in some of the spring crop states. The market closed firm at 3-4c to 1 1-4 net advance, with July $1.11, 7-8 to $1.12 and September $1.09 3-4 to $1.09 7-8. Corn finished 5-8 to 1c up, and oats scored gains of a shade to 1-4c. In provisions, the outcome ranged from 5c decline to a rise of 20 a 22c.

Kansas reports in particular indicated that excessive rains had brought about severe impairment of the probable yield of wheat, and one authority was quoted as saying the Kansas crop was at such a critical stage that the rain would be likely to destroy a heavy percentage in the area which is known the best promise.

Something of the effect appeared in news that the moisture had been of decided benefit in northwestern Kansas, but this fact has virtually lost sight of in view of damage reports from other parts of the state as well as from Nebraska, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

North Dakota and Minnesota had the sending of complaints about ill effects of dry weather. On the other hand, downpours in various parts of dry weather. On the other hand, downpours in various parts of south Dakota furnished relief for that state the fact also that export demand was only fair and that there was evidence of hedging sales here and more or less to do with causing something of a reaction in prices about noon.

Bulls again became aggressive buyers, however, and most of the day's advance was yet held at the close.

Corn and oats sympathized with the wheat advance. Corn was bullishly affected, too, by predictions current that the government report July 1 will show corn crop conditions somewhat below normal.

Provisions were firmer owing to an upturn in hog values.

GRISWOLD

Pearl Morgan, Alfred and Mrs. Dawley of Hartford were Sunday guests of Mrs. C. F. Morgan and family.

Children's Day was observed Sunday. A lengthy programme was carried out by the children and choir.

Memorial services were held by the grange Thursday evening, June 7. The programme was arranged by Mrs. Harold F. Geer and consisted of solos and readings, prayer by the chaplain, Rev. J. P. Richardson, memorial address by Rev. H. T. Wilbur of the M. E. church, Jewett City. Flowers were placed on the altar in memory of the patrons who died during the year by four young ladies of the order, Lucy Gray, Mabel Kenyon, Esther Frink and Lois Button.

The next meeting of the grange will be in the hands of the unmarried members of the order.

BUCKET BRIGADE SAVES ALISTON LADD HOUSE

Shortly before midnight on Thursday a fire was discovered in a building of Alliston B. Ladd at Versailles, used as a shop, garage, grain and tool room. The building with its contents was a total loss. An automobile was pulled out of the building but too late to save it from destruction. Through the efforts of the members of the Ladd family and neighbors forming a bucket brigade the large residence of Mr. Ladd and the farm buildings were saved although the house was afire several times.

The spreading of the alarm by an engineer of a through train on the Providence division of the N. Y., N. H., & H. R. R. by the use of his whistle was appreciated, the whistle being blown while passing the Versailles station.

COUNCIL AUTHORIZES SETTLEMENT OF BURNAP CLAIM FOR $1,900

The new court of common council, at its first regular business meeting Friday evening in the council chamber, authorized the appropriation of $1,900 in full settlement of the salary claim made against the city by Edwin L. Burnap, formerly superintendent of the water department. Several years ago Mr. Burnap was removed from office and he started suit to collect a year's salary. The suit is still pending in the superior court but will be withdrawn now that the council has voted a settlement.

The meeting was called to order at 8.30 o'clock by His Honor, Mayor Mile R. Waters. Alderman E. Laroe Bliven who was absent at the organization meeting a week ago, was administered the oath of office by Mayor Waters. According to the custom the minutes of the previous meeting were accepted without reading.

1923 Auto Taxes Uncollectible

City Clerk Weston C. Pullen read a communication from City Tax Collector Harold T. Robinson in which he submitted an explanatory statement regarding the tax abatements on the list of 1923. Mr. Robinson stated that the tax abatements showed a larger total than usual due to the fact that many people who were employed in local industrial plants during that year and who owned automobiles which were in the tax list had moved out of town when the tax was collected and that it has been impossible to locate them.

The communication was ordered placed on file.

Petitions were received and acted upon as follows:

From Connecticut Co., asking permission to lay a turnout on West Main St., near Mt. Pleasant Street.

Alderman Henry Gebrath introduced a resolution setting Monday evening July 2nd as the date for a public hearing on the matter and the resolution was adopted.

From James F. Reed and others for an arc light at the foot of Maple Grove Avenue. Referred to police commissioner.

From F. R. Wilson of the Central Vermont railroad, complaining that tenants in the vicinity of the railroad's right of way on the West Side, throw ashes and rubbish on the railroad tracks. The petition asked that the nuisance be abated. It was referred to the public works committee.

The monthly report of the street commissioner was accepted.

Resigns from Recreation Commission

The resignation of Helen B. Royce, as a member of the recreation commission was read by the clerk. Miss Royce stated in her resignation that she is soon to leave Norwich. The resignation carried a suggestion that better seating facilities be provided at the Franklin Street park. The resignation was accepted and the suggestion was referred to the public works committee.

The council adopted a resolution authorizing the payment of $1,900 to Edwin L. Burnap in full settlement of his claim against the city in the suit filed by him and now pending in the superior court. Mayor Waters explained that the suit was an action to collect salary which M. Burnap claimed was due him as the result of his removal from office several years ago.

The council also adopted a resolution authorizing the borrowing of a sum or sums, not exceeding $25,000 as may be necessary, by the Gas & Electric Department in anticipation of its revenues, for the running expenses of the department, the money borrowed to be paid back from the revenues of the department before the end of the fiscal year.

Another resolution adopted authorizes the borrowing of a sum or sums not to exceed in the aggregate $125,000 for the improvements, etc., authorized by the city meeting.

Expenditures Authorized

The appropriations made at the city meeting this week were authorized by the council as were the sewers on Reath, Brook, and North streets and Burton avenue, Henry Gebrath, John E. Fitzgerald and Alfred G. Lillibridge were appointed a committee to build the sewers.

Department Bills

The following bills were approved: Fire Department, $7,461.94; Police $5,149.84; Street Lighting, $1,364.65; Water Department, $4,019.63; Gas & Electric Department, $85,848.22; Finance Department $8,372.17; Permanent Street Improvement, $18,749.82; Public Works Department, $19,557.49; Cemetery Department, $1,159.29.

The council adjourned about 9:40 o'clock.

NORWICH WHITE WAY PROBABLY BY OCTOBER

Details for Norwich's new $15,000 White Way are being worked out by the gas and electric department and work may be started in from 60 to 90 days as it would probably be that time before the materials could be secured, according to a statement yesday night by general manager C. W. Taggart.

The plans now under consideration contemplate the installation of 70 lamps but the type of pole and standard to be used has not been determined. All wiring will be underground and the light will not be centered over the street, but will be on the poles at the curb, the poles probably set on alternate sides of the street. It will probably be some time in October before the work can be completed and the lights turned on for the White Way through the Norwich business section.

According to the present plans some of the work will probably be let out by contract and some will be done by the city gas and electric department. Decision on how the work will be done will be reached as the details are worked out.

The White Way installation will first be put in along Main street from Bernham square to Washington square and up Broadway from Main street to Union square. The section on West Main street as far as Thames square will follow the completion of the other parts of the White Way.

WOMAN'S GUILD FAIR HAD $60 IN PROCEEDS

A meeting of the Women's Guild of St. Andrew's church was held on Thursday afternoon in the Guild room, with a large attendance. The meeting was opened by the president and reports from the entertainment and fair committees which were recently held, showed that the proceeds amounted to $60, the Girls Friendly Society making $15 on the candy booth. Plans for a strawberry festival were completed and will be given in the near future.

WILL ASSIST SUNDAY IN CHRIST CHURCH CHOIR

Ernest DeWald of New York who is spending a few days in town with Charles J. Dyer of Sachem street has kindly consented to assist the choir of Christ Church on Sunday morning. Mr. DeWald has done concert work and has a very pleasing voice. Mr. Bidelman, organist of Christ church, considers himself very fortunate in securing Mr. DeWald who will also sing solos on Sept. 30th.

No Sunday Boat Next Day.

There will be no communication between Norwich and Fishers Island for communication between automobile drivers' licenses. This is because Monday and all the state policemen will be on duty for handling traffic in connection with the boat race.

CHILDREN "HOOKING" RIDES BRING FATAL ACCIDENTS

The fascination that automobiles hold for children in the street is the direct cause of many of Connecticut's fatal accidents in the larger cities, according to a report from the department of motor vehicles.

Three findings on fatal automobile accidents that have been received in the state capitol recently from Coroner J. Gilbert Calhoun have moved the department of motor vehicles to issue a warning against the danger of children jumping on and off moving trucks. All three accidents investigated by Coroner Calhoun happened on the city streets of Hartford and all within one week. The victims were all children under ten years of age. No criminal negligence could be found on the part of any one of the three drivers.

One finding says, "On April 26 a small boy was riding on a truck and clinging on behind stealing a ride. Getting off suddenly and without any knowledge of the danger, and with no other idea that to get to the side of the road, he ran in front of a following automobile and was killed."

In commenting on an identical case that happened tow days before, Coroner Calhoun says, "This is another case in which children are fascinated by vehicles and compelled to hoop on behind." On May 3 the third of the trio took place and the finding says, "This is another instance in which autoists are surprised by the action of the children who are stealing a ride on the rear of approaching vehicles."

Such deaths as these, the department's report continues, cannot be charged to the carelessness or negligence of motorists, nor can the city police departments do much to control the situation. Any remedy must come through the education of the children by their parents and by educational agencies. The department, however, suggests that truck drivers be on the lookout for children riding on the rear of their vehicles.

RECEIVED MUCH CLOTHING FOR NEAR EAST RELIEF

The response of Taftville and Norwich Town and other section to the appeal for clothing to be shipped to the Near East was most generous. Articles of men's, women's and children's clothing were of excellent quality and durability and in fine condition, a large portion showing very little wear. In addition to collections brought in by Boy Scouts, large quantities of clothing in perfect condition were brought to the Norwich Town chapel during Thursday, two contributions coming from Greeneville. A very moderate estimate of the value of the bags packed would be over $350, in this country; while double this amount would not purchase these in the Caucasus, refugee camps and orphanages. The Norwich committee is very appreciative of the enthusiasm and great help that has made the drive in these localities a success.

BRIDGEPORT MAN PRESIDENT OF CONNECTICUT BANKERS

Edmund S. Wolfe of the First National bank of Bridgeport was elected president of the Connecticut Bankers' association at its annual meeting in New London Friday. Henry H. Pease of the Hartford-Connecticut Trust company was elected vice president; Charles Hoyt of the South Norwalk Trust company, secretary, and William G. Bissell of the Milford Trust company, treasurer.

The following executive committee was also elected: R. E. Chambers, Ansonia; J. H. Seaton, Torrington; W. H. Redfield, Danbury; J. C. Loomis, New Britain, and H. B. Barnes, Essex.

Graduates With Honors.

James P. Morley, second son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Morley of this city, was graduated with honors Friday afternoon at the Danvers preparatory school. Mr. Morley stood fourth in the honor class of 85, of which 45 were graduated.

Mr. and Mrs. Morley attended the graduation exercises, making the trip by motor.

Field Glasses to Scoutmaster Mousley.

In behalf of Troop No. 6, Boy Scouts of America, Ralph Johnson presented Louis Mousley, assistant scoutmaster, a pair of field glasses in appreciation of his services with the troop. The presentation took place at the troop headquarters Thursday evening. Mr. Mousley will soon leave Norwich for the west coast.

THREE DIVORCES GRANTED ON DESERTION GROUNDS

Three uncontested divorces were granted by Judge George E. Hinman in the superior court here Friday and in two other petitions he reserved decision after hearing the evidence.

On the ground of desertion since Feb. 21, 1918, Thomas Q. Oddo of New London was granted divorce from Bessie Farrar Oddo of 52 Joy Street, Boston. They were married July 29, 1913. He was given the custody of a seven year old daughter.

George Barry of Old Lyme was given divorce from Elsie Massy Barry of 323 Main street, Woonsocket, on the ground of desertion since Dec. 1, 1911. They were married Feb. 16, 1908.

On the ground of desertion since October, 1919, Grace Hall Guglielmetti of Norwich was granted divorce from Cesare Guglielmetti of Bremen, Germany. They were married Feb. 28, 1912 and have a minor daughter of whom the mother was given custody.

Judge Hinman took the papers after hearing the witnesses in the suit of Nellie Bump Clark of East Lyme for divorce from Burt R. Clark of San Diego, Cal. They were married in 1907 and the wife asks custody of children aged 9 and 12.

In the petition of Marjorie Fields Jordan of Norwich for divorce from William Jordan, formerly of New London, but now of parts unknown, the court took the papers after hearing the testimony. The couple was married in 1919.

The case of Mary V. Starr De Sylvia against Joseph De Sylvia went off the list.

In addition a suspended jail sentence of 30 days for a previous offense was put into effect. There is also about $70, balance due from Gomes on a previous $200 fine. If he is not able to raise the money to pay off the fines he will have about 280 days to work out.

FAVORABLE DEVELOPMENTS IN THE BUSINESS WORLD

Weekly Review Shows Car Loadings Continue at a High Record for the Season—There Are Other Indications That Industrial Activity Continues at Very Near the Record Rate in Spite of the Relaxation Reported for Some of the Basic Industries.

New York, June 17.—(By The A. P.)—Although the financial markets display a number of features developed during the week this was regarded in business circles as but a natural and familiar occurrence at this season of the year. There were, however, a number of developments that were regarded as especially favorable. There was a decided reduction of copper buying and an improvement in prices.

The increase in the dividend of the New York Central Railroad contributed strength to the rails, although the causes of industrial corporations reported to lower levels. The successful flotation of the Austrian loan with its immediate rise 40 points above the issue price, showed that the sentiment in good investment issues is still favorable.

Car loadings continue at a high record for the season and are interpreted in business circles as an indication that goods are going freely into distribution and not accumulating at the mills and factories. There are other indications that industrial activity continues at very near the record, in spite of the relaxation reported for some of the basic industries.

The census bureau's report on cotton consumption for May showed total takings by the mills of 620,070 bales. This is only 3,000 bales less than the record figure for March, and is held to indicate that the temporary suspensions by a number of mills in the Fall River district had very little effect during that month on the total output of textiles. During the past week, however, there has been further curtailment by mills in other textile centers, in New England.

The heavy mill consumption, in effect in considerable degree by the slump in exports of raw cotton. Only twice since the outbreak of the European war have exports been less than they were in May. These occasions were September, 1914, before the allied fleets had secured control of the seas, and in September, 1920, when the heavy buying by Europe was in full swing.

If domestic consumption of cotton are added together it appears that the total for March was 100,000 bales less than in May. In the face of this statistical showing the cotton market moved uncertainly during the week with a wide range of fluctuations, which were partly in response to weather conditions. In the speculative transactions, July options have accepted the lead in prices.

The wheat market showed a tendency to weakness, except for a brief rally near the end of the week, when destructive rains were reported in parts of the winter wheat belt. Important speculative developments have been comparatively absent, and altogether the total sales for the country promises to fall behind that of a year ago, the better crops in other countries indicating a considerable world position for this commodity. Corn prices, on the other hand, have remained firm, and of their present levels they have stimulated heavy sales of live stock, with the result that hogs recently sold in Chicago at the lowest prices since 1922.

Imports into the United States during May exceeded exports in value to the extent of $51,000,000. This is the 11th consecutive month in which the balance of trade against the United States has been unfavorable. For the first five months of the year the trade figures show an excess of imports of $131,552,000, as compared with an excess of exports amounting to $362,546,000 in the corresponding months of 1922. The heavy increase in imports in recent months is attributed to the inflow of raw materials for manufacture, and this in turn reflects the expansion of industrial activity in the United States during the current year.

FLOOD OF NEW BOND OFFERINGS LAST WEEK

New York, June 17.—(By the A. P.)—The flood of new bond offerings during the past week, aggregating $194,364,700, resumed in a reaction in all classes of listed bonds, losses ranging from fractions to more than two points. All of the new offerings met with ready sale and in addition the issue of $154,000,000 U. S. Treasury certificates of indebtedness issued on a per cent. basis, was heavily over-subscribed.

Railroad mortgages withstood the movement to lower ground in relatively good shape, many rail issues rising from a point to 3 3-4 points. This was in line with the movement of railroad shares which strengthened on the increased New York Central dividend and other favorable developments in that field.

Payments of an $89,660,000 interest obligation in its debt to the United States by Great Britain in Liberty bonds had little effect on the market but confirmed reports that recent movements in those bonds was dictated by the pool, by British buying. Active U. S. government issues receded from 1-32 to 1-4 of a point last week.

LORD ROBERT CECIL MEETS REPRESENTATIVE PORTER

Paris, June 17.—Lord Robert Cecil, former under secretary for foreign affairs and new chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and Representative Stephen G. Porter of Pennsylvania, who opposed in the house ridge passage of arms during Lord Robert's tour of America without meeting, unexpectedly came face to face during the recent conference of the reparations commission of the league of nations at Geneva.

The Englishman, a guest at an after dinner party, was leaning on a mantelpiece in characteristic lounging position when the American entered.

"What, that lounging lang individual with the wonderful head who seems to be trying to spread himself all over the mantelpiece?" asked the American, when told who it was Mr. Porter said.

I thought he must be a bishop. He doesn't look at all the way he writes."

"Would you like to meet Representative Porter?" Lord Robert was asked.

"Most certainly, with the greatest of pleasure, and may say, to him, that in a spirit of reciprocity I shall be pleased to call him 'Lord Stephen.'"

Lord Robert replied, alluding to a letter written him by the congressman while he was in the United States in which Mr. Porter addressed him as "My dear Mr. Cecil."

The two statesmen then spent half an hour in earnest and apparently agreeable conversation.

Chicago, June 17.—A motorman of an elevated train today held up "L" traffic on the North side for half an hour when he abandoned his train full of passengers to take a peek at the Philadelphia ball game at the Polo Grounds. When trains became badly tangled a search was instituted and he was found absorbed in the game.

The Kaiser's son-in-law is now engaged in selling automobiles.

Gasoline prices are lowered by all companies this week in various sections.

LABOR UNIONS DECLARE STRIKE IN BUENOS AIRES

Buenos Aires, June 17.—A majority of the labor unions of Buenos Aires declared a strike last night in consequence of the shooting in his cell in the prison yesterday of Kurt Wilckens, a German anti-militarist, to avenge the death of Lieutenant Colonel Resor B. Varela of the Argentine army, who was killed by Wilckens last January.

Wilckens died today from his wounds.

The maritime men tied up the port this afternoon, preventing several coastwise steamers from sailing. The police, who had been called upon to maintain order, were compelled during the afternoon to suppress several disturbances by the strikers to force the motormen of tram cars to abandon their posts. Several of the street cars were fired on by the strikers.

As a whole, however, it being Sunday, no signs were visible of a strike, except that the chauffeurs of taxicabs went out, leaving the city without cabs.

The socialist newspapers printed articles in which Wilckens was described as "the heroic avenger of the massacre of Santa Cruz." This referred to Varela's participation in the putting down of the uprising in Patagonia last year in which a number of labrgrers were killed.

ERWIN R. BERGDOLL TO BE RELEASED WEDNESDAY

Leavenworth, Kan., June 17.—(By the A. P.)—Erwin R. Bergdoll, wealthy Philadelphia draft evader, will be released from the disciplinary barracks here next Wednesday, after commitment of two years and ten months, for failure to perform military service in the war.

Major J. A. Stevens, adjutant at the barracks, said today that Bergdoll would be released, a free man, as no warrants were pending against him. Bergdoll's sentence called for four years at hard labor, but fourteen months of this was taken off for good behavior.

Bergdoll was asked for transportation to Philadelphia, Major Stevens said.

Erwin Bergdoll is a brother of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, who fled to Germany after the war, when authorities were searching for him on draft evasion charges.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 17.— Carlo Tresca, the anti-Fascisti speaker from New York, was not allowed to hold a public meeting in the Italian quarter here this afternoon. The police refused him permission as he had not secured a permit from the mayor.

A meeting he tried to hold here several weeks ago was broken up at the request of federal agents. Lawyers for Tresca and his friends say application will be made to the courts today to prevent police interference for a meeting on Monday.

First Prohibition Sunday.

Belfast, June 17.—(By The A. P.) Northern Ireland's first prohibition Sunday was the cause of a rush to towns just across the border from the six-county area for liquid refreshments. The Donegal, Cavan, Monaghan and Louth districts had many visitors. Bangor, the home of the Lipton cup challengers and Belfast's famous seaside resort, was hard hit, as was Warren Point on the County Down shore of Carlingford Lough.

ARE SMUGGLING ALIENS, BOOZE AND NARCOTICS

New York, June 17.—Vessels of the Sandy Hook rum fleet were accused by federal officials today of adding the smuggling of aliens and narcotics to the traffic in liquor. Three of the liquor ships lurking beyond the three-mile limit have aliens on board awaiting a chance to slip ashore, the officials said.

Investigation of the mysterious schooner Mary Beatrice, found in the lower bay last Wednesday with fifteen Chinese aboard, was said to have brought to light the new activities in rum row operations.

The investigators declared they were convinced that the Chinese tale of the departure of the Mary Beatrice from Havana, Cuba, with 20 Orientals aboard was false. Whether such a battle as the one described by the Chinese, in which five of their fellow countrymen and four of the crew were alleged to have been killed, after the captain deserted, actually had taken place, was still in doubt. The officials expressed the belief that such an encounter may have taken place on another vessel in Rum Row. The Chinese, according to all indications in the possession of the investigators, were transferred to the Mary Beatrice from another ship on the row.

One of the ships in Rum Row officials accused of having aliens aboard seeking to land illegally, is the Strandhill of British registry. The United States attorney's office had had an investigation of this ship under way for several weeks. Her movements are reported to be directed by a firm of brokers with Broadway offices.

The Mary Beatrice was of British registry, the British consul general informed the customs authorities, it was learned today. A cable to the World from Nassau, Bahama Islands, state dthat the schooner was owned by Mrs. George Albury. The skipper was reported to be the son of the owner, William Albury. This fact officials to admit that the men they were seeking as captain of the schooner was William Albury.

ITALIANS CLAMOR FOR IMMIGRATION TO AMERICA

Rome, June 17.—(By The A. P.)—The commissariat of immigration is beseiged by workmen, artisans and peasants from all the provinces who wish to be included in the new quota beginning July 7 for immigration to America. Premier Mussolini takes a personal interest in the selection of applicants, in order to insure that the best types of Italians will go to America.

It is desired by the authorities to demonstrate to the American government and people that if Italian immigration, instead of being limited to $2,000 yearly as now, were regulated to the selection of workmen according to the needs of American employes, both countries would benefit without injury to the American worker, as the Italian emigrants would not take their places, but simply fill vacancies.

ATLANTIC CITY BATHERS MUST WEAR STOCKINGS

Atlantic City, N. J., June 17.—One-piece bathing suits and bare limbs among fair bathers went under the ban along the beach today.

Sea nymphs were ordered to "roll 'em up" or leave the beach. A half hundred were "shooed" from the sands when they disaurred. There was little difficulty about the one-piece apparel, only two girls being chased during the day among the thousands of visitors who enjoyed the combers.

Sees Scrapping of Army's Mammoth Airplane

Measures 120 Feet From Tip to Tip—Has Six Liberty Motors and Weighs 40,000 Pounds — 90 Miles Per Hour.

Washington, June 17.—The army's new "two-and-a half planer" air giant, known as the Barling bomber, the biggest thing yet in flying machines, will soon be tested at Wilbur Wright field, Ohio, the war department having today announced the tentative selection of Lieut. Leigh Wade and Harold R. Harris as pilots for the test flight. The ship measures 120 feet from tip to tip, is powered with six Liberty motors, weighs 40,000 pounds and will have a flying speed of not less than 90 miles an hour.

"If the performance in flight is satisfactory," the department's announcement said, the air service engineering division at Dayton will have achieved the credit of putting in the air the largest successful airplane in the world."

The plane was designed for the air service by Walter H. Barling, it was constructed by the Wittemann Aircraft corpopation of Hasbrouck Heights, N. J. While it is generally rated as a triplane, the "mid plane" is so narrow as to prompt the expression "two-and-a-half-planer." The gasoline capacity is 2,000 gallons and oil 131 gallons and a minimum operating crew of four will be required.

"Specifications require that not more than 5,000 pounds of bombs shall be carried at one time," the announcement added, "but were anything so large as a 10,000 pound bomb developed, the Barling could lift any fly with it for two hours."

Spruce and "80,000 pound" steel were used in construction as compared to the 150,000 pound nickel steel used in building the navy's trans-Atlantic flier NC-4. Of the fuselage construction the statement said:

"Six inch shells could probably pass through the tail portion without bringing the plane down. There are no vital longerons or wires which if shot would end the flight.

The ship is scheduled to have a 12-hour full speed flight capacity and will carry seven guns sweeping the whole field of approach of enemy machines. Controls of the six motors are centralized for operation through a single control stick, added features being means of shutting down the engines on one side without reducing the drive of the others to aid in negotiating power turns." Pilot controls are in duplicate with the two pilots sitting side by side permitting frequent change in flight.

FLEET OF RUMSHIPS OFF ATLANTIC CITY

Atlantic City, N. J., June 17.—A fleet of rumships is supposed to be [illegible] miles off Atlantic City, according to word brought ashore tonight by rushing smacks returning from the Banks.

Auxiliary craft of the cruiser type were hovering around the fleet, apparently waiting for favorable weather to make parties ashore, the smack crews stated.

Although coast guards have been on the alert, the embargo runners have landed more than 2,000 cases of Scotch whiskey and champagnes during the last week, according to word that has reached the authorities. One ship, the Nunsatia, a forty-footer, with 400 cases, was taken early in the week, and on Friday night guards from the Absecon station here exchanged shots with another that got away in the darkness.

The boast of the shore bootleggers is that they can unload and secrete a craft the size of the Nunsatia if they have a five minute lead on their pursuers when they get inside the port.

AMPLIFIER USED BY TRAIN ANNOUNCER IN PARIS

Paris, June 17.—Sporting people en route to Chantilly to the race track last Sunday to see the derby run, were startled at the North station by a thundering voice that called out the track number and time of departure of trains for the celebrated racing town.

This was the first experience of the French with a voice amplifier. They talk about it as a new discovery and as "a voice from heaven." The newspapers speculate on the possibility of extending the use of the "voice of thunder" to electioneering and open air concerts.

The voice amplifier, however, already was known in "movie" circles, where it is freely used by directors.

Montreal, Que., June 17.—A conspiracy to smuggle counterfeit American bank notes from the United States into Canada was charged by detectives when "Kid" Cohen and "Kid" Albert, who said they were prize fighters from New York, were arraigned yesterday on a charge of attempting to burglarize a shop here. Spurious $5 bills were found on the prisoners, it was said. They were held in $400 bail each on the burglary charge.

According to the detectives, an organization has been formed to smuggle counterfeit money across the border into Canada.

Says Prohibition is Corrupting Mankind

Homer S. Cummings Alarmed at the Revelations of Bootlegging—Appeals for Observance of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Bridgeport, June 17.—"If the various states do not support and supplement the government, the problem of law enforcement will become exceedingly difficult," declared Homer S. Cummings, former democratic national committeeman and state's attorney for Fairfield county, in an address here tonight at a public meeting called by the Ministerial association. Mr. Cummings' talk was on Liberty and Law, and was concerned chiefly with a discussion of the problem of enforcing the liquor laws.

"It is perfectly manifest that the United States government cannot successfully police the entire United States," he said. "There seems to be no doubt that the federal government is being loaded down with burdens under which it is staggering and that bureaucracy is being built up in Washington which in time will know no master."

After discussing the "serious breakdown of the law," in such fields as automobile thievery and the sale of narcotics, Mr. Cummings turned to the question of bootlegging, "with its many attendant evils, including bribery, forgery, perjury, political corruption, theft and murder."

"I must confess that I was appalled at the revelations as to the ramifications of this industry," he declared, "I came upon aspects of it which were so startling as to seem scarcely possible. Not only is a large amount of money made out of the bootlegging enterprises, but young men are seduced from their legitimate livelihood to go on these illegal ventures."

In making an appeal for the observance of the 18th amendment, Mr. Cummings said:

"The time has passed for intelligent men to contend that the 18th amendment was passed either by stealth or by inadvertance or impulsively. It was the fruit of the growing sentiment of the country which has been increasing in volume for years."

Bringing the problem to Connecticut, he declared:

"There should be greater uniformity in the enforcement of the Connecticut liquor law. My information is that the different counties seem to be proceeding upon different theories. In some of the city courts convictions have run as high as 95 per cent, while in others convictions have only been 40 per cent. In some courts the average fines have amounted only to $40. This leads to confusion, uncertainty, injustice and some method must be devised to bring about harmony of procedure. . . . There is nothing left for the courts to do but to impose jail sentences if they are in earnest in the enforcement of the law. We have come to that point in Connecticut."

Mr. Cummings also declared that the appointment of prohibition officials should be taken out of politics and that enforcement officers should receive adequate salaries.

THREE BOSTON POLICEMEN INJURED DURING RAID

Boston, June 17.—Boston policemen attempting to ascend a narrow stairway in Chinatown tonight to raid an alleged opium den were routed by a barrage of bullets, lumber, electric light bulbs and other missiles. Three officers were injured. One was struck in the eye with an light bulb, another had an eye hurt with a piece of lumber, while a third, forced to jump down a flight of stairs, had his foot pierced with a rusty nail at the bottom.

The policemen, returning to the attack, found the Chinese gone, but seized opium and smoking paraphernalia. Yong Wong, proprietor of the Chinese general merchandise store in the building, was arrested.

Searching Yong Wongs store, the officers had discovered a hollow partition, inside which hung cans of opium suspended on strings from a room on the third floor of the building. When they attempted to reach this room the Chinese gave battle. Three other places were raided tonight; eleven Chinese were arrested, and opium valued at $25,000 was seized.

LAUSANNE CONFERENCE A RECORD FOR DURATION

Lausanne, June 17 (By the A. P.).—The Near East conference appears to be establishing a record for duration. The ninth week of the second phase opens tomorrow with even betting that the negotiations will stretch into another fortnight. The concessions of the Turks with regard to the Ottoman debt are not sufficient to suit the allies and it is said in allied circles that Ismet Pasha must compromise further if he hopes to sign peace at Lausanne.

Eighty per cent. of the debt is held by the French, and France is showing particular firmness in supporting the argument of the allies that the legal right of the bondholders to be paid in foreign currency cannot be abrogated by the Lausanne treaty. It is contended that curtailment of this right would establish a dangerous precedent for future dealings with their countries.

POLICE AND FIREMEN GUIDED SIXTY TO SAFETY

Schenectady, N. Y., June 17.—Police and firemen guided sixty fourth floor residents to safety when fire broke out on the third floor of an office and apartment building here this afternoon. Four men and two women who climbed from the fourth floor windows to a small ledge overhanging the street and threatened to jump were encouraged by policemen to re-enter and try the stairs.

The fire was extinguished with chemicals at a minor loss.

[illegible] ALARMED BY THE FOOD SITUATION

French Now Occupy the Railroads by Which Up to Last Saturday the Germans Had Been Provided Food Supplies From Unoccupied Germany—Miners and Factory Hands Held Meetings Sunday to Determine What Action Should be Taken.

Essen, June 17.—(By the A. P.)—The miners and factory workers in various parts of the Ruhr held meetings today to determine what action should be taken in view of the latest moves of the forces of occupation to break the passive resistance of the Germans by the taking over of the railroad stations of Dortmund, Bochum, Herne, Gelsenkirchen and other industrial towns. The French now control absolutely all the railroad lines leading into and through the Ruhr by which up to last Saturday the Germans had been bringing in food supplies from unoccupied Germany.

Owing to the seizure of the lines, according to the French "authorities the Germans now will be forced to come to terms with the French in order to allow the necessary food supplies to reach the inhabitants of the Ruhr.

The Germans claim French gu[illegible] have refused the Germans permission to enter the Dortmund station and take charge of French milk destined for hospitals and the children. The French deny this claiming that the railroad men all quit work when the troops arrived and that they have not tried to return since that time.

Relief workers in Dortmund and other places say the food situation is serious. At the meetings today at the Ruhr workers plans were discussed to overcome the difficulty created by the food shortage. The workers claim prices already have begun to soar. They view the situation with much alarm.

Meetings have been arranged for the Ruhr officials at Bochum and Dortmund to decide what action to take—whether to cooperate with the French, or to continue their resistance or try to reach some compromise.

PRESIDENT'S PARTY TO REACH YELLOWSTONE JUNE 30

Washington, June 17.—Not only the scenic wonders of Yellowstone Park and the Yosemite valley await President Harding and his party en route to and from Alaska, but the sturdy trout that negotiate the rushing streas are practicing their stunts to give the distinguished visitors a thrilling entertainment.

The president's party is expected to reach Yellowstone June 30, on the outward trip, and will view the Yosemite on the way back from Alaska, spending two days in each reservation. Mr. Harding will be the third president to visit Yellowstone National Park, just twenty years after Roosevelt and forty years after Arthur went there.

Entering Yellowstone Park at Gardiner, the northern entrance, the presidential party will proceed to mammoth Hot Springs terraces, and thence to Old Faithful inn at the upper Geyeser basin for lunch. Park Rangers promise hourly performances by Old Faithful and are hopeful that Giant Geyser, an irregular performer which throws water 250 feet in the air, will be in full operation in honor of the president's visit.

After spending the night at the inn, the party will motor to West Thumb, Lake Yellowstone, and to the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone, for lunch before tackling the trout. The party will return to Gardiner in the evening. And resume its journey.

Returning from Alaska, the president will enter Yosemite National Park, California, at El Portal, July 23, and motor to Glacier Point, to spend the night, 8,254 feet above the valley in which an out-door buffet luncheon will be served the next day. DIED FROM AN ALLEGED BEATING BY POLICEMEN

New York, June 17.—A demand that District Attorney Banton call attention of the grand jury investigating the death fo Thaddeus Lynch, who died from an alleged beating by a policeman, to the alleged assault by two special service policeman on 14 war veterans in a saloon last night, was made today by Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier. The ex-service men charged they had been attacked while they were changing from uniforms to civilian clothes after attending Lynch's funeral. Several were said to have been blackjacked by the officers.

Assemblyman Cuvillier also directed a protest to Mayor Hylan and suggested a general investigation into the "wanton brutality of police officers."

"In the days of the czars of Russia," he wrote, "there was never such an autocratic assumption of authority and so horrible display of brutality as has been exercised under the authority of Commissioner Enright.

BULGARIA REASSURED BY PREMIER POINCARE

Sofia, June 17.—(By the A. P.)—The ministry of foreign affairs has received Premier Poincare's message assuring Bulgaria that France desired to encourage every government wishing to execute the treaty provisions and work with its neighbors for the advancement of the Balkans.

"There is widespread speculation regarding the alleged financial irregularities of the Stamboulisky regime.

According to the announcement evidence was discovered today that forty million leva had been withdrawn, drawn from the foreign ministry funds without authorization.

The government telegraphed today to the Czechoslovakian authorities asking for the extradition of M. Daskalov, minister at Prague, and to demand for the extradition of the former minister of Agriculture Oboff. The Bulgarian minister at Bucharest was also notified by Rumania to leave within ten hours.

The disposition of the body of former Premier Stamboulisky has not yet been decided upon, but it is expected it will be brought here immediately.

TO BE NAMED BULGARIAN MINISTER TO GERMANY

Berlin, June 17.—(By the A. P.)—Denial is made by the Bulgarian legation of reports that Vassil Radolavoff, former Bulgarian premier, is to be named minister here under the new Bulgarian regime. The official statement emphasizes that the former premier, who with the members of his cabinet was convicted recently of having brought Bulgaria into the war on the side of the Central powers, is strictly a party men with strongly outspoken political views; thus it would be out of the question for him to be the foreign representative of a coalition administration such as the country now has.

The legation denies also that either former King Ferdinand or M. Radolavoff had any part in causing the overthrow of Stamboulisky. Ferdinand, it explains, is living in Bavaria as a private citizen and takes no part in Bulgarian affairs, Radoslavoff is in Berlin.

The legation says that the present Bulgarian government regrets deeply the killing of Stamboulisky; it would have preferred a trial.

KILLED IN A JOY RIDE THROUGH CENTRAL PARK

New York, June 17.—An unidentified man, one of a party of six that Peter Heagney, of Highwood Park, N. J., met in a cafe, was killed early today in a joy ride through Central Park when he drove Heagney's automobile into a lamp post. Three other occupants of the car were injured. Heagney was held on a charge of a homicide.

Heagney told the police he struck up an acquaintance with six men in a cafe. He invited them to a ride and the man who was killed took the wheel. Two of the party were taken to their homes and the rest continued to ride through the park.

Heagney said he told his newly made friend not to drive so fast, but he replied "I know the cops. They won't arrest me." A moment later the collision occurred and the machine was tossed ten feet.

None of the occupants of the car could identify the dead man. He wore cuff links with the initials "J. A. H."

COMMITTED SUICIDE AFTER TWO VAIN ATTEMPTS

New Haven, June 17.—Successful after two vain attempts to commit suicide within the past two weeks, Morris Cutter, 46 years of age, a shoe repairer, was found dead today in the cellar of his home where he had hanged himself. Cutter had been despondent for some time, because of homesickness for his relatives in Europe whom he had not seen for more than 30 years.

Cutter previously had tried to kill himself by hanging and by asphyxiation but had been prevented by his wife. A sixteen-year-old boy delivering milk saw him hanging in the cellar but fled in fright. It is believed that Cutter was still alive at the time.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES.

We Are Seven.

A simple child
That lightly draws its breath,
And feels its life in every limb,
What should it know of death?

I met a little cottage girl:
She was eight years old, she said;
Her hair was thick with many a curl
That clustered round her head.

She had a rustic, woodland air,
And she was wild and clad:
Her eyes were fair, and very fair;
Her beauty made me glad.

"Sisters and brothers, little maid,
How many may you be?"
"How many? Seven in all," she said,
And wondering looked at me.

"And where are they? I pray you tell."
She answered, "Seven are we;
And two of us at Conway dwell,
And two are gone to sea.

"Two of us in the churchyard lie,
My sister and my brother;
And, in the churchyard cottage, I
Dwell near them with my mother."

"You say that two at Conway dwell,
And two are gone to sea,
Yet you are seven! I pray you tell,
Sweet maid, how this may be."

Then did the little maid reply,
"Seven boys and girls are we;
Two of us in the churchyard lie,
Beneath the churchyard tree."

"You run about, my little maid;
Your limbs they are alive;
If two are in the churchyard laid,
Then ye are only five."

"Their graves are green, they may be seen,"
The little maid replied;
"Twelve steps or more from mother's door,
And they are side by side.

"My stockings there I often knit,
My kerchief there I hem;
And there upon the ground I sit,
And sing a song to them.

"And often after sunset, Sir,
When it is light and fair,
I take my little porringer,
And eat my supper there.

"The first that died was sister Jane;
In bed she moaning lay,
Till God released her of her pain;
And then she went away.

"So in the churchyard she was laid;
And, when the grass was dry,
Together round her grave we played,
My brother John and I.

"And when the ground was white with snow,
And I could run and slide,
My brother John was forced to go,
And he lies by her side."

"How many are you, then," said I,
"If there are two in heaven?"
Quick was the little maid's reply,
"O master! we are seven."

"But they are dead; those two are dead!
Their spirits are in heaven."
'Twas throwing words away, for still
The little maid would have her will,
And said, "Nay, we are seven."
—William Wordsworth.

How Fast Can You Say It?

If a Hottentot taught a Hottentot tot
To talk ere the tot could totter,
Ought the Hottentot tot
To be taught to say "naught"
Or "naught," or what ought to be taught her?

If to hoot and to toot a Hottentot tot
Be taught by a Hottentot tutor,
Should the tooter get hot
If the Hottentot tot
Hoot and toot at the Hottentot tooter?

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO WIDE-AWAKES.

You have all made up stories in writing essays or in writing to Uncle Jed, but have you ever made up a story in your own mind about a giant who lived ever since the war began, and saw all the things that happened, year after year, century after century? People's lives are so short, much less than a hundred years apiece usually, that they do not see much of what really goes on in the world. Why, there is no one living who can tell us, from his or her own experience, of the Revolutionary war, and very few remain who had anything to do with the Civil war. How interesting it would be if we could get to an old everlasting giant and say to him: "Tell us how the world looked when Noah stepped out of the ark and invited all the animals to come out and enjoy a home after their long confinement."

There are, indeed, giants nearly if not quite old enough to tell us about the first things that happened in this world—if they could speak. They are the trees that in some parts of the world have endured for hundreds and hundreds of years, reaching up to the thousands. Some of these trees are in our own California, the giant redwoods, as they are called, which are estimated by tree experts to be up to 5,000 years old. Then there are carefully saved cypress trees—one in Mexico is thought to be 4,000 years old, and in Africa there are baobabs that may have seen 4,000 years pass by. Oaks and elms are often very old, too, hundreds of years old, at least.

What a strange, interesting story of the world these trees could tell! Perhaps they do tell it, perhaps they whisper it to other trees on nights when the wind is rustling, and the other trees in turn tell it to their neighbors, till the tale has gone around the whole earth. If we make friends of the trees, and are always kind to them, and never cut their bark as a break their branches, maybe we will learn to understand their language, and some night when they are speaking together we will hear a wonderful story.

Olives.

Dear Uncle Jed: The olive is chiefly raised for its oil, which is obtained by pressure, and the olive is also used for pickling. The tree has been grown in California since the old mission days, and is raised extensively in that state. The tree occasionally grows to a height of ten feet. The grayish-green leaves are green always and the fruit varies in color. The oil is high in food value.

Looking for the Cows

Dear Uncle Jed: One morning in May my brother and I were looking for the cows. We went up on our mountain. We could see many houses, but they were far away. We found some dog tooth violets. There are a great many of them up there. I picked several. They call them dog tooth because of the center.

We went on after a while where there were some ferns. We were going along in the ferns when we saw something moving in the bushes. So we went nearer and we saw a great long snake with some little ones on her back. So we ran farther up the hill. The snake came after us but did not get us because Russell took a stone in his hand and threw it. It hit the snake.

After we went down farther we saw another snake bigger than the other one but the snake did not start after us. We went on and on but could not find the cows.

After a while we got on the road and we came to a spring. I went in, got a drink and gave my flowers some water.

A Camping Trip

Dear Uncle Jed: One day in late August my brother and some friends and I went camping for a couple of days.

We took a large tent, provisions, blankets and a sleeping bag. When we got there we put up the tent. We slung it across a pole and staked it down securely.

Then we got some hemlock branches and put them on the ground so as to make it softer.

After we finished this it was almost time for supper. So a couple of us went to the spring to get some water, while the others made the fire. After we had a good bed of coals we began to cook our supper.

After supper we fixed the fire and told stories and jokes.

We went to bed about 9.30 so we could be up early next morning. When we got up next morning we went down to the river for a swim, but because the water was so cold we did not stay in long.

We had breakfast after that and then we cleaned the dishes.

Soon we packed up our tent and other things. Then we were ready to go home. The grass was wet with dew and we were pretty wet when we got home.

Your friend,

Keeping a Promise

Dear Uncle Jed: It is related of the Persian poet Abdul Kasdir that when he left home to go to Bagdad his mother placed in his hands a purse containing forty deniers and with tears, "I commend you to the protection of God. We may never meet again in this world. Promise me, my son, never to tell a lie." Abdul promised.

As the party which he was traveling with neared the city of Hamadan, they were attacked by a band of robbers who soon overpowered them. One of the robbers coming up to Abdul asked what he had in his possession. Remembering the promise of his mother, the boy answered frankly "Forty deniers."

The robber laughed at this, thinking the boy was trying to escape search. "What have you in your possession?" asked another robber, looking at him with a fierce scowl.

Abdul answered as before. When the robbers had collected and distributed the spoils they had secured from the travelers, Abdul was brought before the leader who asked him what he possessed.

"Two of your band have already inquired," replied Abdul, "and I told them I had forty deniers. They are sewed up in the lining of my coat, you can find them there."

The chief ordered the coat to be ripped open and the coins were there as Abdul had stated. The robber then asked in surprise:

"Why did you reveal what you might so easily kept a secret?"

"Because I wished to keep my promise to my mother, never to tell a lie."

"Keep your money, boy, and go your way," said the leader of the robbers. "You have acted nobly in fulfilling your promise."

Anticipating a Fine Vacation

Dear Uncle Jed: Last Monday (June 4) examinations began and as I did not have to take any I had a whole week of vacation. I have to practice every morning, but in the afternoon I can do anything I want to. My friend Esther has gone to the beach and it will soon be my turn to go and I will enjoy myself very much. Wednesday I went to Norwich with my grandma because she had broken her glasses and had to have them fixed. We met several ladies that grandma knew and they urged us to go to the Social Corner so we went and there was a very nice dinner and program. We enjoyed ourselves immensely as We have twenty-six girls and boys out of 39. The boys and girls have named their club the Eagle Eye society. Last week when we were in school we saw an oriole in the elm tree.

Sincerely yours,

Cocoa.

Dear Uncle Jed: The cocoa tree can only thrive in a hot moist climate. The soil must contain certain chemical elements. Salt is fatal to the cocoa tree.

The planting is done in two ways either by placing the seeds directly in the ground or by raising the trees in a nursery and transplanting the seedlings.

The cocoa is tender and cannot bear the excessive heat of the sun or bear up against very strong winds.

The trees are frequently attacked by diseases such as "canker" and "black rot" and by insects or rubbing, and spraying must be practiced to keep the orchards in good condition.

When the trees are three or four years old they begin to flower and a few fifty years regular crops may be expected.

When the fruit is ripe the pods are cut from the trees with sharp knives before the beans are sent to market or cured. Otherwise the seeds would germinate and spoil.

After drying the beans in the sun, sometimes washing, and polishing, the beans are ready for market.

JOHN ROBSON, Age 10.

Birds.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write to you about the birds.

Birds are one of the most beautiful things on earth. Anyone who loves the birds loves nature.

Some birds have more pleasurable characteristics about them than have other birds. For instance, the barn swallow, or the oriole, is more beautiful and useful than the English sparrow.

The English sparrow is a quarrelsome little bird, but just the same it is in one sense lovely.

Most of our birds are useful for the destruction of insects. Others are valued for their songs.

Many kindnesses can be shown the birds. In winter we can sweep a space free from snow and sprinkle the ground with bread or cracker-crumbs. We can also hang a piece of suet on the bare limbs of the trees.

Children or grownups who destroy birds should be severely punished. There are exceptions, however. Chicken hawks are sometimes destructive. Also the owls are, but if people keep not so careless owls would not touch the hens or chickens, because they only fly by night and cannot catch the hens if they have proper houses and roosts.

A Party.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about a party we had the Friday before Christmas in our school. We had a Christmas tree in our room. There was a present for everyone. Each child brought a present and then we drew numbers. The numbers went up as far as 31. Friday morning we had our exercise and then the party began. Our teacher let some of the children pass candies and cake. Then she served the rest herself. After recess we got our presents. I got a handkerchief.

Some of the boys got girls' presents, then everyone laughed. If a girl got a boys present she could change with a boy if she wanted to. Every one went home happy.

The Story of a Quarter

Dear Uncle Jed: "Why is our museum going to make you made into a coin? You are old and bent. I would look much prettier than you," said a bright new quarter.

"You have no history attached to your past," said the old quarter.

"You are so old you must have had many adventures. Will you tell me about them?"

"I will tell you only the facts. It would take too long to tell the details.

"In 1750 I came from England on a ship. I was then a part of a big, beautiful mint. My new home was in Philadelphia. I was pressed very much as the king used to drink milk out of me.

"In 1792 a mint was established in Philadelphia. The coinage of the United States was ready to begin and their old wishes to be made into money. Many other things were there. We were all thrown in a great heap. We were boiled and boiled. I think they would never get through with us.

"Every person got a certain amount of money. As we were the first ever made, we were greatly prized. The new mistress decided to keep me as a relic.

"One day her purse opened while she was out walking and I dropped out. Later a woman found me, and I was passed from one person to another till the other day mistress got me from the butcher, and she saw the name on me. I am very valuable, that is why I will be made into a mug."

My First Score.

Dear Uncle Jed: Last winter my friend and I used to get traps. We kept a close watch on them and every other day or two went to see if anything had favored us. We experienced the great scare before we opened the pleasure of catching our first rabbit. It got deadly quiet among some sly friend dropped the trap and a pair of feet sprang up and down, making a startling noise. We both thought it was a rattlesnake and started a run which out of breath we stopped a moment and found that we had run too far. Some of it was still twisted in my friend's coat button. We knew then what had caused our fright and we laughed heartily over it.

Fair Play.

Dear Uncle Jed: Boys and girls should play fair. Fair play is a jewel, but foul play is very much of a boy or girl may show as much school and truth and justice in play as map and woman may in their dealings.

There is always a true way and a false way, a bright way and a dull way. This true way is clear, and straight, the false way is foul and crooked. Some boys in their play like the crooked and not straight forward way. Cheating and our boys will try to cheat at their play. They will walk in the far when they bowl or give at cricket and they will cook their toes up across the ring at marbles if and soon. The cheaters and boys will quarrel. The cheats and tyrants will always want their own way.

Thus it is that in their sports boys may train themselves to be good or bad men. If they are fair they will make their way to be good men in the same. If they are cheats and shirkers when they grow up they will cheat and shirk when they are men and be wicked men.

May boys learn to play fair and kindly. We all need to learn to be master true and honest in our play, and when we grow up we will be true and honest in our work. Unto which may we all learn to do so.

SUBMARINE BASE HAS BETTER OF NORWICH CLUB IN HECTIC GAME

In a game that was featured by brilliant batting the Submarine Base nine defeated the Norwich team 11 to 9, at the Fairgrounds on Sunday afternoon. The game, on the whole was a good one to watch with many exciting moments and the batting by both teams was good. The Base, was represented by a good, following of enthusiastic rooters who though they spent most of the time cheering Norwich, the home team, could easily be heard cheering him. Little did they know that Norwich was one of the best short stop in the league when he was with the old Cincinnati Red Stockings years ago. Tommy has also umpired league ball.

Carelessness on the bases was one of the contributing causes to the defeat of the local team. On two occasions was this particularly noticeable once when Chappie Geer leaned between first and second on a hit ball and was forced out at second after Dinty Moore had dropped the ball, the other when Eddie Hart was caught napping asleep off second base in the ninth inning. Had Hart been in the game there was a strong possibility of the local team tying up the score in the ninth frame.

Catcher Dave Jurwich cut eight men down at second, two of which were put out by Mooney and three at third when a man was attempting to steal home. Base hits were few and far between, only seven being made off him in the entire game. Davis pitched good ball and had the breaks of the game with him at all times. Dinty Moore played for the Base and batted and fielded in fine style. Burns, Perry, second were also the leaders of the game with their batting. Dinty, in the third inning pulled off a perfect unassisted double play and has ever been a star on the local diamond. He pulled Dryden's fine drive with a running jump and then staged second doubling Mills, Burns accepted nine hard chances with perfect ease and netted the locals of several hits.

The Base started off strong in the first inning, getting one run. After Gaw had fanned, Burns, Hatcher hit to center for Burns, forced out D. Moore, Lockwood, batter, Moore tried to steal second, but was forced to first, but by his base running Moore.

Norwich evened up the score in their half of the first on an error by D. Moore which put Mills on first. Mazey hit a high fly to center which Harrell muffed and Mills went to third. He scored when Davis made a wild heave to the bag to catch him. The second inning was a fast inning, the first three men on each team being easy outs although Hart made a drive to left center and Bishop into the hands of Harrell. Gaw took care of the three men in the next inning, striking out two and throwing the other out at first.

In the last of the third, Gaw doubled and scored when Liberty duplicated with one to right field. Mills scored Liberty with a long single to left. It was at this time that Moore pulled his brilliant fielding stunt getting off a chance at a more earned run. This was the last of the scoring for the locals.

A double by Moore and a single by Lockwood netted another run in the fourth for the base. To this they added three more in the fifth on a base on balls, a sacrifice by Davis and singles by Burns and Moore and a double by Lockwood. The game from then on was tight until the final frame when the locals made their final stand. Hart was safe on a Harrell second muff of a high fly. Chubby filed out to Davis and Mulvey walked putting Hart on second. Eddie took a healthy lead off second and then fell asleep, a quick throw from Davis to D. Moore catching him flat footed by about four feet. Gaw ended sending Mazey to second but Bishop filed out to Compton ending the game. The score:

YANKS SLAUGHTER TIGERS IN EASY CONTEST

New York, June 17.—The New York American team Monday defeated Detroit in the first game of their series here today, the score being 9 to 0.

Dauss, who won the only game lost by New York on its last western trip, was hit hard by the Yankees, 11 hits being made off him in less than three innings. Olsen, who succeeded Dauss, also was batted hard. Wells, a newcomer from Bethany college, West Virginia, who joined Detroit only yesterday, finished the game and retired New York without a hit in two innings, fanning Ruth in the eighth.

Ruth hit his 15th home run of the season off Dauss in the second inning. Bush pitched his second successive shutout for the Yankees. Score:

MOKAN'S HOMER WINS FOR THE PHILLIES

Chicago, June 17.—Johnny Mokan's home run with two men on base in the fourth inning, when Philadelphia concentrated its attack against Ernie Osborne, put the visitors out in front and they defeated Chicago 6 to 4 in the first game of the series. Glazner settled down after an unsteady start and pitched great ball, fanning O'Farrell, Friberg and Miller in a row, with men on second and third, in the fifth. WILDE HAS ADVANTAGE OVER VILLA IN MANY WAYS FOR TONIGHT'S BATTLE

New York, June 17—(By the A. P.)—Jimmy Wilde, "Mighty Atom" of Wales, champion of the world's flyweight boxers, will have an advantage in height, reach, weight and strength when he defends his title in a fifteen round match with Pancho Villa of the Philippines, at the Polo Grounds tomorrow night. But the little Welshman will spot his opponent ten years of age. Wilde is 31, the oldest Irish, the Philippines, 21.

Age in the boxing ring won respect, however, when Jess Willard, in his forties, knocked out Young Floyd Johnson in a contest at Yankee Stadium recently. Wilde belittles the talk of age against youth. A man isn't old at 31, he declares, but is at his best.

Until a couple of years ago Wilde never weighed more than 104 or 108 pounds for his bouts, he now is at 110 and claims to have acquired greater strength and stamina with the extra pounds.

Wilde is one of the hardest and most accurate punching little men in the world. More than half of his many fights he has won by knockouts. His knockout punch has been developed to greater power since the January night in 1921 when he was knocked out in a London ring by Pete Herman, of New Orleans, former bantam weight champion of the world. That was the first time that Wilde had been counted out.

Villa is the ring's whirlwind. Not so straight of punch, or even as strong as Wilde, he balances the difference in aggressiveness. He fights close, directs his attacks to the body, shifting to the head when he has made openings and never permits his opponent to rest.

Both men finished their training today, Wilde playing 18 holes of golf with his manager and Villa pulling the oars of a skiff on Pompton Lakes, N. J.

The measurements of Wilde and Villa follow:

WOLVERINES STAND OUT IN COLLEGE ATHLETICS

Chicago, June 17—(By the A. P.)—Michigan's victory in the third annual track and field championships of the National Collegiate Athletic association at Stagg Field Saturday added brilliance to a record which probably will be remembered as the most successful for a year in athletics in the Wolverine history.

In addition to sweeping the field in the national competition, the Ann Arbor teams fared well in every branch of sport. They won the indoor and outdoor western conference meets, the undisputed baseball championship of the big ten area, tied with the University of Iowa for first place in the final football standing, and played the leader's game in basketball until sickness deprived Coach Mather of some of his star players. No conference school has finished so well in all departments for some years. In view of the year's achievements, the Michigan team in the western conference golf tournament here beginning June 18, will be watched with added interest.

The maize and blue victory was no hollow honor as proved by the fact the game produced the best performances of the season in four out of fifteen events scheduled in the four principal competitive meets of the United States national collegiate, western conference, eastern collegiate and Missouri Valley. An analysis of the best times and distances in the four meets reveals that Michigan's work in gathering 31 points in Saturday's games against 14 1-2 for Leland Stanford, her nearest rival, was notable for the accomplishment of the task through the keenest competition of the year. The four events best executed in the national meet were the two mile run, high hurdles, broad jump and discus throw.

Booth of Johns Hopkins negotiated the two mile distance in 9:22.6, better by 3.3 seconds than his winning time in the eastern games.

Riley of the Kansas Aggies completed the high hurdles in 0:15.2, the season's best time and a tie with Johnson's performance for Illinois in the big ten meet.

Dehart Hubbard, Michigan's colored star, set the year's standard for the broad jump with his leap of 24 feet, 2 inches. One half an inch better than his mark in the western conference outdoor contest and within an inch of the world's record.

Lieb of Notre Dame, threw the discus 143 feet 4 inches, approximately four feet better than Neufeld's win for California in the eastern intercollegiate and more than ten feet ahead of Brooker's throw for Michigan in the Ann Arbor meet.

By their performances Saturday, the four are marked as among the most likely candidates for places on the American Olympic team of 1924.

RIVERVIEW SLAUGHTERS BALTIC TEAM IN LOOSE GAME

West pitched another shutout game for Riverview at the State Hospital Saturday afternoon, the victims this time being the Baltic A. A. who allowed Riverview to score 15 runs to their none. West fanned 16 of the Baltic hitters and held them to two scattered singles, one of which was made on less of a fluke.

Riverview hit Papineau freely and his support was somewhat shaky at times. The game was called in the seventh inning by mutual consent and much to the relief of the fans. The score:

ASHLAND A. A. BEATS VELVETEENS BY CLOSE GAME

Fast fielding which resulted in four fast double plays prevented the J. E. Martin team from winning out against the Ashland A. A. Sunday afternoon at the J. E. Martin Co. diamond in the Jewett City park, winning 6 to 4. The game was close until the seventh inning when Lemieux weakened and Ashland scored three runs. The velveteen made a strong attempt for the game in the ninth inning but could only get two of the needed 4 runs Lemieux pitched good ball fanning 11 of the opposing batsmen. The score:

FIRPO KNOCKS OUT HUBBARD IN SECOND

Mexico City, June 17—(By the A. P.)—Luis Angel Firpo this afternoon knocked out Jim Hibbard, an American heavyweight, in the second round.

The fight, which was to have been at twenty rounds, Hardly gave the large crowd which had gathered in the bull ring a chance to warm up from the chilly rainfall. The rain fell heavily before the boxers came into the ring, and fight promoters decided that they would call off the bout. There was a riotous demonstration on the part of the spectators, however, and the fighters were forced to carry out their part of the program.

Hibbard did not have the faintest chance against the Argentine giant. Firpo allowed him to go through the first round and then finished him off without delay shortly after the bell had sounded for the second round.

Owing to protests in several newspapers against the unequal match the promoters an Firpo announced that it would be an "exhibition."

THE MEMORY WINS THE NEW LONDON TO BERMUDA RACE

Hamilton, Bermuda, June 17 (By the A. P.)—A number of the American yachts in the race from New London, Conn., crossed the finish line at St. George today. The first boat to put in appearance was The Memory, owned by R. N. Bavier, which passed over the finish line at St. George's almost unobserved and came into the harbor of Hamilton and anchored at 9 o'clock this morning.

The Seafarer, owned by E. S. Cobb, was second across the line, and the Malabar IV, J. G. Aldes owner, third. They stopped for a time at St. Georges and came down to Hamilton this afternoon.

The Memory crossed the finish line at 3:30 o'clock this morning. And a fair wind and excellent speed, at times, although she was becalmed Saturday night.

Twenty two yachts left New London June 12 for the ocean race to Bermuda. Two Mondays had a time allowance

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

To clean white meat allow about twenty minutes for each pound and twenty minutes over.

Tartaric acid is most effective in removing stains made by permanganate of potash; it also removes fruit stains.

To whiten linen or white goods that have turned yellow lay a few drops of turpentine in the clearest water and pass goods or grass in strong sunlight.

When making mustard for a mustard sauce use tepid water, as hot water destroys the emollient properties of mustard.

If a garden hose has tiny leaks in it, patch it on outside with pliable rubber paint, and it will be good for another season.

Bacon fat is excellent for making savory sauces, and should always be kept separate on account of its strong flavor.

To make celery salt, save the leaves, wash them and dry them until crisp. Then crush to a powder and mix with an equal amount of salt.

If a brown soup or stew is too pale a color, add a few drops of caramel till the right shade is obtained.

Keep odd bits of soap and put them in a tin with holes punched in the lid; shake the tin about in a basin of hot water, which at once gives a good lather for washing up dishes.

Scrambled eggs will always be "leathery" if cooked too quickly.

Discarded grindstone shades are excellent substitutes for brads when framing pictures at home.

All saucepans and tin cooking ware should be covered with hard, and then heated in the oven for at least thirty minutes before being used for the first time. This will prevent the tins becoming rusty, and considerably lengthen their existence.

In many households where it is the custom to serve bacon for breakfast, bacon fat accumulates. This fat may be clarified and used as shortening in making biscuits and pie-crust.

CANNING SPINACH.

Spinach should be canned while it is still in its first season to be at its best. Another advantage of taking it early in the season is that dandelions may be added. These give the canned spinach a delicate, bitter flavor and are very wholesome. Pick over the spinach carefully and be sure every grain of grit is washed out. Put on in a large enameled ware preserving kettle and cover with boiling water. Let it cook rapidly until tender. Drain off the spinach and pack into glass jars as tightly as possible. Let the water in which the spinach was cooked boil up and fill the jar with the hot liquid, screwing on the covers at once. If dandelions are to be added, put them into the kettle first, as they must cook longer than the spinach. Cover with hot water and cook half an hour before adding the spinach. Greens canned in this way will preserve their color and appearance.

STAINS.

Kerosene stains can be removed with fuller's earth. Cover the stain with a thick layer of hot fuller's earth and let it remain twenty-four hours—then brush off.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

To whiten the hands take a quarter of a pint of bay rum, two ounces of glycerine, and the strained juice of a large lemon. Mix well and bottle and use a little each night, rubbing thoroughly.

Those who suffer from weak or relaxed throats would do well to include a salt and water gargle when they clean their teeth. It does not take a moment, and is well worth the trouble, as it keeps away sore throats.

If you change into a short-sleeved or sleeveless frock and suddenly find that the elbows look badly, first scrub them with a stiff little brush and soap and hot water, then rub them with vanishing cream or honey-almond lotion until the skin takes up quite a bit, then wipe off and powder.

Every woman should select that perfume that best expresses her personality. She should use the scent in her toilet waters, sachets, talcum powder, etc. Here is a recipe for old-fashioned lavender water that makes a delightful perfume for certain types of women: Essences of musk, 4 drams; essence of ambergris, 4 drams; oil of cinnamon, 10 drops; English lavender, 4 drams; oil of geranium, 3 drams; spirits of wine, 20 ounces.

A TIP FOR INVALIDS.

A friend of mine who had to endure a long illness, hit upon a novel method of solving the dragging-jacket problem. She became so tired of taking them off and putting them on, besides the discomfort when they got out of place, that she had day "night-ies" made.

The tops, as far as the waistline, were made of thick crepe de chine lined with a contrasting color. The neckline was round and just large enough for the head to slip through, for an opening would have destroyed the frock effect. An edging of swansdown or frills of lace completed these tops, which were sewn on to skirts of ordinary lingerie material.

The idea proved to be a boon and my friend always appeared dressed without the bother of donning a separate wrap.

Of course, at night-time she wore an ordinary nightdress.

FOR PORCH DECORATION.

Stitch rows of black ribbons onto the crashes to be used for decorating the summer porch. Whatever the predominating color, the rows of black ribbon will add a distinctive note. At the corners of drapes turn the ribbon to form Greek key design or triangles. A hammock for the porch is easily decorated in this manner. Figured or flowered cretonne of rose or yellow or green makes a fine background for the black ribbon, of which a narrow and inexpensive variety may be used.

BATHING HEADGEAR.

Bathing headgear is more beautiful today than ever before in the history of swimming and—fortunately—often as practical as beautiful. One type of "cap" is really a fairly wide-brimmed hat of red rubberized satin, the brim wide enough to keep off the sun. It turns smartly up in back—the frame being wired—and is rimmed with large white rubber flowers resembling camellia blossoms.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

Dresses of Persian print are being worn with draped turbans.

Coral red georgette, combined with corn lace and gold tissue ribbon, makes a very charming negligee.

A gray suede bag for sports wear has conventional hand-painted butterflies in gay colors.

DON'T NEGLECT THE PESTS.

From most every corner of the country there comes complaints against some pest or other. From the south there is the howl against the boll weevil. From the west there comes the tale of the wheat smut, from the east and other parts of the corn borer, the gipsy moth, the browntail moth. There is talk of the cattle tick, the corn worm, the peach yellows and a great long list of pests and diseases that make life miserable for those who have to contend with them.

It was only a few days ago that the need of making a united effort to eradicate the pink caterpillar was being emphasized by those who know what destruction is caused by them and the effect of pests on attempts to them. There are various counties of Canada where warnings are now being sounded and plans being made for this same purpose.

Seemingly the farmer has enough to occupy his attention without being called upon to deal with all these destructive bothersome pests. We may think that we know about that but that doesn't eliminate them. As long as they exist and it is highly desirable that they be eliminated the best is lightened by tackling it with a will and a determined purpose. Never throw on the negligence of those they bother. They do not require an invitation, much less a second one. They make merry and feast on what they like and it behooves those who are directly concerned to devise their utmost attention to removing them and preventing them. It is through such persistent, purposeful fighting that the pests declined protection and as much insecurity as possible is obtained.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

The last event of commencement week, the baccalaureate service, was held Sunday evening at 7 o'clock in the Westfield Congregational church with a large number in attendance. The address to the class was delivered by Rev. C. C. Tibbetts, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. The floral decorations and the music were features of the service.

The Sunday school class held their annual picnic at Roseland park and enjoyed the beautiful day to the utmost.

At the regular meeting of the directors of the Windham County National bank on Saturday a dividend for the second time in two consecutive years, was declared at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum to depositors in the institution's savings department. This dividend will be paid on December 1 of this year.

The action on the part of the directors is an exceedingly liberal one and it means that in addition to the regular dividend there will be a distribution to the savings department depositors of over $7,500.

It was stated at the bank Saturday that the past six months has been an exceptionally prosperous period for the institution and that the directors feel that inasmuch as the profits of the bank were derived from deposits that the depositors were justly entitled to a share of the bank's good fortune. It was also pointed out that the directors have constantly in mind the best interests of the depositors.

The savings deposits of the Windham County National bank in the current period of a few years since the savings department was instituted have reached a total of over $1,500,000. A record of which the bank is justly proud for an old established institution, now in its second century of existence, and during the world war made a splendid record in supporting liberty loan drive and since the close of the war in support of the treasury department's programme for the distribution of treasury certificates and smaller issues.

The board of directors is headed by C. Rockwell, who is president of the institution, and includes Judge W. A. Shumway, formerly of the supreme court of the state, William A. Lawton, Hosten and eminent financier, Charles A. Tillinghast, Nathaniel Wade, Nathan D. Prince, who is vice president, Obadiah Butler and Alvan Bidgood.

The boxing exhibition held in the town hall Friday evening will get approximately $600 for the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital. It was stated Sunday by Promoter Frank Barber. The exact figures had not been compiled at that time, but the indications are that the sum mentioned will be reached. This is the largest amount raised by the fund committee in Killingly and puts the town in a position where it can boast itself and make a great showing for the fund. The work of interesting fraternities and other organizations in the fund continues and before many weeks it is anticipated that many more units of $50 will have been turned in or pledged.

Flower thieves are at work in Danielson making night raids on flower gardens and rose bushes in widely separated sections of the community. These despicable thieves go about equipped with scissors and do their work thoroughly and with no small amount of nerve. On School street every bloom and every bud was cut off a number of rose bushes while in other places whole armfuls of peonies have been carried away. Even cemeteries do not escape the raids of these scandals whose activities class them with proverbial creature who would steal a penny from a dead man's eye.

Promoter Frank Barber of the Casino Amusement company said Saturday that the next card of boxing bouts to be held here will include a go between Joe Currie of New Haven and Young Looby of Bridgeport, both lightweights who have been making great names for themselves as boxers in shows staged in the Bridgeport cities of the state.

The amusement company also has taken over the management of the Danielson baseball team and will put on fast semi-pro aggregation on the field, opening here next Sunday, when the fast Second Division team will furnish the opposition. A Mooney man will be in direct charge of the Danielson team.

What is known as the lower church building at Pane Killingly has been sold to Mrs. Grace Adams. The church was built and dedicated by the Free Baptist denomination in 1851, but has not been in use for a long term of years since the consolidation of churches at East Killingly, where only the upper church is in use.

Excepting Mr. Zmintat who had a small cut under the eye no one was injured. The damage to the cars was considerable and this will be adjudged between the owners.

EDWARDS [illegible], NEW LONG ON MASONIC CH SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, June 19.—Edward Turner, aged 19 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Turner, of No. 41 Ocean Beach street, and employed as mail clerk at the Hotel Griswold, was drowned in the Thames river last evening when he fell from the launch Griswold on one of the trips of the launch from the wharf in New London. The body has not been recovered, although three searching parties dragged the river bottom last evening and another party engaged in it most of the day in using the drag on the inner dock where the fatality occurred, but without bringing the body to the surface. The young man, who had been employed at the hotel several years in carrying the mail between the New London postoffice and the hotel, was a student at Bulkeley high school and was well known. His father is proprietor of a cigar establishment and was well known in the city. The launch Griswold was backing away from the wharf at the foot of Union street when the accident occurred. Young Turner was standing on the stern of the launch and in some manner fell overboard. The launch was stopped and turned around as soon as possible but the body could not be seen. Several minutes later and without any trace of the body having been seen in the water, the launch was headed for the wharf. The boy was missed about the time the launch was turned around and it is thought he fell overboard while attempting to step over the rail from the stern to the wharf. The launch was brought to a stop and a search of several minutes was made in the hopes that the body would rise to the surface of the water and the victim rescued, but when the body failed to appear the Hotel Griswold launch, with Capt. Ruben Peterson in charge, and a telephone message was sent to the father of the youth. The father is a member of, Niagara Engine company and which company has in its equipment a pulmotor, Mr. Fisher telephoned to the fire headquarters and requested that the pulmotor be sent to the hotel wharf. The life saving device was placed in the launch and immediately returned to the hotel wharf. The life saving crew, under the direction of Capt. Peterson and Lieut. Richards, started to drag the river for the body, using the pulmotor as a precaution in case the body was found. The drag consisted of a three-pronged grapple with a line attached to one of the boat wheels.

George Barbolitch, proprietor of a shoe repairing establishment at 348 Main street, was arrested on the Bridgeport bound train Monday evening, charged with receiving goods which he had reason to believe were stolen. The liquor seized completed nineteen half pints of home made whiskey and was found when Sergeant Peck made a search of Quetique, thirteen bottles being found in another cave in the front of the road and within shouting distance of the residence. Bail was fixed at $500 for his appearance in the police court Monday morning.

Sergeant Peck has been in charge of the state police force in this district for the past two months, having been transferred here from Stamford. He succeeded Sergeant Fitzgerald who was transferred to Bridgeport.

Judge Ruddy of the 12th Washington district, Providence, was ordered Saturday afternoon to appear in the police court Monday and answer a charge of violation of the automobile law, in passing a motor vehicle on a grade while descending, without having the car under control. Ruddy is accused of operating his automobile past a trolley car on Eagle Square hill, Pawtucket, Saturday afternoon, while the car was discharging passengers. The members and guests assembled at Masonic Temple on Broadway at 6.30 and marched in a body to the Wauregan hotel where the banquet was served at 7 o'clock. Grace was said by Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, chaplain of St. James' lodge, after which the following menu was served:

JEWISH HOSPITAL ASKS ANNIVERSARY PLAN ADVICE

A nation wide referendum in which the 50,000 contributors to the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives at Denver have been asked to express their opinions as to the best means of celebrating next year, the 25th anniversary of the founding of that institution is now in progress. Contributors in this city, who are participating in this referendum are:

American Waste & Metal Co., Beckenstein & Taylor, Miss Caroline Caddon, Max Gordon & Co., Plaut-Caddon Co., Max Rabinowitz, Rosoff & Silber, Dr. P. A. Schwartz, Elkin, Smith, May Sternlieb, Sussman & Silverberg Co., Mrs. Mathew Thune.

Hundreds of interesting suggestions have already been received. One contributor suggests that every person now helping to maintain the National Jewish hospital be asked to secure another contributor. "They ought to do it," he says, "as a token of appreciation to the men and women who have devoted their lives to this work of destroying the monster tuberculosis. It would double the support it is getting and make victory certain."

Another contributor proposes that a tax of $1.00 be imposed on every Jew in this country. "As there are 3,000,000 Jews in the United States, that would bring in $3,000,000." But it has been pointed out, that the three million total Jewish population includes women and children.

"These suggestions are extremely valuable," says Mr. Manny Strauss, chairman of the subscribers' committee which is arranging for a conference at Denver on June 22nd, 1923, at which plans for the Silver Jubilee in 1924 will be decided upon."

A woman is always contrary enough to agree with a man just when he doesn't want her to.

LIMITATIONS TO ENTRANTS IN NORMAL SCHOOLS

Limitations upon the number of entrants to the state Normal schools at Danbury, New Britain and New Haven are to be put into effect in September, 1923. This situation arises out of the fact that some of the schools during the past year, have been very much over-crowded, and in addition, there are certain limitations to the number of the faculty that the state board of education may employ. It is the desire of the board to keep the classes from being unwieldy, and to use its appropriation to the best advantage.

The limitations are as follows:

For the classes entering in September, 1923:

Danbury, 140.
New Britain, 175.
New Haven, 175.

In the determination of those who may enter these schools, in addition to the territorial limitations now in effect, preference will be given to those who enter upon certificate from approved secondary schools.

Should any school have more applications from those who desire to enter upon certificate than the quota indicated for that particular school such applicants shall have the preference in any other state, normal school in which the quota may not be complete over pupils by examination.

It should be noted that the increase in the normal school enrollment for the past two years has been 134 per cent.

Hair Kept Beautifully
Wavy, Indoors or Out!

Your hair will have a prettier wave and curl than probably it has ever had if, just before doing it up, you will apply a little liquid silverine (with a brush. The waviness will look perfectly natural, and the hair will be sleek and glossy like plush. It will remain in curl the longest time, regardless of heat, wind or moisture, and you won't have to be continually fussing with loose strands or flying ends.

Liquid silverine is, of course, entirely harmless. It leaves no sticky, greasy or streaky trace. It is also an excellent dressing, keeping the hair delightfully soft and silky. A few ounces from your druggist will last for weeks. It is fine for bobbed as well as long hair.

SPECIAL TRAFFIC RULES FOR BOAT RACE DAY

Next Friday special traffic regulations for the Yale-Harvard boat race have been announced by the department of motor vehicles. For the safety of many attending in automobiles and to prevent accidents, several restrictions are to be placed on the use of the Thames river, from the New London-Groton drawbridge northward to a point two miles above the United States submarine base.

Until last year there was no systematized traffic regulation at the time of the race, but the plan worked out by the department of motor vehicles last summer and supervised by the state police had such good effects in accident prevention that it is to be repeated again this summer. Last summer not a single serious accident marred the day.

It is customary for many people to watch the race from cars parked on the highway, but the practice is dangerous without exacting traffic regulation. Parking on the west side of the highway will be allowed again this year, but drivers will be requested to bring their cars as close to the fence as possible, headed south toward New London. No parking will be permitted on the east side of the road, this space to be kept clear for moving vehicles. All traffic on the highway will be ordered at a standstill during the race. For two hours after the finish, only one-way (south-bound) traffic will be allowed.

Superintendent Robert E. Hurley has assigned a large squad of state policemen to do traffic duty on this highway during the race and for several hours before and after it. They will be instructed to allow no exception to the regulations for peddlers and hucksters, but to see that they remain in the parking place they select. Horsedrawn vehicles will be required to be in position fifteen minutes prior to the scheduled start of the race and remain in such position until the highway is clear of motor vehicles.

Cars parked on the highway in private parking places will not be permitted to enter the highway after the race until traffic on the highway is clear. Automobiles will be required to move along southward, at a reasonable speed, after the race, and to keep in their respective lines.

In promulgating these special regulations, the motor vehicle department is acting under authority of a law passed by the last session of the legislature, which gives the commissioner or his deputies power to provide for the enforcement of traffic regulations for such time or times as unusually heavy traffic conditions may be anticipated upon any highway, provided such traffic regulations shall not apply to, or be enforced in the streets of any incorporated city regularly employing a police force of more than fifteen men.

NAMES THREE ESSENTIALS IN TRAINING FOR LIFE

A profitable hour was spent at the Y. M. C. A. by a good audience Sunday afternoon in the cool and comfortable parlors. The opening part of the program included several hymns, prayer and scripture reading.

Hugh Kinder officiated at the piano and rendered vocal solos which greatly pleased the audience. Several reels of moving pictures were shown; these included a reel on West Point Military Academy, one on the Bible character Absalom and the Alaska Wilderness. All the pictures were interesting and instructive.

Secretary Mill gave a brief talk between the showing of the reels and among other things, the speaker said: "Among the lessons we can learn from the reel on West Point, is that at this noted military school there is a purpose running through all the training; there is a well thought out program intended to accompish the purpose in mind, namely to train men for leadership and service that they may be prepared for emergency and danger that may sometime threaten the welfare of our country. We were glad to note that the worship of Almighty God is not neglected at our great naval academy. It is necessary and wise to have a program sufficient for the training of men for leadership and service of a military character, it is surely as necessary or more necessary for us who profess to follow Christ to have some sort of a program for our lives that will make us most useful in the work of the Kingdom of God.

We cannot all go to special training schools, but it is easily possible for us to fit ourselves for usefulness, in service for others.

No program for a life is at all sufficient unless it includes three things, namely prayer, scripture and actual service for others. Any man who claims to follow the program of the Master and leaves these essentials out of his program will find himself lacking the things that go to make a man spiritual in life and useful in real service in the world. Among the many examples we might select to show how barren a life is which leaves out the elements that make for character and usefulness is the life of Absalom; alas, what a contrast in what he really was and what he might have been. He had a good start, but paid no heed to his opportunities, on the contrary he seemed determined to live his life independent of God and having tried to undermine and play the traitor to his own Father the King. What a pathetic picture of a disappointed Father as he received the news of his wayward son's death, as he cried, "O Absalom, my son, Absalom, my son, would God I had died for thee." What deep affection David had for his sinful son; so our Heavenly Father is sad at heart at the waywardness of His sinful children. Let us all realize that God has a purpose for every life, and let us make His program ours.

WAR DEPARTMENT PLANS TO SELL PLUM ISLAND

The war department expects to start work on the appraisal of the Plum Island reservation, with a view to its sale, either to the state of New York or to the general public within the next two weeks. The appraisal of the Fort Tyler reservation at Gardiner's Point, near Sag Harbor, L. I., will not be commenced until later in the summer.

These appraisals are the first steps to be taken by the war department in getting rid of a number of obsolete army reservations throughout the country, about 125 in all. The plan for their sale was approved by the secretary of war last year and authorized by the last congress. Under the authorization act the property is to be appraised "at a fair and reasonable market value" and then offered to the governor of the state in which it is located. By law the governor will have a six months' option on the reservation. If the state refuses to buy the army property the county or municipality will have the next chance at it.

HEBREW WOMEN FORM LEAGUE AT LEBANON

Through the untiring efforts of Miss Edith Zieman, Connecticut worker of the Council of Jewish Women's committee on farm work, a women's league was organized on Sunday evening at Lebanon. This organization is interested in sociability, home economics, health and the mutual improvement of its members. The following were elected officers: President, Mrs. Klotic; vice president, Mrs. Libitsky; secretary, Mrs. Jarnelow; treasurer, Mrs. Tashman.

INDICTED BROKER FULLER AN ELUSIVE, TIMID WITNESS

At Hearing in Bankruptcy Court Mr. Fuller Trembled and Shielded His Face With His Hands—Betrayed Fear as He Refused to Answer Questions About Alleged Higher Ups—Adhered to the Formula: "I Refuse to Answer on the Ground That It Would Tend to Incriminate and Degrade Me."—U. S. Marshal Hecht Explained That Reports of Threats Against Fuller Had Reached His Office.

New York, June 18.—Trembling apprehensively and shielding his face with his hands, Edward M. Fuller, confessed bucket shop operator, took the witness stand before Referee in Bankruptcy Coffin today and surprised the audience that had gathered by refusing to come through with his expected expose involving higher-ups in a reputed bucket shop ring.

The broker, failure of whose firm for $5,000,000 started an investigation that has badly shaken Wall street, was taken to the hearing under one of the heaviest federal guards recently turned out for a prisoner. This, United States Marshal Hecht explained, was because reports of threats against Fuller had reached him.

Throughout the hearing, at which leading questions were volleyed at him, Fuller repeated the formula, "I refuse to answer on the ground that it would tend to incriminate and degrade me." He even gave that answer to a query as to whether it were true that he had pleaded guilty of bucketing stock orders. He also refused to sign a transcript of testimony given at an earlier hearing.

Before the hearing closed, however, Fuller promised to confer with his counsel and decide whether he would swerve from his determination to keep his silence.

The next hearing was set for Monday. Fuller and his partner, William F. McGee are scheduled to be sentenced tomorrow on their plea of bucketing. It was reported, however that imposition of sentence would be postponed to give Fuller one more chance to seek leniency by making a clean breast of his knowledge of the bucketshop ring.

Before he appeared at the referee's hearing, Fuller was quizzed for two hours by United States Attorney Hayward, who had hoped to elicit important information from him. But Fuller kept the silence there, too, for the most part. While he gave some information that Mr. Hayward said might prove to be of value, he declined to tell his full story. Mr. Hayward said, unless he were promised full immunity. This bargain the federal prosecutor refused to strike.

Wall street, with one eye on the Fuller hearing and the other sharply on the lookout for additions to the string of recent brokerage failures, was decidedly nervous all day. More than 40 representative stock listed by the big board made low records for the year, falling off from 3 to 6 points, and closing with losses of 3 to 5 points.

One of the questions put to Fuller involved a $20,000 check made out to Leo Bondy, an attorney, from which the signature had been torn. Another sought light on his relations with Charles A. Stoneham, part owner of the New York Giants, and Thomas F. Foley, Tammany leader, who came to the aid of the Fuller house with loans of $147,500 shortly before the failure, all of which he refused to answer on the ground that they might tend to incriminate or degrade him.

Trial of Edward J. McManus on an indictment for attempting to bribe a witness at the last of three trials for bucketing to which Fuller was subjected before he decided to plead guilty, was postponed by General Sessions Judge Talley today until next Monday.

AMUNDSEN NOT TO MAKE POLE AIRPLANE FLIGHT

London, June 18.—Leon Amundsen, who is staying in Dover informs the Times that he received the message from his brother Roald, given out in Christiania by the Norwegian minister of defense, saying Capt. Amundsens airplane flight has been definitely abandoned.

Capt. Roald Amundsen planned to start in an airplane from Wainwright, Alaska or from Cape Barrow, 75 miles northeast, and with his aviator, Lieut. Oskar Omdal, dash above the North Pole and land in the Spitzbergen Island in the Arctic Ocean, 600 miles north of Norway.

Starting from Seattle last June in the exploration ship Maud he passed the winter at Nome leaving there in April for Wainwright, whence he expected to start his airplane, late this month. Before he left Nome he indicated he planned to take off on June 20 or as near to that date as the weather would permit. The airplane for the flight was left at Wainwright during the winter after Capt. Amundsen had quit the Maud, which at latest advices was locked in the Arctic ice pack with the probability that she was drifting slowly toward the Pole.

Preparations had been made by the Norwegian government and Capt. Amundsen's assistants to meet him in Spitzbergen or to get aid to him, if possible should mishap overtake him during the flight.

Carista was sentenced to the institution about a month ago from the Hartford court. Because of his good conduct he was made a trusty and was permitted the run of the prison grounds. He worked in the prison barber shop and when he failed to report there after his wife's visit today a search was started which revealed his escape.

VIOLENT DECLINE IN IN PRICES OF COTTON

New York, June 18.—Sharing the weakness in stocks and grain, cotton prices experienced violent declines today, led by August contracts, which plunged 200 points, or $10 a bale.

July was off 71 points, and new crop positions broke 80 to 101 points. August sold as low as 25.25. July touched 26.67 and October 24.00.

Crop news was unusually favorable, due to clear, warm weather throughout the belt, while holders of old crops were induced to unload because of predicted short time in Lancashire and the further break in exchange.

Among the heaviest sellers were Wall street interests. Mills were good buyers at the decline but speculative sentiment was distinctly bearish owing to a less favorable view of the general economic situation.

Germany Protests French "Terrorism"

Serves Notice That the French Government Will be Responsible "For Any Consequences" That May Develop.

Washington, June 18.—Germany's latest protest against French "terrorism" in the Ruhr valley, a copy of which was delivered to the state department late today, serves notice that the French government alone will be responsible "for any consequences" that may develop.

"The German government," says the note, "has repeatedly proposed that unaccounted for incidents should be investigated by international commissions. The French government, however, has failed to reply to all such suggetsions. Against such attitude and against the incessant French policy of terrorism the German government raises protest and announces to the world that the responsibility for any consequences rests alone with the French government."

The communication was addressed to Secretary Hughes and was signed by Dr. Otto Wiedfeldt, the German ambassador here. It was indicated at the state department, however, that officials regarded it as having been presented only for the information of the American government and not with a view to any intermediary action.

Addition to voicing a general protest against the French methods of administration, the note cites specific instances of alleged wrongs against the German residents of the occupied district:

"On May 2nd the merchant Schlageter on account of alleged acts of sabotage was shot in execution of a sentence rendered by the French military court, though the French government urgently had been requested to desist from rendering the situation more acute by carrying out this sentence of the court.

"On June 10 the unaccounted for death of two French soldiers was taken as a reason for capturing on the street, severely maltreating, and finally shooting to death without any kind of judicial procedure six Germans by a French patrol. As shown by the annexed record of the sworn statement of a witness, it was from the outset without question that these Germans had nothing whatever to do with the death of the two French soldiers.

"On June 11th, Carl Moeller, 19 years old, was shot by French soldiers at Recklinghausen.

"On June 13th a French military court at Mayence sentenced to death one Georges, teacher of agriculture, on account of alleged acts of sabotage."

DEPRECIATION OF MARK AROUSES GERMAN LABOR

Berlin, June 18.—(By The A. P.)—Berlin was buzzing tonight with talk impending outlaw strikes after the mark had suffered a relapse which, once during the day, saw it selling at 160,500 to the dollar among unofficial dealers.

There was scarcely a household in th city tonight where the question was not raised as to how far the German unit can or will fall. One newspaper answers the question with the simple statement: "In Russia, the dollar brings 100,000,000 soviet rubles."

The new wave of depreciation has intensified the feeling of unrest among the laborers, who have become accustomed to repeated increases in retail prices, which virtually keep pace with the exchange rate while wages follow tardily.

The trade unions have already inaugurated negotiations with Chancellor Cuno and the ministry of labor with the object of remedying the wage difficulties due to the mark's depreciation, but there is widespread fear that the rank and file of the workers, faced by still worse conditions, will get out of hand and strike.

Verwaerts declares that the slump was due largely to the considerable quantities of German currency dumped on the market today for the account of Kanaugh, Nachod and Kuhne, the New York firm, which recently went into bankruptcy and which had closed relations with some German concerns. The drop in exchange was met with a quick reflex in the stock market, where shares soared unusually.

The dollar officially was 147,630 to 148,370, as compared with Saturday's 114,712 to 115,288. Late in the afternoon the dollar reached 160,500 unofficially. The rumor was circulated in the Bourse for a time today that hereafter the mark would not be given official quotation in New York.

Maritime Dry Ruling Modified For Sailors

Foreign Sailors Homeward Bound Are to be Allowed Wine Ration After Passing the Three Mile Limit at Sea.

New York, June 18.—Antoine Bordes, general representative in this country of the French line, announced this afternoon that arrangements had been made today in Washington whereby French sailors homeward bound would be issued half a litre of wine a day after the three-mile limit had been passed.

Mr. Bordes said he had received notice to this effect from Ambassador Jusserand.

Under the new arrangement, he added, sailors would receive this wine in accordance with French law while bound to the United States, would have their supplies locked up while in port, but would get the rations again after their vessel had passed out.

The wine supply will be admitted under seal as "medicinal supplies," M. Bordes said, the French minister of health having advised the American government that a half litre of wine a day was essential to the welfare of French sailors as food.

Representatives of Italian and Spanish lines, which also are required by their national laws to supply crews with a liquor ration, said they had not yet been advised of any lifting of the barrier for them.

Dr. E. K. Sprague, chief here of the United States public health servlace, who is charged with issuing permits for importation of liquor for medicinal purposes, said he had not received any instructions to approve a half-litre daily wine ration for the French sailors.

The steamship Paris, due here next Saturday, will be the first French liner to arrive under the newly appointed modified wine ration order.

DEFINITE ANNOUNCEMENT TO BE MADE SHORTLY

Washington, June 18.—Officials here would not reveal details of the latest turn in the ship liquor situation, by which the French line expects to be enabled to bring wine rations into American waters under sea, but it was indicated lated today that some new ruling was in prospect permitting the public health service to exercise greater discretion in the admission to American jurisdiction of ship liquor stores for "medicinal" purposes.

At the French embassy it was said that the move was not regarded as constituting any actual change in the regulations recently promulgated by the treasury, and that the announcement made in New York by French line officials apparently constituted a restatement of the position taken all along by the French government which has held that wine for use as crew rations should not be barred from French ships in American waters.

There were indications that some more definite announcement might be made shortly which at least would in some degree soften the ship liquor ban as it has applied to the rationing prescribed by the laws of France and several other foreign nations.

POPULACE IN FLIGHT AS MT. ETNA ERUPTS MOLTEN ROCK

Crops and Homes Are Disappearing Under the Hissing Flood—The Main Crater Opened at Midnight Sunday With a Noise Like the Firing of a Thousand Cannon—Thousands of Tons of Rocks and Ashes Were Hurled to a Height of From 30 to 60 Feet—30,000 People Are Homeless in the Stricken Area.

Rome, June 18—(By the A. P.)—Mt. Etna, in violent eruption, is laying waste the surrounding countryside, says despatches reaching the mainland.

Great rivers of molten rock, pouring down the steep sides of the mountain from numerous fissures, are overwhelming all before them, and the inhabitants of the surrounding settlements stand in despair while crops and homes disappear under the hissing flood.

Five great cracks opened in the northeastern side of the maintain and frmo these mouths, several kilometers from the old crater, came streams of lava.

Thousands of tons of rocks and ashes were hurled to a height of from thirty to sixty feet from both the old and new craters, and the lava streams, advancing on a frontage estimated at 500 yards, laid wste the vineyards and forests in their paphs and progressed at a speed of a mile and a quarter an hour.

Small houses, left early by their occupants, long acquainted with Etna's habits, were speedily devastated. The important railway station of Castiglione was destroyed

Linguaglossa, which is some ten miles from the central crater, was surrounded by lava. Several houses in the town collapsed, but the 16,000 inhabitants got away safely. Cerro was also enveloped, and most of the villages in the neighborhood were quickly deserted. The sky was dull with smoke, and cinders fell heavily over a large area.

The roads and fields were filled with fleeing inhabitants, most of them carrying a few possessions hastily gathered or pushing wheelbarrows and hand trucks.

The sight of the first fugitives from the danger zone coming into Mesina, coupled with the terrifying subterranean noises heard there, drove hundreds of citizens of that town to the seashore for safety.

No loss of life has been reported in the despaptches received here.

ERUPTION ACCOMPANIED BY TERRIFIC RUMBLINGS

Catania, Italy, June 18—(By the A. P.)—Etna, or "the mountain of fire", as the Saracens called it, has shaken its colossal shoulders, and all its base, covering 90 miles in circumference has trembled. One of the refugees thus described the first symptoms of the vast eruption.

The earthquake was accompanied by terrifying rumblings and explosions, followed by a rain of ashes and cinders and clouds of smoke which almost choked the inhabitants.

"Then suddenly," continued the narrator, "the door of an inferno opened from the side of the volcano, and a new yawning, burning chasm began throwing out fiery torrents of incandescent lava. It seems to us the end of the world."

While the town of Linguaglossa is about 10,000 feet distant from the old crater, the eruption from the new crater was about 1,000 feet nearer, thus making the danger more imminent. Lava 30 feet deep and a mile and a half wide came rolling down on the doomed villages in its path, sweeping over orange and lemon groves, which at this time of the year clothe the mountain slopes with gold, and burning up the forests, which crackled fiercely, sending forth clouds of sparks in all directions.

The most serious loss to forestry has been the magnificent pine grove, which was the finest in Italy after the famous grove at Ravenna, the hamlets of Piccilo, Pallamelata and Ferro, were completely buried, but it is thought that all the inhabitants and cattle escaped.

Carabineers, Fascisti and national militia hastened to the scene of the catastrophe in full force with a large number of lorries and aided in transporting the inhabitants and their most valuable household goods. Even the railroad tracks were torn up to save them from being buried under the advancing stream. This afternoon the main body of lava was half a mile from Lingualossa, having been broken into various rivulets by the outstanding spur of the mountain on which the people had erected a statue of their patron saint. This spur seemed to form a kind of bulwark, checking the advance of the lava and thus some hope is entertained that Linguaiossa will yet be saved.

The new crater is vaster than that formed by the last eruption in 1919; the ashes and cinders were so abundant that they were carried by the wind as far as Messina and Reggio, to the north and Catania, Taormina and Syracuse to the south.

At night Mount Etna offers a fantastic spectable; it is like an enormous are hurled into space. A colossal mass are hurled into space. A colossal mass of smoke, made brilliantly red by the reflections from the interior of the crater, fills the entire sky, and beneath this are roaring flames.

Catania is filling with refugees, including most of the inhabitants of Linguaglossa and many from Randazzo, Bronte, Francavilla, Castiglione, Giardini and Fiume Freddo. The people of Catania are extending every hospitality to the refugees, most of whom have been received into private houses, while the municipality has put at their disposal schools, covered markets, hospitals and theatres. Food supplies are being collected, and there is not much danger of famine among the sufferers.

According to latest news the earthquake shocks continue, with increasing panic among those inhabitants who have not yet made their way out of the threatened region, but there has been a still further subdivision of the lava stream, and Linguaglossa is considered almost out of danger. The panic-stricken people are raising prayers to St. Egidio, patron saint of Linguaglossa, who according to legend, in 1864, stopped the flow of lava at the very gates of the town.

One report estimates that 30,000 people are homeless in Etna's stricken area.

CORNER STONE OF NEW PEABODY MUSEUM LAID

New Haven, June 18—Informal exercises marked the laying of the corner stone of the new Peabody Museum at Yale University today. President Angell presided and Professors Edward S. Dana, Yale '70, chairman of the museum trustees and curator of the mineralogical collection since 1874 laid the corner stone.

Professor Richard S. Lull director of the museum and curator of vertebrae paleontology spoke of the work and future plans of the museum staff. The former Peabody museum, opened in 1876, cost about $176,000. The new building will cost approximately $900,000.

"Our chief duty and pleasure today," said Mr. Dana, "is to honor the generous gentleman who gave the original sum for our museum of natural history, Mr. George Peabody; also Professor Othniel C. Marsh who collected and studied the specimens which make our collections unique.

"Mr. Peabody, born in Danvers, Mass., in 1795, a poor boy at the start, by his own efforts and sagacity amassed a large fortune, and of this he gave away about ten million dollars before his death in 1869—an enormous sum for that time. His gifts were so numerous that no attempt can be made to enumerate them here. First in magnitude and importance was the gift of one and three quarters millions for the housing of the poor of London. This generous act was so fully appreciated in England where Mr. Peabody spent the larger part of his life that Queen Victoria warmly acknowledged it and presented Mr. Peabody with a miniature of herself surrounded by diamonds and pearls. But this was only one of Mr. Peabody's generous donations. To the city of Baltimore he gave one million dollars; to the south he gave two millions and a half to assist in popular education without distinction of race or color; to many other cities and institutions he gave also most liberally. The gifts, however, which concern us today are those of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars each to Yale for a museum of natural history, and to Harvard for a museum of American archeology."

TO RESTRAIN SANITARY DISTRICT OF CHICAGO

Chicago, June 18—(By the A. LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

How Jack Rabbit Caught the Train.

"Well, you'd better not fall asleep too often," said the little bunny. "The Miller's Boy is around all day with his gun!" and he explained to the old gentleman frog why he had hopped down to see him.

"Goodness me!" exclaimed Grandaddy Bullfrog. "It's too bad. Trouble's everywhere. Here I sit all day and bother no one. Why should that pesky Miller's Boy annoy me?"

Just then a big fly came along and Granddaddy Bullfrog swallowed him before he could get away.

Pretty soon the little rabbit said goodbye and hopped along, and after a while, not so very long, he came to the railroad bridge. Just then a train came by and there at the window of a Pullman Car sat dear Uncle Lucky, Mr. Lucky Lefthindfoot, the old gentleman rabbit.

"Stop the train!" he cried and jumping up, pulled the bell cord, and of course, the train came to a stop with a big bump.

"Who pulled the bell rope?" asked the conductor, a big bulldog with a brass collar all studded with nails.

"I did," answered Uncle Lucky. "My nephew is back there at the bridge. I want him to get aboard."

But, Oh dear me! I'd hate to tell you what the angry bulldog answered, and he might have done something dreadful to dear Uncle Lucky if, all of a sudden, the kind Yellow dog Tramp, who was taking a free ride on the end of the car, hadn't run in:

"Don't touch dear Mr. Lefthindfoot,
I know him very well.
He's president of the savings bank
At Rabbitville, Clover Dell."

When the Bulldog conductor heard that, he bowed very low and wouldn't even punch Uncle Lucky's ticket. I guess he didn't want to spoil anything that belonged to the dear old gentleman rabbit.

All this gave Little Jack Rabbit time to catch up to the train and, hopping aboard, he sat down beside his dear Uncle Lucky. Then the brakeman rang the bell and away went the train as fast as it could to make up for lost time.

After a while and many a mile and many a smoke from the other passengers, the train came to Hareville, and some of the jack rabbits got out.

"We don't want to get off here," said Uncle Lucky, looking out of the window. "Let's go on till we come to the end of the line."

So they both leaned back and read a Little Jack Rabbit book which the newsboy sold them for fifty carrot cents, and in the next story, if the train isn't late I'll tell you what happened when they reached Turnip Hill.

Who pulled the bell rope? asked the conductor

Sparks' Circus Saturday.

The creator of the phrase, "Pigs is pigs," evidently has never seen the five members of the Perkins family with Sparks' circus. Had he ever seen John, Henry, Spot, Shrimp and Ginger, he would evidently have evidently have changed his mind regarding the pig being the most unintelligent animal that came over in Brother Noahs Ark. Yes, sirree! The four former pigs—all lilliputian in point of size—do all of the intricate tricks while Ginger clowns the act, and right here permit us to state that he is surely a great little creator of laughs. He is what is termed an "all-in" acter, which in stage parlance means "one who does not strictly adhere to his lines." He is permitted to roam at will in the big arena and seldom does the same thing twice in succession. This remarkable group of barnyard actors have been taught a routine of novel stunts that would put many an act of higher animal intelligence to shame. Sparks' circus seems to have specialized in trained animals this season—both wild and domestic—and prominent among them is a mixed group of South American Ramas, ponies and monkeys that have been trained to a degree of perfection that is seldom, if ever equaled under other circus canopies. Then there are the Sparks group of fighting lions under the guidance of that fearless trainer, Steve Batty, and the supreme outfit of sparkling jungle actors, the famous Capt. Somerset ferocious Bengal tigers, the Madam Dorothy group of beautiful leopards and the Captain Tiebor seals and sea lions presenting a series of new and extremely difficult feats that have never been attempted by acts of a like nature. Each member of this deep sea group excels in some portion of the act and all will be seen at the performances in Norwich on Saturday, June 28.

Seats can be secured circus day at John F. Marsh, 10 Broadway, same price as at show grounds. The Sparks circus will exhibit in the fair grounds.

Hope is a story with a series of characters and incidents that are all natural and lovable as the situations and types in Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch of blessed memory. Mrs. Penfield, who is called Penzie by her neighbors, has endeared herself to thousands of readers all over this country by her unselfish cheerfulness, and she is "Penzie" to them as well as to her foster children.

Readers of the story who are familiar with the family of the optimistic little washer-woman and the strongly marked individuals who are her friends and neighbors, will find them all in the screen version, with not a feature nor characteristic altered.

First, there is the precocious Criak, with his early developed self-reliance and his admiration for the finite accomplishments of the pugnacious Lettie. This quick-witted young person, educated in the stern school of necessity and urged on by an insatiable appetite, who knows of no other means of getting the thing she wants except to fight for it, is played by little Miriam Battista.

Thad, Uncle Jerry, Gussie Rooley and Filibuster Cassey, all will be found in the Fox picture occupying the relative importance they deserve. The remaining minor characters have been blended into the screen version with great skill by scenarist G. Marion Burton.

Bull Montana in Two Twins and the Pathe News make up the remainder of the bill.

Broadway Theatre.

Does a girl have to sell her soul to win fame on the silver screen?

A convincing negative answer to this much discussed thought is given in Souls For Sale, a Goldwyn production, written and directed by Rupert Hughes, which was enjoyed at the Broadway theatre last night.

Wholly aside, however, from tackling a big problem in a big way, this picture is just brim full of thrills, tense moments, and has a remarkable cast. It includes Eleanor Boardman, Mae Busch, Barbara La Marr, Richard Dix, Frank Mayo, Lew Cody and a score of other players who are well known in the movies.

The climax is one always to be remembered when the enormous circus tent is first wrecked by a tornado and then set afire by lightning. At this moment the villain, and Lew Cody plays the role to a fiendish degree, tries to murder Frank Mayo, who is the young hero.

Eleanor Boardman as Remember Staddon, daughter of a minister who loathes the movies as parasites, comes to the film colony expecting the worst. She learns, however, that merit alone counts. In Souls For Sale movie aspirants may learn at first hand just how a girl advances to stardom.

Larry Semon in The Counte Jumper and a News Weekly are the short subjects.

P.)—Pancho Villa, fighting dynamo from the Philippines, who was dethroned as American flyweight titleholder but a few months ago, rose to world's championship heights tonight when he knocked out Jimmy Wilde, British holder of the crown, in the seventh round of a battle that was spectacular from start to finish despite its one-sidedness. A crowd estimated by the promoters at 40,000 witnessed the second world's title to change hands at the Polo Grounds within a few weeks.

Rushing and slashing with a terrific assault that had Wilde groggy and reeling in the first round, Villa's victory was one of the most decisive in the annals of world's championship history.

Wilde was but a shell of the once great boxer who had held undisputed sway among the little men of the ring for years. Only his marvelous rameness and the heart of a master ringman enabled him to last as long as he did. He stood up under the most deadly of attacks, for six rounds, bleeding from cuts about his mouth, and cheeks, and with his right eye practically closed. Occasionally he took the offensive but his punches were feeble, and failed to shake his opponent.

But though his legs sagged at the knees and his body wavered under a devastating attack, Wilde's bulldog courage kept him in the thick of the fray, bloody and hopeless, a picture as he was.

Time after time Villa tried to measure Wilde for the count of 10, but the Britisher took his hardest punches without going down. It was but a question of how long the title holder could hang on. At the end of the sixth round, Wilde reeled into the arms of his handlers in his corner, all but out and the crowd pleaded with Referee Patsy Haley to stop the fight. But the little Welshman, nearly blinded and all but out, shook his head as his seconds urged him to quit and staggering to his feet to answer the bell for the seventh round.

Seeing victory, Villa sprang from his corner like a wildcat. He drove rights and lefts to Wilde's head as the Britisher gave ground slowly, still trying gamely but ineffectively to fight back.

The Filipino, amazed that his opponent could stand up under such an assault, drew back and then shot over a right cross as Wilde's guard dropped momentarily. The "mighty atom," fell like a log to the canvas and never quivered as he was counted out. Helpless, he was carried to his corner and there it took strenuous work for a few minutes to revive him. He was carried to his dressing room, where still dazed and blinded, he was unable to recognize his wife who rushed to him.

It was another victory for youth over age. Wilde, the 31-year-old titleholder, was attempting a comeback after two and a half years of ring idleness and he failed in the same ring where another veteran, Johnny Kilbane, recently lost his featherweight crown to Eugene Criqui of France.

Hardly had Villa's first characteristic rush subsided in the first round when it was apparent that a world's championship would change hands. The little Welshman seemed sluggish and powerless to check the little brown fighter's rushes. His eye was not clear and he seemed bewildered.

The Filipino pummeled Wilde about the ring at will in both the first and second rounds. A moment after the bell sounded for the end of the latter round and before he could check his swing, Villa shot over a wicked right to the jaw that knocked Wilde flat to the floor. He was carried to his corner.

Then, just as Villa seemed to have a knockout within reach, Wilde seemed for a few moments to find himself and carried the battle to the Filipino, weathering a terrific rain of blows with a remarkable exhibition of ring courage he forced Villa to the ropes with his aggressiveness.

In both the third and fourth, Wilde showed flashes of his once great form, but it faded almost as quickly as it appeared when Villa unleashed another spectacular attack. The stiffest of Wilde's jabs could not budge the Filipino mite. Only his fighting instinct left, Wilde managed to weather the storm of the fifth and sixth rounds, and when his seconds wanted him to throw in the sponge at the end of the sixth, he refused, declaring that he "wanted to go down fighting, like a champion."

Wilde's knockout which came after one minute and 46 seconds of the seventh round, was the second of his career. He took the count of ten in his last fight, in January 1921, at the hands of Pete Herman, former bantamweight champion, in London. But then Wilde was outweighed more than 10 pounds.

The Fight in Detail

Round One—They exchanged light swinging lefts to the face. Villa swung hard left and rights to head. Wilde did not seem to mind the blows. Wilde poked straight lefts to the face. Villa swung two rights to the head as the round closed.

Round Two—Villa staggered Wilde with a right to the jaw and savagely attacked the body. Villa hit Wilde at will. The little Filipino was staggering the champion about the ring with blows to the head. Wilde's swings went wild. Villa knocked Wilde to the canvas with a swing to the jaw after the bell had sounded and the champion was carried to his corner in a daze.

Round Three—Wilde blinked his eyes and came out ready for fight. The champion's punches lacked steam. He bled at the nose. Villa evaded the champion's blows cleverly. They exchanged hard punches to the body in a neutral corner.

Round Four—Wilde began slugging with the little brown boy. Wilde took the offensive. Wilde drove Villa to the ropes in a rush. Villa fought him back with rights and lefts to the body and the champion was staggering again, but he fought gamely. Wilde landed an avalanche of blows on the Filipino's head but Villa never blinked.

Round Five—Villa landed lefts to stomach and jaw. They engaged in a heavy exchange to the head. Wilde's sluggishness was leaving him. Wilde's right eye bled. Villa sung heavy rights to stomach and chin Wilde landed a stiff right to the jaw as the round ended.

Round Six—The game little Englishman took heavy punishment on the body. A left to the face sent Wilde staggering into a neutral corner. Villa rained blows to body. Wilde protested blows to the body. Wilde protested against Villa's backhanded blows but the referee said they were fair. Wilde staggered from left to the face. His face was covered with blood. He could hardly stand. Villa rained blows to his head. He fell into his stool when the bell sounded.

Round Seven—Wilde staggered out. He could hardly raise his hands to stem the tide of Villa's blows. He dropped suddenly. His right eye was closed. His weakness of the fight. Wilde, both eyes closed and swollen, dropped his guard. A straight inside right swung to his jaw, and he fell flat on his face unconscious. He was carried to his corner and brought to his senses after five minutes of hard work. He was barely able to lift his hand but he smiled when the crowd cheered the announcer's statement that Jimmy Wilde was the gamest loser in pugilism.

The Preliminaries.

Jack Snyder of Brooklyn received the judges' decision over Al Felder of New York in a lively four round bout, opening preliminary to the Wilde-Villa title contest. Snyder weighed 113 and Felder 113 1-2.

Harry Gordon, Philadelphia bantamweight, outboxed Carl Tremaine of Cleveland in a ten round contest in the Polo grounds tonight and received the judges' decision.

REDS BACK IN WINNING STRIDE, BEAT DODGERS

Cincinnati, June 18.—The Reds got back on their winning stride again today, defeating Brooklyn, 6 to 3. Dickerman was hit freely after the second inning. PIRATES TAKE OPENING GAME FROM BRAVES

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 18.—Pittsburgh won the opening game from Boston today due chiefly to timely hitting by Maranville and Barnhart. In the seventh inning he hit a three-bagger with the bases filled.

Catcher Gooch was injured by a foul ball and was relieved by Mattox. Score:

COMETS TRIM DUWELLS IN CLOSE GAME IN TWILIGHT LEAGUE

With Fuller, the recently acquired recruit from the Atlantics, pitching for the Duwells, they lost a close game to the Cornets Monday night at the Fairgrounds 4 to 3. The Cornets secured only four hits off Fuller, but these came at opportune times, when they meant runs.

Johnny Keenan pitched wonderful ball for the Cornets and received sterling support from his teammates, especially Tommy Simcox, who covered all the territory from left field to the plate in a demonstration of speed. Tommy was all over the lot, making brilliant stops and catches. Taken as a whole, Keenan pitched better ball than Fuller, who was wild at times and passed several men. The score:

Tonight's Game.

The game tonight will be between the Nuggets and the Harddigs and bids fair to be a game for blood. Manager Budnick of the West Side team is confident that he can take the measure of the Nuggets and has informed Manager Madden that he rates the Nuggets as a mere practice team. The two managers have been disputing for the last week over the merits of their teams and the Harddig leader is backing Eddie Siegal to hold the Nuggets. Kelly will pitch for the Nuggets.

Chicago, Ill., June 18. — Chicago bunched its hits off Behan and Hubbell, driving them off the mound, and defeated Philadelphia, 9 to 6. The batting of O'Farrell, who hit three hits, including a home run, driving in six runs, was a feature. Tierney also hit a homer with a man on. The score:

THE NEW LIGHTING SYSTEM.

That it will not be possible to get the white way established and in working order here before fall, and possibly not then, need cause no surprise. It was impossible to do anything in the way of preliminary work, except possibly the planning of such a system, until the project had received the approval of the citizens. But now that the necessary sums for the establishment of the improved lighting system and the cost of operating it have been provided for decisions can be made and prices placed for the necessary materials.

Owning its own lighting plant Norwich gets its electric lights at cost. That is an advantage over other cities which encourages the idea that Norwich should be well lighted, and that it should not be ashamed to have its lighted streets held up in comparison with those of other cities. If well lighted streets are an asset, Norwich has yet created for itself such visible assets as many another municipality has. It cannot think comparison and when that is made even by those most favorably disposed the result under present conditions is most unfavorable.

Under the new system Norwich has reason to look forward to the elimination of the dark, dingy and unattractive streets in the center of the city and to get in their place well lighted streets that will indicate a city that is alert, progressive and enterprising. Well lighted streets make a strong appeal as all know who are familiar with the systems in other cities. Norwich has decided to change its system and get in step with others and the results can be depended upon to shine for themselves as well as the Rose of New England.

TOO MUCH NOISE.

From time to time campaigns are started in behalf of less noise. It is recognized that there must be a certain amount of it in any well regulated community but there is opportunity for eliminating much of what can be classed as needless noises. Unfortunately, however, there is a difference between pointing out the noises that are needless and actually stopping them.

Nevertheless there will be much moral support given to the police commissioner of New York as he sets about the self imposed task of giving the metropolis relief from such a nuisance and from what some experts declare to be one cause of certain forms of mental trouble.

When the commissioner says that there is no need for the blowing of so many whistles, that the practice of running autos with open cutouts should not be tolerated, that flat wheels on trolley cars should get attention and that rackety street vehicles should be overcome he will find many in sympathy with his views and giving him support in whatever action seems necessary to stop them. He might have included that needless blowing of auto horns when those in the car want to attract the attention of someone a few feet or a considerable distance away, when certain persons stand at the curb and blow for cabs to come and wait on them, when a horn on a car operated from the exhaust is kept blowing as the machine sails through the streets and insists everyone must get out of the way for the display of clam and speed, and last but not least, that infernal noise from a motorcycle while being warmed up and afterward.

New York isn't the only city which has reason to want a curbing of the needless noises, and not all have been mentioned that would appeal to certain communities or certain individuals. It is not to be supposed that any movement of the kind will be 100 per cent. successful, but it will direct attention to a situation that is growing worse instead of better and whatever relief is obtained will be appreciated by the sick, the nervous and those seeking a bit of restful quiet.

OPERATION OF THE SHIPS.

An interesting position is taken by the National Merchant Marine association when it opposed government operation of merchant ships. It has been getting an expression of opinion and finds that a majority does not think that a solution of the American shipping problem is to be found in government operation.

Well that doesn't run so contrary to the sentiment repeatly expressed by the head of the shipping board. Government operation isn't being continued because it is preferred. It is being done because it has not been possible to get satisfactory bids for its ships, because it doesn't believe in giving them away and because it is not willing to sacrifice the trade routes that have been established. Chairman Lasker laid emphasis upon the fact that government operation should be carried on with the fact always in mind that the ships should be turned over to private ownership as soon as possible.

The association also believes that [illegible] should be overhauled and that [illegible] are [illegible]

A FINE RECORD.

That the president should express pride in the accomplishments of the government during the fiscal year which closes this month is in every way justified. It demonstrates not only the excellent manner in which the problem at hand was met but it speaks volumes for the budget system and the admirable manner in which the finances of the country have been handled by the treasury department.

There was no hiding the fact that the outlook was not auspicious at the opening of the year. There was faced the probability of a deficit of $323,000,000, a sum of considerable size even for the government. Because of the insistence of the president for greater economy and efficiency it was seen where several hundred million could be sliced off and they were, but that didn't overcome the prospects of a deficit. It was evident that expenses not only needed to be curtailed but that there must be an effective handling of the finances while there were hopes through the increased confidence and better business that the revenue would be increased.

Those hopes were realized. The administration's policies and the gain from internal revenue and customs have admirably met the situation, for not only has the deficit been wiped out and the expenditures kept within the year's revenue but there will be a sizeable surplus.

Such an excellent showing cannot fail to gratify. It not only augurs well for this year but it has a bearing upon that all important question of taxation which is certain to make itself felt to the advantage of the taxpayer. That it may come sooner than expected stands to the credit of the present administration.

MT. ETNA'S WORK.

It makes little difference where it is located, the news of the eruption of a volcano invariably means the display of sympathy for those whose lives and property are threatened thereby.

Time and again have the volcanoes which have caused such frightful destruction wiped out community after community, and yet there is no means of preventing a recurrence and no way of overcoming a repetition of such results. All depends upon the character of the eruption and the lay of the land. If the villages lie in the path of a lava stream there is no help. Quite the same as it destroys the farms, the vineyards and the groves does it wipe out the homes and their contents. Such a distressing situation cannot be imagined. We may have ideas of what it must be but the helplessness of the situation can appeal only to those who have been through it and know its terrors.

Volcanoes are as uncertain as the weather. No one knows when or how severe the eruptions are going to be. It is a case of building where it is believed to be the safest and taking the necessary chances. It is not a locality where those who know little about that country would be willing to cast their lot. To many people one experience would be enough and yet but for the volcanic disturbances there are many attractions in such a location for the people of Italy.

With the wiping out of sizeable towns by the lava streams Italy promises to experience once more those distressing conditions which follow in the wake of such calamities. It never finds the rest of the world lacking in sympathy or tardy in relief, though it doesn't appear as yet but what Italy is fully able to meet the present situation.

GAY COLLEGE DAYS

"The trouble with these boys who go to college," pronounced the severe man, "is that they haven't energy enough to grasp their opportunities when they come along unexpectedly——"

"Huh!" broke in the man with the round red face, who did not like him anyhow. "I guess you never heard about my nephew Bill, did you? When he gets out of college I expect him to grab just about everything in sight, and I'm hurrying up to make my pile before he cuts loose! Nothing that isn't nailed down is going to be safe when Bill is around; let me tell you!

"Why, when Bill's college down east was due to play Chicago last fall Bill and his chum, Fat Stimpson, were just about heartbroken because they wanted so to come along with the bunch, but both of them were practically busted. Their stern millionaire parents steadily refused to augment their allowances and the case was hopeless. Anybody who had any money in their frat hung onto it like the well known bulldog, because they, too, wanted to come to the big game.

"The day the crowd left Bill and Fat were standing disconsolate on the curb before their frat house discussing fate and the cruel licks of outrageous fortune and deep things like that and trying not to hear the band and the horns and the yells of those departing for the station they felt just about as cheerful as two murderers being led out of a cell for the last time. Just then up breezed the automobile of the president of the college, who is a good sport and was going west with the bunch.

"Going to the game, fellows?" he called out. 'I can take you down—hop in.'

"So they hopped. Bill said later it seemed a shame to take the president's time explaining and he always had been taught not to throw a kind deed back in an innocent giver's face. At the station Bill and Fat were engulfed in a shouting sea of rooters and before they knew it, he said, they found themselves right in the middle of one of the cars after the train drew in. Bill says he hopes he is gentleman enough not to push and shove and there simply would have been no way of removing themselves from the surge onto the train save by such drastic and hurtful methods.

"When finally they were off Bill and Fat conferred. Between them they had $2.50, and agilely slipping back and forth in the crowd, dodging the harassed conductor, they cornered the porter. I refuse to incriminate that personage, but after the conference the two boys had 50 cents left to sustain life until they reached Chicago, except for handouts.

"As for the railway fare, Fat, who is going to be a lawyer, explains that it was their college car and ran just as well with two extra as it would have done without them, so for the life of him he cannot see that the road was out anything.

"A reception committee with plenty of cars met the crowd at the Chicago depot and before they knew it Bill and Fat found themselves standing, rather breathless, in the lobby of about the most exclusive hotel in town. Bill says he really wasn't nervous because his trust in his fellow man had been wonderfully strengthened by the fast that he actually had arrived here.

"Just at that minute a lovely vision in fox and seal descended and he found himself shaking hands with the very pretty girl he had rushed so at the last prom. 'Of course, you're on for the game,' she thrilled. 'How lovely! Where are you staying?' 'Yes, isn't it lovely?' agreed Bill. 'Why—er—I can't say I'm exactly staying anywhere because we just got here this minute.'

"'Grand!' insisted the vision. 'You're coming right along with me over to our house—why, I'd feel dreadfully hurt if you refused and so would mother.'

"'I've got Fat Stimpson with me,' demurred Bill, politely.

"'Then he's to come, too,' she insisted hospitably. 'We've loads of room and it'll be so nice to have you boys with us.'

"Well, as Bill says, no true gentleman hurts a lady's feelings if he can help it and he couldn't bear to think of Cissy Pictarch just all broken up over a refusal, so he and Fat went. He said they didn't eat any more than was barely possible and sang all their college songs for Cissy's father, so they managed to quiet their consciences.

"Cissy was terribly disturbed because every one said there wasn't a ticket to be had for the game. Bill and Fat were in a cold chill for fear she'd find some with all her telephoning. Sternly refusing to have her worry, Bill and Fat left her at her ticket gate and sought another entrance presided over by one of their own men. 'We've got this far,' Bill told him with an erotic light in his eye, 'and it is beyond human belief that we can be turned back now. If we are I wouldn't give two shakes for your face after we get through with you.'

"Five minutes later Bill and Fat had on ushers' badges and were showing the populace to seats when they did not know A section from Z. So—they saw the game, you see."

"Well, they'll either own everything in their county or land in jail," admitted the severe man, much astounded. "My soul!"—Exchange.

CHILD TRAINING

UNSPOILING THE SPOILED CHILD

By Mary E. Underwood

"Joe is so awfully mischievous," his mother complained to me. "He simply takes the house apart. He meddles with the clock, every lock or screw, and we never know what terrible thing is going to happen next." To illustrate, she told me of an unpleasant experience which resulted because of Joe's mischievousness. One morning when he was alone in the room, he opened the telephone and loosened the wires.

A few hours afterward a neighbor hastily came to call for the doctor. The telephone was out of commission and no one present knew what to do. Joe was at school. At the supper table Joe's mother mentioned the incident. Joe calmly announced that he knew what was the matter with the 'phone and that he knew how to fix it. This he did. "And," concluded the mother, "I fixed Joe to help him remember not to meddle with the telephone again."

It was very plain that what this "spoiled child" needed was not punishment or suppression of his mechanical inclinations but a chance to make use of them. I started to Joe's mother that if he were my boy I would see that he owned a good set of boy's tools and some good mechanical books. Joe's parents obtained these for him and they proved to be exactly what he needed. He found great pleasure in using the tools and reading the books and before long Joe, instead of being an annoyance to everyone, became a very genuine source of pride to the household. He had a corner in the house which he called his "shop," whence emanated all kinds of original and ingenious mechanical toys.

The problem presented by the child who "cries violently until he gets what he wants" is a very common one. The child who has this habit is almost invariably a child who has learned from experience that crying hard and crying long enough is the most successful method of securing his ends. Sometimes this practice originates from what some parents claim are absolutely unavoidable circumstances; one instance being a sickly child whom the parents think should not be irritated, crossed or annoyed in any way. A child so treated quickly and naturally learns the great value to himself of showing irritation. This coddling in childhood usually develops a selfish, self-centered, self-seeking adult, who in the end pays a heavy penalty for it all by being generally disliked.

This use of crying as a business method is a comparatively simple variety of "spoiledness" to cure. If the mother goes at it whole-heartedly, seeing to it that the child never gets anything by crying for it.

The child who maliciously teases animals does it perhaps because he has never been trained or taught to treat them kindly, or because he has seen those about him careless and unkind to animals. Little children are cruel without meaning to be cruel or knowing that they are cruel. Kindness and sympathy for animals can best be developed in children through actual personal experiences. Every little child should have a chance and should be required to care for some living, growing thing, animal or plant. Only through such practices can the finer human sympathies and instincts in the child be awakened and developed.

The desire of a child to tease others is often the direct result of the child's home environment. It is among the commonest of parents' sins to tease their little children. I do not need to suggest particulars here; most of us can supply them from our own experience.

Wise and loving parents will realize that if their thoughtlessness and lack of judgment have resulted in spoiling, in order to insure the happiness and welfare of these children the work of unspoiling the spoiled child must be undertaken.

POETRY

THE PASSING OF THE SAIL.

Lake weary birds that drive to-day
Wind blown, and beat and beat their flight,
The mail craft sped their wings to meet
And pass them leaves for the world's
In lake-locked harbors their gray hulls
Are keeled in silence and profound repose;
With mast unstrung their rigging lulls
And swells, like notes on slumber roads.

Their canvas is forever furled;
Their clipper bows which cut the seas
And neared the ports of all the world
Are caked with churchyard mysteries
Their creaking timbers spend their knell;
Their hulks are doomed to slow decay!
Thus bleaching derelicts foretell
The passing of the sailing day.

On many a reed and lonely strand
Their weathered forms loom, gaunt and bare,
Like skeletons, half sunk in sand,
With fleshless ribs, protruding there.
Till dimes, like shrouds, hide them from sight.
And if with unrectified intent
And cool spray wreaths are laid at times
Upon each honored monument.
—Burt Franklin Jermain, in New York Sun.

THE NURSE'S LIFE.

The world grows better, year by year,
Because some nurse, in her little sphere
Puts on her apron, grins and sings,
And keeps on doing the same old things;
Taking the temperatures, giving the pills
To remedy mankind's various ills;
Feeding the babies, answering bells,
Being polite with a heart that rebels.

Longing for home, and all the while
Wearing the same old professional smile;
Blessing the new-born babies' first breath,
Closing the eyes that are still in death;
Taking the blame for the doctor's mistakes,
Going off duty at seven o'clock,
Tired, discouraged, ready to drop.

But called back on "special" at seventeen;
With woe in her heart that must not be seen;
Morning and evening, noon and night,
Just doing it over and hoping it's right;
When she lays down her cape and crosses the bar,
Oh, Lord, will you give her just one little star
To wear in her crown, with a uniform new,
In the city above, where the head nurse is You?
—Myrtle Borg, in Omaha Bee.

NORWICH BUILDING LOAN STARTS CAMPAIGN FOR 17th SERIE

E. O. RODIER

The Norwich Building Loan association opened a one week campaign for its 17th series of shares Monday evening with a dinner at the Wauregan house at which the 100 members present showed great enthusiasm for securing a large number of subscribers for the new series.

Swahn's orchestra played during the dinner hour and Clinton E. Lane was song leader. By courtesy of the Rotary club their song books were supplied for the use of Building Loan members.

John M. Lee, chairman of the general committee, was toastmaster, speaking with appreciation of the large number in attendance at the dinner, especially of the ten women members who were present, indicating their special interest in anything pertaining to the home. Mr. Lee explained that the plan of campaign had been to form a general committee of 15, one member from each district in the city, who are expected to interest persons in their districts in becoming shareholders in the Building Loan association.

The Building Loan association, he declared, has a large value as a city asset, and this is indicated by the fact that its membership includes the best business men and those who are interested in civic affairs.

Mr. Lee introduced Mayor Mic R. Waters, a member of the association, who responded by saying that every one knows the value of the association and its plan. The campaign will be a success, if we don't let George do it all. This is a business in which every present member of the association is interested and should do his share and back up the officers and general committee in extending the list of shareholders for the 17th series.

Toastmaster Lee introduced Ex-Mayor H. M. Larou, as the man who had been the leader of the first membership campaign four years ago, which had established the association in a firm place in the community.

Mr. Larou spoke with enthusiasm of the success that he was sure would attend the campaign for the 17th series, mentioning the steady growth that the Norwich association had enjoyed until it now had upwards of 570 shareholders, $107,000 in assets and 45 mortgage loans of which one-third were for new homes. The association offers shares at $1 and also the paid up shares at $110.50, which mature at $200 in about 13 years. It is under state supervision, which is an absolute safeguard for its members and it can confidently invite the interest and participation of every good citizen to make this 17th series one of the best in the history of the association.

In introducing the next speaker, E. O. Rodier, president of the Building Loan association, Mr. Lee told the members that they were indebted to The Bulletin for the very interesting write-up with pictures which appeared in the paper last Saturday, which, he said, was The Bulletin's contribution to the success of this campaign.

President Rodier, who is the leader of the present campaign, roused the enthusiastic interest of his hearers to work for a record breaking enrollment of shareholders for the 17th series. Today, he said, the association has many applicants who would like to build a home through the help of the Building Loan association.

But the association can only offer encouragement to the extent to which it sees the funds available. Every person in the association has the same mutual interest in seeing it grew and gain in shareholders. It has 45 mortgage loans. It could have 145. It has 15 new homes. It could have 15 more. But it is not only in building homes that its members have found the money they have saved useful. Shareholding in the Building Loan association is not a donation, but a plan of saving money. It's making somebody to save or build a home.

President Rodier mentioned one member who had said to him: "I want to tell you sir, I would never had this home if it had not been for the Norwich Building Loan association. You can go as far as you like in telling anybody what it has done for me."

President Rodier asked all his hearers to get into the harness and help in the 17th series and stated that the work must be pushed along to complete success in the week of the campaign. The state report up to the month of April has just been received on the Norwich association and shows that everything is in perfect condition. If everybody helps in this campaign the time will come when the association can take care of all applications made to it, which is the goal it wants to reach.

At the conclusion of the meeting literature and application blanks were distributed to the members to be used in the campaign for the 17th series of shareholders.

The general committee of district leaders comprises E. O. Rodier, John M. Lee, H. M. Larou, Herman Steisner, Earle M. Wood, John J. O'-Rourke, F. H. Topliff, James J. Brady, Edward Crooks, H. J. Rasdall, William C. Noyes, Albert Clayton, Thomas H. Beckley, John R. Vaughn, L. M. Crandall, John R. Tennant.

YALE '73 HAS LIST OF DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS

Former Chief Justice Samuel O. Prentice of the Connecticut Supreme Court, an eastern Connecticut man, and Gardiner Greene, of this city, an ex-judge of the Connecticut superior court, are members of the class of 1873, Yale, which will observe its 50th graduation anniversary at Yale this week.

The class of '73 had the unique distinction of furnishing a chief justice for Connecticut, in the person of Samuel O. Prentice. Judge Prentice retired three years ago when he reached the age limit. At the present time he is a state referee.

In 1892 the late Dr. Almy was given charge of the medical work of the state's military force and served during the Spanish war as a commissioned major and field surgeon of the United States Volunteers.

HARTFORD CHILD SPENT NIGHT IN COLCHESTER SWAMP

Mamie Stoklis, a Hartford child, who is not yet 3 years old, spent Sunday night sleeping on a hummock in the midst of a swamp about two miles from the center of Colchester.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Stoklis of No. 202 Walnut street, Hartford, didn't know where she was. They had gone with their four children in their new automobile on Sunday, for a visit with the Newmans of Colchester, who live at the Swan Rath farm, about two miles from Colchester.

Mamie wandered off by herself and when dusk came and Mamie had not returned Constable Riley of Colchester was notified, and he, with Constable Higgins and Lombard, searched until darkness. Then they communicated with the state police, and the state and local police, with lanterns and searchlights, searched for miles in the neighborhood until 2 o'clock Monday morning. At sunrise they resumed their search.

About 9 o'clock Monday morning Mr. Newman, at whose farm the Stoklios were visiting, was out working in his garden on a hilltop about 100 yards from his house. Suddenly he heard Mamie cry: "Mama." He called the police and they followed the cry until they found the child. She had strayed into a swamp about a quarter of a mile from the farm, and, when darkness came, had been unable to find her way out. So she picked out the highest dryest hummock she could find, lay down on it and cried herself to sleep. When she woke up Monday morning, she cried: "Mama" and kept crying it until she was heard.

COLORADO VISITOR NOT KNOWN IN CANTERBURY

According to a Denver report, Mrs. Katherine O'Connor of that city, a member of one of Colorado's richest and most influential families who is accused of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, has just been visiting in Canterbury, this state.

Telephone inquiries to Canterbury Monday failed to locate anyone who knew of Mrs. O'Connor visiting there.

The case is one that promises a prohibition scandal in Denver as it is claimed that Mrs. O'Connor befriended a priest to get liquor for a home for homeless old men, but that both she and the priest were made the victims of a group of rich society people who got the liquor.

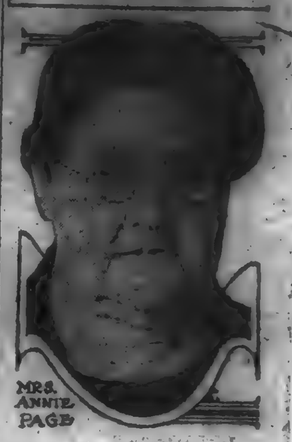
Pembroke Resident Tells About Her Remarkable Recovery



MRS. ANNIE PAGE

Mrs. Annie Page, highly esteemed resident of 3238 Main Street, Pembrook, Pa., is another who is enjoying splendid health as a result of the Tanlac treatment.

"What Tanlac has done for me," said Mrs. Page, "is too wonderful for words to express. For six or seven years I had been troubled with rheumatism in my arms. I couldn't even wash the dishes, or peel the potatoes, and, in fact, my arms were just about useless.

"My health was also bad otherwise. My stomach was all out of order, I couldn't get a good night's sleep and often had dizzy headaches. I had just about given up hope of ever getting well.

"But Tanlac helped me from the start and now I haven't a rheumatic pain or an ailment of any kind. I eat and sleep like a child, and while I am 68, I don't feel a bit over 40. Nothing is too good to say for Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Something after the manner of Poe's raven, a carrier pigeon, unannounced, gravely stalked through an entrance of Gallup Brothers and Lindner's market Monday forenoon and calmly proceeded to regale himself on a feed of scraps that was conveniently at hand. The pigeon was very evidently tired—and decidedly hungry. He was not molested by either the employes or customers and having temporarily appeased his hunger found a resting place for himself and prepared to tuck in for a sleep.

It was not a difficult matter to pick up the pigeon, which was unusually tame, and make an examination of the leg bands and their markings. A rubber band carried the inscription G-411, while a metal band on the leg was marked 1F-21 and M-14. The market people said the pigeon would be taken care of and released to continue his flight when he was fully rested. At the noon hour it was occupying the office in lonely and solemn state. The assumption is that the pigeon tired in a long distance flight. The puzzle is over its canny knowledge of where to find food. If didn't pick out a drug store, next door, or the five and ten a little farther down the street, or a hardware store across the way, it was noted. Nor the postoffice, where the best it might have done would be to read an agricultural department bulletin on how to raise grain. Getting what it wants when it wants it seems to be the specialty of this feathered beauty who might be described as a wise old bird.

Danielson's paved street in the business section are to be doled up with traffic bands like those one sees in many cities and on state highways in many sections of the country. Warden W. A. Burrows makes this announcement together with the fact that a band painting machine has been procured in order that the work may be done promptly and economically. At Reynolds and Main street where the Providence-Danielson trunk line comes into conjunction with the Worcester-New London route and at Main and Water streets, where there is another point of contact between these important routes, always heavy with traffic, bands will be painted showing the center of the highway at the intersections. Traffic lanes also will be painted across the street in the business section and if pedestrians will use these instead of cutting across the street at any point there will be less danger of accidents.

Warden Burrows watched the heavy traffic at Main and Reynolds street for a time Sunday afternoon and while he was there he saw three narrow escapes from accidents, due in a measure to cars that were parked along Main street and constituting a menace to moving traffic at that particular place.

At a session of the town court fixed for 10 o'clock this morning Joseph Milone of the Green Hollow road will appear to plead to charges that will be preferred against him following a raid at his place late Saturday night by officers who seized several quarts of wine and gin. Darbilie to represent him at this morning's hearing.

It is not likely that anyone with good hearing will be struck at grade crossings in Danielson—where there are three such crossovers—if engineers on trains running through here continue to use their locomotive whistle as they have been doing of late. The long drawn out shrieking of these whistles is trying to nerve with ragged nerves, but it can be withstood in the interest of the safety of the large numbers who are apt to be careless in driving over railroad crossings.

A special meeting voted an appropriation of $3,600 for an addition to the school at Goodyear. Only a small number attended the meeting over which F. A. Jacobs presided as moderator. The measure under consideration was explained by F. E. Cuneen, chairman of the town school committee and when it came to a vote there was unanimous support of the measure. The addition will be constructed during the vacation season, it is understood, in order that there may be more adequate accomodation for the more than 200 pupils of school age who are in Goodyear and who have had to get along in over-crowded quarters during the school year just closed.

As has been the case for several year past, Chautauqua is to be here this year on the south playgrounds of the school property on School street.

PUTNAM

Emergency call! Page the shade of General Israel Putnam. There is another lurid-eyed denizen of the wolf den made famous in history through General Putnam's heroic exploit with the wolf, now known of by every school boy in the country.

Eyes that glinted from the darkness of the den's interior as the last rays of Sunday's sun were shimmering through the trees about the Wolf Den plot led to an investigation by a Putnam professional man that resulted in establishing beyond all doubt that there is another large animal in the den—or was at that time.

This was startling, too, in view of the fact that visitors to the den during Sunday were so numerous that their names fill more than four pages of the register, which is signed by about everyone who visits there. Numbered among the visitors were many women and children, all of whom, without doubt, would have been perturbed, if not decidedly frightened, had they known of the presence within the den, where many hundreds visit each year.

It now seems definitely established that the animal was in the den during all of Sunday, yet it remained for the Putnam man to emulate the example of General Putnam and boldly investigate as to the nature of the beast and what could be done about disposing of it. Perhaps at this point in the story it may be well to write into the record that Sunday's investigator likes hunting and is familiar with firearms; also that he has his nerve with him.

Yet without a gun of any kind and with a searchlight he obtained, he boldly entered the den bent upon satisfying his own mind as to what intruder was hiding there. His investigation revealed an interesting hoax. Someone possibly intent upon furnishing a summer sensation that would rival the yearly sea serpent tales had installed a large mongrel dog—mounted in accordance with the best practices of the taxidermist's art and with glaring glass eyes. The dog has long white hair and is a large type. The Putnam man dragged it out to the mouth of the den, inspected it carefully, and being appreciative of a joke, dragged it back in, again placing it even deeper in the crevice in the rocks than where he found it.

And there to date is the story of the 20th century "wolf." Those who may not happen to read or hear about this matter and casually peer into the mouth of the den have a thrill coming to them and many and remarkable may be the tales that the stuffed dog may create before the silly season has ended. Of course the public is not informed as to who brought the dog to the den and installed it there, but this may be determined if anyone sufficiently interested thinks it worth while.

Pittsfield officers have made inquiry of Captain William J. Jarvis of the local police as to where Arthur Fournier, arrested in Springfield last week and brought back here to answer to a charge that he took an automobile, with another young man, could be found, as they desire to interview him. WESTERLY

Harvard class of 1903, on their 20th anniversary, "recessed" on the Westerly "playground" after being "let out" of two New Haven railroad noon express trains which were "tardy" almost a "half hour period" in arriving at the Westerly station. The Westerly brass band filled the waiting intervals between trains, one from the east with "New England" and from the west with the "Rest of the World" delegations. Accompanying the graduates was their own movie picture man in charge of Philip Davis, Civic Service House, Boston.

Following a short "grinding" by the movie man, headed by the Westerly band the parade was started in column of six files down Canal street, the two delegations being headed by their respective green and white banners, reaching across the column front. President Perry said that Westerly could not boast of a college or school but it was proud of its playground—its attractive sea and country side—which was here now, had been for some time and would be for years to come. He welcomed the graduates to Westerly and hoped that they would be so impressed with its attractions that they would come again not only collectively but individually, and directed them to make the best use of its offerings.

NEW LONDON CITY COUNCIL HAS SHORT MEETING

MATTERS OF MORE POLICE PROTECTION

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 18.—The city council held one of the shortest meetings it has yet participated in this evening. Furniture for the proposed schools was bought. The Putnam company of New London got part of the business in that straight back chairs will be supplied to the value of $1154.40, and the Shapiro company got $880 of the furniture. The rest went to out of town bidders. P. O. Wellington resigned from the city planning board because he does not have the time to attend to the duties. The resignation was accepted but no successor was appointed. Residents and property owners on Redden court petitioned for sidewalks along that highway, which has been in use some 40 years. The matter was referred for an estimate of the cost.

Councilman Grazan made an earnest plea for the appointment and employment of more supernumeraries. He said they were greatly needed and that on Saturday nights State street was blocked with vehicles. He also represented that East New London had but a single policeman from Federal street to the Woman's college. Mayor Murray endorsed what he said and pointed out that the city manager had promised to call a meeting of the committee that the officers might be available to the city. Councilman Grazan declared that the government had at all times reserves for the army and the navy, and he was of the opinion that the city should be likewise prepared.

Councilor Grazan called attention to the fact that West High street was without sewers and expressed his astonishment that this was true. The city manager was instructed to ascertain the cost of sewers there and report at the next meeting.

The meeting was in session less than 30 minutes and then adjourned that improvements to be recommended by the city manager might be considered. The "gallery" this evening was made up of half a dozen men, several of them interested in the matters before the meeting.

The youth, who was playing in the street, ran in front of the auto as it was about to pass. The youngster was struck by the fender and hurled to the highway. Dr. Stuart J. Lawson, who was near by, attended the child and conveyed him to his home. While no bones were broken, the youngster will feel the effects of his bruises several days, the father of the youth reported to the police that the automobile of the physician struck the child, and it was not until Griswold reported the accident to the police that it was known that the latter's car was the one that felled the youngster.

Throughout last night and today the sailors and firemen, besides owners of small craft, operated grappling irons the entire width of the river and as far up the stream as Fort Trumbull and south as far as Southwest Ledge lighthouse, without being able to locate the corpse. The current where the young man entered the water is exceptionally strong and it is believed that the body has already been carried a great distance from where the drowning occurred, if indeed it has not been carried out to sea.

George Leybovitch who was arrested Saturday for selling liquor was arraigned in the police court this forenoon and was fined $200 and sentenced to six months in the county jail. In presenting the case the prosecutor told the court that Leybovitch promised on his first conviction to go out of the liquor selling business but instead of doing so he was selling the day after he was convicted and that he had been selling ever since. His attorney admitted that he had no defense to make except that Leybovitch yielded to the temptation to make money fast. He said the man had a sickly wife and four children. Leybovitch was called to the bar of the court and there subjected to a quizzing. Judge Prince told him he deserved the extreme penalty for his pheonisees were of no value and he did not seem to realize that what he said was simply words. He instructed the prosecutor to see that Leybovitch did go out of the liquor selling business now and to have the police keep the most zealous watch upon him to be certain that he did as he had promised to do. With the understanding that such a course would be followed the jail sentence was suspended. Leybovitch paid something like $216 into the court treasury and went away with the idea that he must go out of the bootlegging business.

Go fight the film on teeth

Watch the new beauty come

Your dentist will give you a ten-day test of a new tooth cleaning method. Go learn what it means to you.

Millions now employ it. Dentists the world over now advise it. It is bringing to people of some 50 nations whiter, glossier, safer teeth.

You will want these results when you know them. And you will want all your people to have them.

Why teeth grow dingy—why decay

The greatest enemy of teeth is film—that viscous film you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. No ordinary tooth paste effectively combats it, so old-way brushing left much film intact.

Food stains, etc., discolor film. Then it forms dingy coats. Tartar is based on film. That is why teeth lose lustre.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. That is why tooth troubles have been almost universal.

Germs breed by millions in film. They, with tartar, are the chief causes of sorrow. And that is clearly common.

Two film combatants found

Dental science has long been trying to meet this situation. Two film combatants have been found. One acts to check film, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved these methods effective. Then a new-type tooth paste was created to apply them twice a day. That tooth paste is called Pepsodent. The glistening teeth you see everywhere now are due largely to its use. All the world over it is fast becoming a home dental era.

Pepsodent

Multiplies two vital factors

Pepsodent also ground away other things pronounced film destroyers and high alkalinity multiplied the starch digestants in the saliva. Thus it multiplied two great agencies which fight acid and film. Each is important in the action. Each is vital to full protection. Both are essential to the best results which any dentifrice formula can give.

Thus Pepsodent, with every use, gives manifold power to those great tooth-protecting agents in the saliva.

You may of Pepsodent is delightful. Its benefits are quick and apparent. Users will be a revelation to you, and so clearly you cannot forget them.

Prepare the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how much the tooth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Watch the other good effects.

One week will bring you a new conception of what clean teeth mean. It will show you the way to prettier teeth, to better tooth protection. Go get this tube.

Men who smoke

Tobacco stains the film on teeth. So smokers see a conspicuous change when the film-coats are removed.

Have you noted how many men show white teeth nowadays? This is one result of clean teeth and no film.

Children

Pepsodent is even more important to children than adults. Their teeth are susceptible to film attacks, and very few escape them.

Dentists advise that children use Pepsodent from the time the first tooth appears. And always before retiring.

Avoid Harmful Grit

Pepsodent combats the film and removes it without harmful scouring. Its polishing agent is far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

Some Progress Suspected.

BREAK IN PRICES OF STOCKS

New York, June 18.—Prices broke badly in today's active session of the stock market, the industrial averages establishing a new low for the year on a net loss of two points on the day.

Wall street was of a decidedly pessimistic frame of mind this morning because of the large stock exchange failure on Saturday and the failure of the market last week to respond to a number of favorable dividend developments, including the raising of the New York Central rate and the resumption of payments by the American Smelting company. The street was flooded with wild rumors questioning the solvency of several large brokerage houses but the only basis for these seemed to lie in the fact that they had been engaged in promotions with the bankrupt firm.

These rumors, combined with the weakness of several commodity prices, the cut of 35 cents a barrel in Pennsylvania crude and the increase in California production, provided the professional shorts with plenty of ammunition in their campaign for lower prices. Scores of stocks sank to new low records for the year including such favorites and U. S. Steel common at 92.5-8, Studebaker at 103 7-8, Texas company at 43, Kelly-Springfield at 49 1-2 and U. S. Rubber at 45 3-8.

Oils were in free supply all day, net losses of 1 to 3 1-2 points being established by the Pan-American issues, California Petroleum, Phillips Petroleum, Pure Oil, Sinclair, Skelly, Houston and Standard Oil of New Jersey preferred.

Baldwin dropped 4 1-8 points, American Can 6, Stewart-Warner 6 3-4 and United Fruit, 7.

Railroad shares, which previously had offered splendid resistance to selling pressure, yielded with the rest of the list today, Atchison, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Lehigh Valley, Northern Pacific, St. Louis Southwestern, Frisco preferred and Union Pacific each closing at a net loss of 2 points or more.

Call money opened at 4 1-2 per cent, advanced to 5 and thence to 5 1-2 where it closed. Demand for time and commercial paper was very quiet with no change in rates.

Foreign exchanges were heavy, French francs broke 15 points to 6.15 cents and German marks established another low record at .0006 1-4 cents. Demand sterling held fairly steady around $4.62.

BOND MARKET

New York, June 18.—Bond prices slumped throughout the list in today's relatively quiet trading on the New York stock exchange. Losses, however, generally were small. Recessions were attributed to the influence of lowering stock prices.

Active U. S. government bonds held fairly steady throughout the day, closing only slightly lower than Saturday's final figures. The tax exempt 3 1-2's and the Third Liberty 4 1-4's each advanced 2-32 of a point.

Foreign issues were depressed, the French issues particularly yielding. Lyons 6's led with a drop of one point. Mexican Foreign issues were depressed, the French issues particularly yielding. Lyons 6's led with a drop of one point. Mexican 4's also moved 1 1-4 lower.

Railroad mortgages were offered freely, losses of a point or more being recorded by Missouri Pacific General 4's, Hudson & Manhadden income 6's and Seaboard Air Line refunding 4's. Kansas City Terminal 4's gained a point.

Losses in the industrial group, while general, were small. Cerro De Pasco 8's lost three points and Pacific Telephone and Telegraph refunding 5's were off 1. Sugar company liens also were heavy. Punta Alegre 7's dropping 1 1-8 points.

Total sales (par value) were $12,457,000.

COTTON

New York, June 18.—Spot cotton quiet, middling 28.00.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 18.—Largely as a result of new crop hedging sales and because of better weather in the harvest district southwest, the wheat market underwent a decided fall in price today. Both the September delivery and December touched a new low price record for the season. Closing quotations were unsettled, 1 3-4 to 3 3-8 cents net lower, with July 107 1-8 and September 106 3-8 to 106 1-2. Corn lost 1-4@3-8 to 1-2@5-8 cent. Oats 1-8@1-4 to 1 1-4 cents and provisions 10 cents to 15 cents.

With a likelihood that the winter wheat harvest will become general within a few days, and a good sized movement of new wheat apparently at hand, the wheat market was the subject of increased selling pressure, and there was a notable dearth of support from buyers. Lower quotations at Liverpool led to further weakness in the market here, notwithstanding reports of crop damage in Kansas and despite announcement of 1,690,000 bushels decrease in the United States visible supply. Bulls failed also to get any advantage from reports of dry weather in North Dakota.

Although the wheat market at today's lowest price level showed in some cases 20 cents decline from the season's high, little power to rally developed. Bears contended that severe crop damage in Kansas was restricted to low lands. It also was asserted that dry weather has been without serious effect on a spring wheat.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat weakness, but corn was relatively firm owing to meagerness of stocks. September oats, like September wheat, touched a new low price record for the season.

In the provision market, the effect of higher quotations on hogs was clines in the value of grain.

EIGHT STATE POLICEMEN AT EACH STATION

It is the intention of the state police commission to increase the number of men in state police stations through Connecticut to an average of eight instead of five. The commission is enabled to make this increase by the act of the general assembly at the recent session in adding 30 more men to the state police force. With this addition there will be 80 men under the orders of Superintendent Hurley. Each policeman receives $5 a day, housing accommodations, two uniforms and expenses while on duty. When in the stations the men provide their own food. But when on duty through the state the expenses include meals and that duty represents 50 per cent. of their meals. There are stations in the following towns, Ridgefield, Canterbrook, Danielson, Stafford Springs, Groton and Canaan. There are a few men kept on duty in Bridgeport and the corps of men on duty in Hartford will be 13. In Thomaston, Branford and Winsted the men will live at home.

The commission will establish a system of telegraphy throughout the state which will enable the different stations to keep in touch with the men on duty outside. At the present time the communication with the outside men is kept by the use of telephones in farmer's houses. By the telegraphic system contemplated it will be easy to move more men from one place to another without loss of time and in that way secure the attendance of policemen where they are most needed in a minimum period of delay which will enhance the effiveness of their services. The commission has yet about three or four vacancies to fill on the force. They will be filled at the next meeting of the commission.

Fines in Police Court.

Four men were fined in the police court Monday morning for intoxication, three of them paying but one going to jail. A man accused of breach of the peace on complaint of his wife was put on probation until June 25.

Constable M. J. Hickey of Montville took a man to that town to be tried for breach of the peace. He was arrested Sunday and was locked up at police headquarters over night.

NORWICH TOWN

In His Spirit vs In His Steps, was the theme of the Sunday morning worship at the First Congregational church, when the pastor, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey preached from the text, Romans I.-1. Paul, a Servant of Jesus Christ.

Miss Ida Beebe was the leader at the Young People's Christian Endeavor service at 6.30 in the chapel. The topic assigned for this meeting was, What are some reforms that call for help? Luke 3:7-14.

The Congregational church night service on Thursday evening, will have for its topic the same thought that has been under discussion for the past two weeks, and is yet to be continued, namely, The Parable of Jesus.

Having purchased the Kinney place on Haywood avenue, Colchester, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Strong for 13 months residents of Norwich Town, will move the latter part of this month to their new home in Colchester, which place both have resided for many years. Although members of the First Congregational church in their home town, where they are closely identified with its several interests, Mr. and Mrs. Strong since living in Norwich Town have attended the First Congregational church here, being high regarded by members of the parish and friends.

Mrs. Strong formerly the wife of the late William Palmer has lived in Colchester practically all her life, and it was to this same house that she and Mr. Palmer at first went to housekeeping after their marriage, more than forty years ago.

For the past year, Mr. and Mrs. Strong have occupied the lower apartment at 15 Town street. Their many Colchester friends are rejoiced that they will soon again be among them.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor of 181 West Town street, Miss Martha Elizabeth Stinson and Burton Warren Jopson were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at 2.30 by Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, pastor of the First Congregational church.

Bundle day in Norwich Town was most successful. In behalf of the refugees of the Near East, ten large bags weighing 340 pounds, filled with all kinds of clothing, shoes, etc., were shipped to New York last Thursday by those in charge. The chapel on the Norwich Town green was thrown open on that day and contributions of every description of wearing apparel were packed by a company of willing workers.

Several boys from Troop No. 20, Boy Scouts, rendered valuable assistance on Wednesday afternoon, by visiting various homes about town and collecting bundles to be conveyed to the chapel.

Thomas Wilcox, landscape gardener at Idle Manse, a beautiful estate situated at Mansfield Center, was the guest on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic H. Wyant of Town street.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Peck and son Crosby Peck of Otrobando avenue, were guests of friends Sunday on a motor trip to Colchester, where they visited Mrs. Peck's sisters, Miss Annie Smith and Miss Rose Smith.

Having been the guest for a week of Mr. and Mrs. William House and Mrs. Elizabeth Kinney of Town street, Mrs. Olive Isbe returned on Sunday to her home in Bridgeport.

Mrs. George S. Beebe and her sister, Miss Lucy Standish of Scotland road, motored on Sunday to Hebron and visited their old home on Jones street.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lamb of Town street, had as callers Saturday afternoon, Dr. Lamb's relatives, Mrs. Harriet E. Brainerd and the latter's son-in-law, and daughter, Mr. and Mrs Lawrence Gremley, all of Mystic. B

HARVARD WILL CONTROL BROWN'S ON RACE DAY

Charles H. Brown of this city has completed a lease with the Harvard Athletic association for an exclusive use of his property at Brown's Crossing for the Harvard rowing crews for the entire rowing season including race day. Hundreds of people who have in former years enjoyed the use of the sightly and extensive grounds will be compelled to observe the races from other points.

The Harvard management will exclude all visitors from the grounds with the idea of keeping the crews quiet. Extensive arrangements have been completed for policing the property and no one will be admitted to the extensive grounds.
